PREFACE.

THE present edition of the consolidated Digest of Indian Law Cases is based on Mr. J. Vere Woodman's Digest (1836 to 1900) in which the subsequent Digests (1901 to 1909) by Messrs. F. G. Wigley, C. E. Grey and B. D. Bose, Barristers-at-Law, are incorporated.

The different sets of Law Reports, in which the same cases have been published, are specifically noted in the second columns of the Index of Cases forming the last volume of this work.

For the sake of brevity, all prefixes, titles, etc., e.g., Shahzada, Maharajah, Maharani, Rajah, Rani, Nawab, Moulvi, Moonshee, Kumar, Babu, Lalla, Sri, Srimutty, Musammat, etc., are generally omitted except those which are given in such forms as—"Maharajah of Vizianagram," "Rajah of Shivagunga," "Nawab Nazim of Bengal," etc.

A number of words and phrases expounded in the judgments digested, are entered in a separate list, in alphabetical order, under the heading "Words and Phrases," for easy reference.

B. D. BOSE.

ABANDONMENT OF CHILDREN.

1. ——— Penal Code, s. 317. S. 317 of the Penal Code was intended to prevent the abandonment or desertion by a parent of his or her children of tender years in such a manner that the children, not being able to take care of themselves, may run the risk of dying or being injured. In the matter of FELANI HARIANI . . . . 16 W. R. Cr. 12

2. ——— Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 317—Exposure of child—Facts constituting the offence defined—Child left in charge of a blind woman and deserted. A woman who was the mother of an illegitimate child, aged at the time about six months, left the child in charge of a blind woman in whose company she was, saying that she was going to get food and would return shortly. She went away to another village, and did not return. Apparently she never intended to return. Upon these facts it was held by BLAIR and AIKMAN, ABANDONMENT OF CHILDREN—concld.

JJ. (dissentiente Knox, J.), that the mother of the child could not properly be convicted of the offence defined by s. 317 of the Penal Code. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MIRCHIA . I. L. R. 18 All. 364

3. ——— Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 317—Exposure of child with intention to abandon—Ingredients of offence. Upon a charge being preferred against a mother, of exposure and abandonment of her child, under s. 317, Indian Penal Code, the Sessions Judge believed that the accused had left the child at a particular spot with the intention that it should be found and cared for by the owner of a neighbouring house. He acquitted her, holding that the offence charged had not been committed, inasmuch as the child had been deliberately placed where it would be (as in fact it was) found and looked after. Held, that the acquittal was wrong. The gist of the offence under s. 317 is the exposure or leaving with intention to wholly abandon; and the manner of exposing or leaving, and the consequences likely to ensue, are not essential ingredients, though they may be taken into consideration in passing sentence. 1. ——— Ground of Abatement—Causes beyond control—Act X of 1859, s. 18. The real meaning of s. 18, Act X of 1859, is that the grounds for which an abatement of rent may be claimed by a raiyat must have resulted from causes beyond his control. MUNSOOR ALI v. HARVEY . . . . . 11 W. R. 291

2. ——— Diluvion—Act X of 1859, s. 18 (Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 19)—Deduction in suit for arrears of rent. Rent of a talukh may be abated if a portion of the talukh be washed away. Independently of s. 18, Act X of 1859, a suit for abatement of rent will lie by a talukhdar on the ground that part of the talukh has been washed away. A deduction may be made on such ground in a suit for arrears of rent. AFSUROODEEN v. SHOROSHEE BALA DABEE Marsh. 558

SAVI v. OBHOY NATH BOSE 2 W. R., Act X, 27

3. ——— ——— ——— Onus probandi. The onus lies on the defendant in a suit for arrears of rent of proving to what deduction he is entitled, and of showing precisely what lands have disappeared. SAVI v. OBHOY NATH BOSE
2 W. R., Act X, 27

4. ——— Right of occupancy. A tenant, whether with or without a right of occupancy, is entitled to abatement of rent for land washed away unless precluded by the term of his kabuliat from claiming any abatement. ENAYUTOOLAH v. ELAHEBUKSH
W. R. 1864, Act X, 42

5. ——— Cause of action. When a diluvion takes place, a right of suit to obtain an abatement of jumma accrues from the time when the plaintiff is compelled to pay the rent named in his pottah without the allowance of the abatement claimed by him. BARRY v. ABDOOL ALI . . . . . W. R. 1864, Act X, 64

6. ——— Talukh created before 1790. Quœre: Whether the proprietor of a talukh created before the Permanent Settlement can claim abatement of rent on the ground of diluvion. RAM CHURN BYSACK v. LUCAS
16 W. R. 279

7. ——— Waiver of right to deduction. In a suit for arrears of rent of land adjacent to a river where defendant claims deduction on account of diluvion, and it is found that the agreement under which he holds requires measurement to be made once in three years, no account being taken of accretion or decretion occurring within that period: if the tenant has waived his right of measurement and has held over, it must be presumed that he elects to continue to hold at the same jumma as before, and his claim to deduction cannot be allowed. KRISTO KINKUR PURAMANICK v. RAMDHUN CHETTANGIA
24 W. R. 326

8. ——— Kabuliat—Sale by tenant of his tenure—Suit against purchaser. In a suit against the purchaser at an auction sale of a tenure under a kabuliat, by which it was agreed that the former tenant should not be entitled to abatement of rent on any ground and should be liable for interest at a particular rate for all arrears of rent, the defendant pleaded that as auction purchaser he was not bound by the terms of the kabuliat; that he was entitled to abatement on the ground of diluvion of portion of the demised lands, and only bound to pay interest at a reasonable rate upon arrears of rent. Held, that defendant was bound by the terms of the kabuliat entered into by his predecessor. ISHAN CHUNDER CHOWDHRY v. CHUNDER KANT ROY . . 13 C. L. R. 55

9. ——— Transferee of tenant, right of, to abatement. A tenant has a right to, and can claim an abatement of rent where the area of the land, the subject of his tenure, has been diminished by diluvion, and such right passes to a purchaser on a sale of the tenure. Prosunno Moyee Dossee v. Doya Moyee Dossee, 22 W. R. 275, distinguished. KALI PRASANNA RAI v. DHANANJAI GHOSE . I. L. R. 11 Calc. 625

10. ——— Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 18. A raiyat cannot sue for abatement of rent simply because the lands which he holds are rated higher than those of the same description and with similar advantages held by raiyats of the same class in the vicinity. Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 18, refers to an alteration of area owing to a portion of the land having gone away by diluvion or otherwise—not to some difference in the length of the measuring pole in use at different periods. BABUN MUNDLE v. SHIB KOOMAREE BURMONEE . . 21 W. R. 404

PERTAB CHUNDER BANERJEE v. OMUR SIRDAR 25 W. R. 89

Affirmed in OMUR SIRDAR v. PERTAB CHUNDER BANERJEE . . . . 25 W. R. 212

11. ——— Damage to land by cyclone —Right of under-tenant to get remission of rent. A landlord receiving remission from Government on account of damage done to his estate by a cyclone is not on that account bound to allow a remission to his under-tenants, unless he received the former on the understanding or agreement that he would allow it in turn. GOLUCK CHUNDER MYTEE v. PARBUTTY CHURN DASS 15 W. R. 167

12. ——— Land less than stated in lease—Decree apportioning rent, reserved in a mokurari lease, to the land transferred—Lessee getting possession of less land than stated in lease—Act XI of 1859, s. 54—Right of lessee to abatement of rent. A decree had determined that land leased in mokurari to a lessee, with a fixed rent thereon, were less in extent than they were specified to be in the pottahs that comprised them, the lessors not having title to the whole; and the lessee had obtained possession of the less estate:—Held, that the lessee was entitled to a corresponding abatement of the rent reserved. The revenue-paying mehal, within which were the lands subject to the mokurari, such lands being shares of mouzahs therein, was afterwards sold for arrears, under Act XI of 1859. The purchaser at that sale was sued by the mokuraridar to make good her incumbrance under s. 54 of the Act. The lease was maintained by the decree that followed, but only as to part of the shares specified in the pottahs and the lessee obtained possession of that part only. In this suit for mesne profits brought by the lessee against the purchaser's heir, who filed a cross suit against her for rent, it was held that, as the lessee had not proved that she, having had possession under the leases, had been dispossessed by the purchaser, there had not been an eviction in the proper sense of the word. But when, in her suit for possession, part only was decreed to her, and she was precluded by the result from getting a substantial part, her position was the same as if she had been evicted. She, therefore, had the same equity for an apportionment, as if she had been evicted. On the facts it was rightly found by the first Court that the leases were not taken with knowledge on the part of the lessee that the title was a doubtful one. IMAMBANDI BEGUM v. KAMLESWARI PERSHAD I. L. R. 21 Calc. 1005 L. R. 21 I. A. 118

13. ——— Error in measurement of land—Land found to be less than stated. A lease providing for enhancement if the lands are found on measurement to exceed the quantity stated in the lease, does not necessarily give the right to abate if the lands are found to be less than that stated in the lease. RAM KANT CHOWDHRY v. BINDABUN CHUNDER GOPE 2 W. R., Act X, 71

14. ——— Construction of pottah—Default of tenant. Though a pottah provided for an abatement of defendants' rent if on measurement the land was found to be less than 145 bighas, yet it was held that if defendant came to be in possession of that less quantity by his own default, and not that of the lessor, the mere fact of defendant having been in possession of less than 145 bighas would not entitle him to an abatement. SEETANATH BOSE v. SHAMCHAND MITTER 17 W. R. 418

15. ——— Raiyat having paid no rent—Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 19. A raiyat who has held his land for a few months, and paid no rent at all, cannot sue for an abatement of rent on the ground that the land, on measurement, is less than the quantity mentioned in his pottah. BROJONATH KOONDOO CHOWDRY v. UNANT RAM DUTT . . . 17 W. R. 449

16. ——— Misrepresentation as to quantitiy of land. In a suit by a patnidar to recover rent in accordance with the terms of a dar-patni lease, the defendant claimed an abatement of his patni rent on the ground that his predecessor had obtained such abatement in a previous rent suit, in which it appeared that the lessor's share was slightly less than what was described in the lease. Held, that unless the defendant could show that he had been damaged by the plaintiff's misrepresentation as to the extent of his share, he could not be relieved from his contract, in this form of suit at least. GOUR MOHUN ROY v. RADHA ROMUN SINGH . . . 21 W. R. 372

17. ——— Delay in suing. In 1859 G entered into negotiations with respect to the purchase of a certain talukh at a premium of R42,411 and an annual rent of R48,070, and in January 1860 he signed a sale-bond which contained an enumeration of the mouzahs purchased, the actual sale being completed on the 2nd June following. Until his death in December 1861 he paid the stipulated rent according to the terms of the deed. Subsequently his widow brought a suit for abatement of the rent on the ground that her husband had been misled as to the amount of rent payable by the under tenants. Held (affirming the decision of the High Court of Calcutta), that under the circumstances the suit could not be maintained. DARIMBYA DEBBYA v. NILMONEY SINGH DEO 5 C. L. R. 465

18. ——— Act X of 1859, ss. 18 and 23, cl. 3. S. 18, Act X of 1859, is not applicable to a case in which a plaintiff pat-

nidar sues for an abatement of rent, on the ground of fraud caused by the concealment from him of the existence of an intermediate tenure created by the zemindar. Cl. 3, s. 23 of that Act, is wide enough to admit of such a suit being tried by the Revenue Courts. SHOKOOR ALI v. UMOLA AHALYA 8 W. R. 504

19. ——— Denial of right to assess lands in tenure. A suit in which the plaintiff alleges that rent was wrongly assessed on him for lands not covered by his pottah, and contends that in assessing his rent these lands should be included, is not in the nature of a suit for abatement of rent. OBHOY GOBIND CHOWDHRY v. KENNY . . . . . 8 W. R. 518

20. ——— Breach of contract—Jurisdiction of Civil Court. In a suit for damages by a lessee, where the plaint shows a distinct prayer for abatement of rent, and also sets forth as the main ground of the suit a fraudulent breach of contract by misrepresentation and refusal of deduction and refund stipulated for, so much of the claim as refers to abatement is, by cl. 3, s. 23, Act X of 1859, beyond the jurisdiction of the Civil Court; but the rest of the suit is properly cognizable by such Court. NILMONY SINGH v. ISSUR CHUNDER GHOSAL . . . 9 W. R. 92

21. ——— Reduction of rent payable by landlord to Government—Act X of 1859, ss. 17 and 18. Sections 17 and 18 were passed for the benefit of the raiyat, and not for the protection of the zemindar. S. 18 was intended to give the raiyat a right to abatement in certain cases, but not to protect the zemindar from liability to make abatement in any other case. In a suit for abatement of rent on the ground that the jumma payable to Government had been reduced upon condition that the rents of the raiyats should be reduced in a like proportion: Held, that the right to abatement applies only to the case of rents of which the amount had been fixed before the jumma was reduced by Government, and not to rents fixed by pottahs or kabuliats entered into subsequently. SUKHAWATOOLLAH v. PUTHOO GOLDAR . . . . . 1 Ind. Jur. O. S. 7

22. ——— Loss of portion of land—Suit for declaration of liability to pay less rent—Equitable relief. A suit by a tenant against his original lessors for a declaration that he is not liable to pay them the whole rent payable under his pottah in consequence of a third person having, subsequently to the grant of such pottah, by suit established a right to a share of the rent, is not a suit for abatement of rent. But where, under such circumstances, the tenant is holding more land than is covered by his pottah, it is not necessary that his landlords, if desirous of enhancing the rent, should be referred to a separate suit for that purpose. The suit of the tenant being for equitable relief, the claim of the landlords must be taken into consideration in determining what relief the plaintiff is entitled to obtain. CHANDMONI DASI v. LOKE NATH CHATTERJEE . . 6 C. L. R. 494

23. ——— Land taken for public purposes—Suit to recover share of money taken as compensation for land. In a suit to recover the proportion of money paid into Court as compensation for land taken for a railway, to which the plaintiff, a dar-patnidar, may be entitled, and in which suit the zemindar and patnidar are defendants, the plaintiff cannot claim abatement of rent under Act X of 1859, s. 18, since such a claim is cognizable only in a suit instituted under that Act. GORDON STUART & CO. v. MOHATAB CHAND Marsh. 490

24. ——— Claim to deduction from rent. A claim for rent being a recurring cause of action, a tenant is entitled to set up against it for any particular year any right which he had to a deduction or abatement, notwithstanding that he has paid full rent for several previous years. When land is taken away for railway purposes, and compensation made, which is divided between the zemindar and those holding under him, any deduction of rent claimed from the zemindar must be reckoned with reference, not to the gross amount of compensation, but to the proportion which passed into his hands. MOHATAB CHAND v. CHITTRO COOMAREE BIBEE . . . 16 W. R. 201

25. ——— In a suit for rent by a zemindar against a patnidar, the latter claimed abatement of the rent on the ground that part of the land included in the patni tenure had been acquired by the Government for public purposes. The kabuliat executed by the patnidar contained a provision to the effect that, if any of the land settled should be taken up by Government for public purposes, the zemindar and the patnidar should divide and take in equal shares the compensation money, and a further provision to the effect that the patnidar should "make no objection on the score of diluvion or any other cause to pay the rent fixed or reserved by this kabuliat." Held, that the patnidar was entitled to abatement of the rent. In no case shall we be able to claim a reduction in the rent, nor will it be open to you to demand more on account of alluvion, etc." During the lease part of these lands were taken up by Government for the purpose of a railway, and compensation was paid to the lessor therefor. The ijaradar claimed to make a deduction from his rent for the land taken away from him. Held, that such a claim did not come under the meaning of the word "abatement" as used in the rent law, nor was it intended by the parties to be within the clause of the lease, but the land having been taken from the whole area demised, not by natural causes, but by vis major, the ijaradar was entitled to a deduc-

The patni was subsequently sold under Regulation VIII of 1819, with notice of the amount of the original rent, and the purchaser now sued for abatement of that rent. He did not allege that he had no notice of the proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act. Held, that the plaintiff must be presumed to have had notice of these proceedings, and that it was therefore incumbent upon him to have made inquiry regarding the position of the patni, and that under the circumstances he was not entitled to the abatement sought for. The rent payable was admitted to be at the rate of R4 per bigha. In 1881 the defendants sued the plaintiff for rent of a larger amount than the plaintiff admitted to be due, and obtained a decree on the 31st May 1881. On the 20th September 1881, the plaintiff instituted a suit, nominally under the provisions of s. 19 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, for abatement of rent, upon the ground that the defendants were seeking to charge him rent upon a larger amount of land than he actually held. The Court found that the amount of land held by the plaintiff was the amount stated by him in his plaint, and not that alleged by the defendants. Held, that the suit was rather one for the apportionment of rent after the batwara proceedings, and not one for abatement of rent. While this suit was pending in the Civil Court, the zemindar brought a suit for the rent of two years upon the full jumma ; and though the patnidar objected that his suit for abatement was pending, the Collector decreed the rent suit in full. In execution, the zemindar recovered the full rent, and the patnidar then sued for a refund of excess payments and of the interest realized by the zemindar thereon. Held, that the decree of the Revenue Court was superseded and modified by the decree of the Civil Court, which was subsequently affirmed in appeal. Held, that the plaintiff's cause of action accrued on the date on which the zemindar recovered from him rent in excess of what he was justly liable for and also interest on such excess. Held (on reference to the decree), that the abatement was to take effect from the commencement of the patni lease. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court: Held, reversing the decision of the lower Courts, that the suit abated on the death of R, his estate having derived no benefit, but, on the other hand, suffered loss, in consequence of his wrong-doing. It was contended for the plaintiff that Act XII of 1855 gave the plaintiff a right to continue his suit against the heir of R. Held, that Act XII of 1855 did not apply to a suit, such as this, brought originally against the wrong-doer himself, and only subsequently sought to be continued against his heir. Phillips v. *Homfray, L. lant's father having died during the pendency of an appeal lodged by him, a notice was served upon the appellant's two adult brothers ; but they having failed to apply within sixty days, the appellant, who was a minor, applied several months afterwards to be put on the record in his deceased father's place as his legal representative, which was done. The Assistant Judge who heard the appeal was of opinion that, in consequence of the omission on the part of the brothers of the appellant to apply, the appeal abated, and he passed an order accordingly. Held, that the application having been made by the minor son within the time limited by law, the order of abatement made by the Judge was wrong. Although the complete legal representation vested in the minor son and his two brothers, s. 366 of the Civil Procedure Code only required an application to be made by a person claiming to be the legal representative, in order to prevent an order of abatement being made. If neither of the brothers was willing to have his name placed on the record, the respondent was entitled to have them made defendants, so that they might be bound by the decree. The applicants were duly placed on the record as representatives of the deceased appellant within the time limited by art. 175A of Sch. II of the Limitation Act. After the period of limitation had elapsed, the respondents applied under ss. 366 and 582 of the Code of Civil Procedure for an order that the appeal had abated on the ground that the former petitioners had not added all the persons who had interests equal to their own in the representation. The Subordinate Judge held that the representation of the two applicants was sufficient to prevent the abatement of the appeal, but he made the other two representatives respondents on the record. He subsequently heard and allowed the appeal. On its being contended, on second appeal, that the appeal to the Subordinate Court had abated and should have been dismissed by reason of the non-joinder of the other two representatives :—Held, that though, in art. 175A of Sch. Ramlogan then directed Topsi to lodge an information in the thana to the effect that Bandhan had stolen a bag of money of Topsi's and made off with it. Topsi laid the information. The story was disbelieved, and subsequently both Ramlogan and Topsi were convicted under s. 211 of the Indian Penal Code. On the contention that there was no finding which would justify the conviction of Ramlogan, in that he did nothing but give Topsi a piece of advice: Held, that as Ramlogan was present at the time when the theft was alleged to have been committed, the story, if false, was false to Ramlogan's knowledge. That, having made Topsi lodge an information which he knew to be false, Ramlogan was guilty of abetting an offence under s. 211, Indian Penal Code. Held, also, that although the conviction was for the substantive offence, as the sentence was sustainable under ss. 211/109, and there was also no ground for supposing that the accused had been prejudiced by the conviction under s. 211, it was not necessary to alter the conviction. The accused surrendered on the 25th of June 1894, and applied for restoration of the property under the Criminal Procedure Code, s. 89, and an order was made by which the restoration of his property was refused. During the attachment an objection was raised that the property being attached did not belong to the absconders.

The police officer, on being informed by the patwari that it was their property, continued the attachment. A mob, among whom were the accused, assembled, and, by assuming a threatening attitude, prevented the police officer from further attaching the property. Held, that the conviction of accused under ss. 143, 183 of the Penal Code was right. Held, further, that even supposing the property attached was not the property of the absconders, the rightful owner had no right of private defence of his property, inasmuch as the evidence showed that the police officer was acting in good faith under colour of his office; and, even supposing the order of attachment might not have been properly made, that would in itself be no sufficient ground for such a defence. Held, also, that where the attaching police officer sent a person to inform the Magistrate of what had taken place, and the Magistrate thereupon sent the Senior Inspector to the spot to take up the case, instructing him to take the statement of the attaching police officer as the first information of the occurrence and to send it in to him (the Magistrate), so that proceedings might be taken, it could not be said that the proceedings in the case had not been properly instituted. 1. ——— Corroboration, necessity for —Setting aside conviction for error in law. The uncorroborated testimony of one or more accomplice or accomplices is sufficient in law to support a conviction. The evidence of accomplices should not be left to the jury without such directions and observations from the Judge as the circumstances of the case may require, pointing out to them the danger of trusting to such evidence when it is not corroborated by other evidence. The omission to do so is an error in law in the summing up by the Judge, and is, on appeal, a ground for setting aside the conviction, when the Appellate Court thinks that the prisoner has been prejudiced by such omission, and that there has been a failure of justice. The rule in s. 114 of the Evidence Act coincides with the rule observed in England, that though the evidence of an accomplice should be carefully scanned and received with caution, and may be treated as unworthy of credit, yet if the jury or the Court credits the evidence, a conviction proceeding upon it is not illegal. 16. ——— Evidence of accomplices—Act I of 1872, ss. 114 (b), 133. The law in India, as expressed in s. 133 and s. 114 of the Evidence Act, and which is in no respect different from the law of England on the subject, is that a conviction based on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is not illegal, that is, it is not unlawful; but experience shows that it is unsafe and hence it is the practice of the Judges, both in England and in India, when sitting alone, to guard their minds carefully against acting upon such evidence when uncorroborated, and when trying a case with a jury, to warn the jury that such a course is unsafe. There must be some corroboration independent of the accomplice, or of a co-confessing prisoner, to show that the party accused was actually engaged directly in the commission of the crime charged against him. A second accomplice does not improve the position of the first, and, if there are two, it is necessary that both should be corroborated. The accomplice must be corroborated not only as to one but as to all of the persons affected by the evidence, and corroboration of his evidence as to one prisoner does not entitle his evidence against another to be accepted without corroboration. R. v. Webb, 6 C. & P. 595, R. v. Dyke, 8 C. & P. 261, R. v. Addis, 6 C. & P. 388, and R. v. Wilkes, 7 C. & P. 272, referred to. The possession of property taken from a murdered person is not adequate corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice charging such person in possession with participation in the murder, though it would, no doubt, be corroboration of evidence that the prisoner participated in a robbery, or that he had dishonestly received stolen property. In the trial of R, S, and M upon a charge of murder, the evidence for the prosecution consisted of (i) the confession of P, who was jointly tried with them for the same offence; (ii) the evidence of an accomplice; (iii) the evidence of witnesses who deposed to the discovery in R's house of property belonging to the deceased: and (iv) the evidence of witnesses who deposed that, on the day when the deceased was last seen alive, all the prisoners were seen together near the place where the body was afterwards found. Held, that there was no sufficient corroboration of the statements of the accomplice or of the co-confessing prisoner P. 18. ——— Compulsion as an excuse for crime—Pretence as evidence of common intention—Fear of instant death—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) ss. 34 and 94—Evidence Act (I of 1872) s. 133—Power of High Court in Revision. The accused, who were classers employed in the Revenue Survey Department, were charged, under s. 161 of the Penal Code, with taking bribes from the raiyats of certain villages. The only evidence against the accused was that of persons who had either subscribed to the bribes or collected subscriptions or paid the money to the accused. They stated that they had offered the bribes, because the classers had threatened to raise the assessment, cut down the hedges, and erect new boundary-marks. As regards this evidence, the trying Magistrate remarked that, even if all the witnesses for the prosecution were treated as accomplices, it was open to him to convict on their uncorroborated testimony, as "there was inherent truth in their statements, and circumstances existed which negatived the presumption of a conspiracy, and evidenced signs of truthfulness." The Magistrate was also of opinion that there was a distinction between accomplices who volunteered to assist in the receipt of illegal gratifications and those who assisted under compulsion. In the opinion of the Magistrate, the witnesses in the present case belonged to the latter class, and there was no reason to disbelieve their evidence. He therefore convicted the accused under s. 161 of the Penal Code, and sentenced them to rigorous imprisonment and fine:—Held (SCOTT, J., dissenting), that the convictions were illegal, there being no evidence to corroborate the witnesses for the prosecution, all of whom were accomplices. Held, also, (SCOTT, J., dissenting), that there was such error in the consideration by the Magistrate of the evidence as to prejudice the accused, and such a failure of justice as to justify the Court in revision in setting aside the convictions. Per CURIAM: The limits of the application of the doctrine of necessity as an excuse for an act otherwise criminal are those prescribed in s. 94 of the Penal Code. Therefore, witnesses who, in order to avoid pecuniary injury or personal molestation, had offered or given bribes to a public servant were abettors of the offence of taking an illegal gratification, and their evidence should be treated as that of accomplices. By the law both of India and England the evidence of an accomplice is admissible, and a conviction is not illegal because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice (s. 133 of the Evidence Act, I of 1872). But the presumption that an accomplice is unworthy of credit, unless corroborated in material particulars, has become a rule of practice of almost universal application. Per SCOTT, J. There may be, however, cases of an exceptional character in which the accomplice evidence alone convinces a Judge, and if he acts on that conviction, with the character of the witnesses clearly present in his mind, a Revisional Court ought not to interfere, in the absence of other circumstances showing a want of judicial discretion. Per JARDINE, J. The mere circumstances of a person being present on a lawful occasion does not raise a presumption of that person's complicity in an offence then committed so as to make s. 34 of the Penal Code

26. ——— Evidence Act (I of 1872) ss. 114 and 133—Public Officer, offer of bribe to—Corroboration. A person who offers a bribe to a public officer is an accomplice. Per BIRDWOOD, J. A conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice. Such evidence, being admissible, furnishes as legal a basis for a conviction as any other evidence which is admissible. The omission to follow the established rule of practice as to the corroboration of such evidence does not constitute an error in law ; but where the evidence of an accomplice is not of a character to warrant the refusal of a Court to apply to it the maxim enunciated in illustration (b) of s. 114 of the Evidence Act, a conviction based on such evidence alone would be of questionable propriety. Per JARDINE, J. Sections 114 and 133 of the Evidence Act are to be read together, and neither section is to be ignored in the exercise of judicial discretion. The illustration (b) of s. 114—"that the Court may presume that an accomplice is unworthy of credit, unless he is corroborated in material particulars"—is, however, the rule, and when it is departed from, the Court should show, or it should appear that the circumstances justify, such departure. Accordingly where a conviction was basedsolely on the evidence

30. ——— Corroboration, necessity for—Corroboration of evidence given by accomplice—Accomplice by implication or in a secondary sense—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 114 and 133—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 381. Ordinarily speaking, the evidence of an accomplice should be corroborated in material particulars. At the same time, the amount of criminality is a matter for consideration. When a person is only an accomplice by implication or in a secondary sense, his evidence does not require the same amount of corroboration as that of the person who is an actual participator with the principal offender. In dealing with the question what amount of corroboration is required in the case of testimony given by an accomplice, the Courts must exercise careful discrimination, and look at the surrounding circumstances in order to arrive at a conclusion whether the facts deposed to by the person alleged to be an accomplice are borne out by these circumstances, or whether the circumstances are of such a nature that the evidence purporting to be given by the alleged accomplice should be supported in essential and material particulars by evidence aliunde as to the facts deposed to by that accomplice. 31. ——— Evidence—Bribery—Evidence Act (I of 1872) ss. 114, Ill. (b), and 133—Indian Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) s. 161. It is generally unsafe to convict a person on the evidence of accomplices unless corroborated in material particulars. But, in considering whether this general maxim does or does not apply to a particular case, it must be remembered that all persons coming technically within the category of accomplices cannot be treated as on precisely the same footing: the nature of the offence and the circumstances in which the accomplices make their statements must always be considered. No general rule on the subject can be laid down. A person who gives bribes is an accomplice of the person who receives them; and, while it is usually unsafe to convict a public servant of receiving bribes on the uncorroborated evidence of persons who say they have given them, the question as to the amount of corroboration depends on the circumstances of each case. 1. ——— Power of Court to order Account instead of referring party to separate suit. In a suit by the heirs of a deceased Mahomedan to recover from his widow landed property of which she claims to be in possession as absolute owner under a mokurari deed alleged to have been executed in lieu of her dower, where she wholly fails to prove execution of the deed, it is competent to the Court, instead of referring the plaintiffs to a separate suit, to direct an account to be taken of the mesne profits received by the widow and of the amount due to her on account of dower with a view to the settlement of the claims of both parties. The mere fact that in a redemption suit the mortgagee in possession did not give details of the sums either in the course of the trial or in his written statement is not sufficient to deprive him of his right, seeing that those details can be gone into after the redemption decree providing for an account has been passed. 6. ——— Settled accounts—Settlement of accounts by passing a promissory note—No fraud or coercion used—Waiving of examination of accounts by plaintiff of his free will—Accounts not to be re-opened. The plaintiff and defendant had mutual dealings and accounts. In settling these accounts, the plaintiff of his own free will and accord and without any fraud practised or undue influence exerted by the defendant waived his right to an examination of the accounts for the purpose of ascertaining the balance due and agreed to treat a gross sum of Rs. 3,556 as due from him and accordingly executed a promissory note for that amount. The plaintiff then sued for a declaration that the promissory note in question was fraudulent and had been obtained from him by undue influence, and was good only to the extent of such sum as might be found due on taking an account between the parties. At the trial, the allegations of fraud and undue influence on the part of the defendant and want of free consent on the part of the plaintiff were held not proved. Held, that, on the principle enunciated by the Privy Council in McKeller v. Wallace, 5 Moo. I. A. 372, the promissory note must be treated either as the result of a settled account or a settlement by compromise. In either case, it could not be re-opened. The plaintiff claimed as heir and not under the will. Held, that she was only entitled to accounts for six years preceding the suit as she took no interest in the property under the will, and the executors were not trustees for her and the property did not vest in them for any specific purpose in her favour. Such a suit is not a suit for the purpose of following such property in the hands of the executors and trustees. AYESHABAI v. EBRAHIM (1908) . I. L. R. 32 Bom. 364 that accounts had been settled, but commenced action on the footing that no accounts had been rendered: Held, that the plaintiff could not after the suit had been tried out on that footing be allowed to convert the case into one for re-opening of accounts on the ground of errors contained therein. Procedure in account suits indicated, and that adopted in the present case condemned. In a suit for account, if liability to account is denied by the defendant, the question of accountability is to be tried first. It is only after an adverse decision against the defendant upon this question that he may be called upon to render an account. Hari Nath Rai v. Krishna Kumar Bakshi, I. L. II, Arts. 89, 116, 132. Where a gomastha hypothecated certain properties to secure moneys that might be found due from him upon taking accounts: Held, that a suit by the principal, in which he not only asked for accounts, but also sought to enforce the charge created in his favour, fell within Art. 182 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act and was not governed by either Art. 89 or Art. 116 of the said schedule. Semble: A suit by a principal against his agent for accounts is not "a suit for compensation for breach of a contract in writing registered," when the contract between the parties is embodied in a registered document, and Art. 89 and not Art. 116 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act should govern such a suit. Motilal Bose v. Amin Chand Chattopadhya, 1 C. L. J. 211, doubted. Ashgar Ali Khan v. *Khurshed Ali Khan, I. L. 11. ——— Decree—No specific direction as to accounts in the decree—Court cannot direct accounts to be taken before the Commissioner when parties have arrived at an agreement after the decree—Appeal against such an order—Practice. A decree of the High Court on the Original Side contemplated an account being taken between the parties but it was silent on the question as to how that account was to be taken, whether by the Commissioner or by some person selected by both the parties. The Court of first instance decided that where a direction as to account ought to have been incorporated in a decree when passed it was competent to the Court at any stage of proceedings to direct necessary inquiries or accounts to be made or taken. Held, on appeal, that as some account was taken under the decree by a person appointed jointly by the parties, a new agreement had come into existence superseding the decree, and the Court was not competent to make the order appealed against. 12. ——— Accounts, suit for—Plaintiff in possession of account papers, if may be allowed to sue—Relief in equity to be granted only to honest plaintiff. A plaintiff who is in possession of the account papers cannot be allowed to sue the defendant for accounts, unless he produces the papers in Court with a succinct statement of what they contain and what the balance is, whether in his favour or against him. Until he does that it is impossible to call upon a defendant to answer a charge of misappropriation of money or being liable to the estate on the accounts. 1. ——— Contract to purchase land—Necessity to sell land for arrears. Where an estate was sold under a contract at 10½ years' purchase of the net annual rent collections, and various sums of money were left in deposit with the vendee to meet various charges which were expected to arise, and the amount of these charges was regulated by the vendor's expectations, and formed portions of the stipulations of which the contract was composed, but the net annual collections eventually fell short of those expectations: Held, that the agreement at the root of the contract, viz., that the property was taken at 10½ years' purchase, should govern the whole transaction, and that the accounts between the parties should be adjusted accordingly. In a suit to have an account taken of what was payable, and had been paid, by either of the two parties in pursuance of the contract, and to have a decree for any balance found to be due to either—the contract distinctly providing for an adjustment after the net annual collection, and containing a stipulation that any injury accruing to the interests of one party by any laches in the payment of rent by the other, should form a ground for compensation :—Held, that it was not necessary that the land should be sold up for arrears in default of payment before the account could be adjusted ; and that even a decree, taken out by the zemindars against defendant for the rents of the land in suit, did not affect plaintiff's claim to the money owing under the contract. 1. ——— Suit on account stated—Hypothecation bond for the amount due—Obligor presenting registration of bond by denying execution. The plaintiff sued (i) for registration of a hypothecation-bond executed by the defendant : (ii) in the alternative, for recovery of the amount of the bond upon an account stated. The defendant denied execution of the bond, and that she had had any dealings or stated any account with the plaintiff. The Courts below disallowed the first claim as barred by limitation, and disallowed the second on the ground that the bond had effected a novation of the contract implied by the statement of accounts :—Held, that this decision was wrong, and that the plaintiff was entitled to sue upon the account stated. Sardar Kuar v. *Chandrawati, I. 2. ——— Cause of action—Evidence of the existing debt—Fresh contract—Interest—Damdupat. In June 1883 the plaintiff's father advanced a loan to the defendant at compound interest. The account of this debt with interest was adjusted and signed from time to time. In June 1893 it was adjusted and signed, the amount found due being R28-8-0. In February 1896 the plaintiff sued to recover this amount. Held, that the account (ruzukhata) was merely an acknowledgment of the debt and of the correctness of the calculation of interest upon it. Held, also, that the plaintiff was not entitled to treat the amount so found due as principal and to claim interest upon it. The debt to be sued on was the amount originally advanced, and the interest recoverable was limited by that amount according to the rule of damdupat. By English law an account stated could be sued on as implying a promise to pay. Formerly this was the rule also in Bombay (as shown by the earlier cases), where the account was signed. If, however, it was not signed, it could not be sued on as a new contract. The Indian Limitation Act required an acknowledgment or admission of a debt to be signed : and an admission not made in the manner prescribed by law (i.e., signed) for the purpose of preventing a debt from becoming barred does not imply a promise to pay it if it should become barred. According, however, to the later authorities, an account stated or adjusted (ruzukhata) cannot be sued on as a fresh contract. The suit must be brought in respect of the original transaction, and the subsequent stated or adjusted accounts are only evidence of the debt arising from them, and serve to prevent the operation of the Act of Limitation. 4. ——— Mahomedan widow in possession for dower—Suit not framed for an account. In a suit by the only brother and heir-at-law of a Mahomedan of the Shiah sect, claiming the whole of the deceased's estate, and for mesne profits, the issues raised by the pleadings were, first, whether a marriage had taken place between the deceased and the party in possession, who claimed to be his widow, and, secondly, the validity of a deed of dower executed by the deceased in her favour. The Courts in India found these issues in favour of the widow, and dismissed the suit. The Judicial Committee, in affirming the Court's decrees upon these points, held further that although the estate of the husband was hypothecated for the dower, yet as the heir-at-law would be entitled to the residue after satisfying the widow's claim, he was by right entitled to an account, but as the plaint was so framed as not to admit of an account being taken, the appeal was affirmed, without prejudice to a suit being brought for administration of the deceased's estate upon the footing of the marriage and deed of dower being admitted in the suit. No application for an account can be made after the death of the minor, though his representatives are entitled to an account. When the minor is dead, the District Court is no longer capable of representing him under the Act. 7. ——— Landlord and tenant—*Rent set off against advances—Suit for rent—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Arts. 85, 89, Sch. The defendant, under instructions from the plaintiffs, paid from time to time Government revenue, cesses, expenses of litigation, etc., on their behalf, and used to set off those sums against the rent due to them under the lease; no sum of money by way of advance or otherwise from the plaintiffs ever came into the hands of the defendant. After the expiry of the lease, the plaintiffs instituted this suit against the defendant for an account:—Held, that the suit for an account was not maintainable; the relationship between the parties as created by the lease was simply that of landlord and tenant, and the only relief which the plaintiffs could have properly asked for was a decree for rent, if any was still due. The plaint also alleged that, in consequence of the defendant's negligence and mismanagement, the plaintiff believed that he had sustained a loss of R5,000, and prayed for a decree for this sum. Held, that no decree could be made for the sums mentioned, or any other sum, until an account had been taken and the amount due from the defendant ascertained. Method to be followed on taking accounts in the mofussil stated. If the taking of accounts by the Judge would occasion a waste of public time, he should resort to the provisions of ss. 394 and 395 of the Civil Procedure Code, and furnish the Commissioner with such part of the proceedings and such detailed instructions as may appear necessary. 9. ——— Suit by principal for an account—Object of a decree for an account as distinguished from a decree made upon the hearing—Costs. A continued agency, or employment as dewan, for the purpose of drawing and expending the money of a principal, resulted in a suit by the latter, who alleged that more had been drawn than expended for him, and that a specific sum, or balance, stood against the defendant, having been misappropriated by him. The principal claimed also any further sum that might be proved to be payable. The dewan having denied the receipt of the money and any kind of accountability, it was found against him that the relation of agency existed between the parties. But, on the ground that it was impossible to decide, upon the evidence adduced at the hearing, how much of the principal's money was unaccounted for, though the attempt had been made to prove a balance due, the Appellate Court dismissed the suit:—Held, that such a suit was essentially one for an account, and that the Courts below should have followed the regular course, viz., to order an account to be taken of the defendant's dealings with plaintiff's money. This was without any expression of opinion that, in a suit for an account, an issue may not be raised, at the outset, so clearly as to be ready for decision. But the general rule being the other way, this suit was an example of it. HURRINATH RAI v. KRISHNA KUMAR BAKSHI

IV, Form 157—Form of keeping accounts of joint property in mofussil.* In a suit for an account by a principal against his agent, the plaintiff should ask in his plaint that a proper account may be taken. If the defendant is found liable to render such account for a certain period, the Court should make an interlocutory decree declaring that he is so liable, and direct him to file an account in Court within a fixed period. This decree may be enforced under s. 260 of the Civil Procedure Code. After an account has been filed, the plaintiff should be allowed reasonable time to examine it. If the objections are numerous, the procedure prescribed by ss. 394 and 395 and Form 157 of Sch. IV to the Code should be followed. When the accounts have been taken, the Court must determine the amount due, and the final decree should be for the payment of this amount, and also, if necessary, for the delivery of any papers, vouchers, or other documents which have come into the hands of the agent in the course of his employment. It was alleged in the plaint that M "left India in 1858, and has since resided in Scotland ; that at the time he left he was, and still is, possessed of extensive property in the Province of Bengal, chiefly landed property ;" that T and afterwards T and F were his agents and managers. In the month of April 1865, deceased transmitted to the plaintiff the agency accounts of himself and his firm with the plaintiff in continuation of the accounts rendered by him as mentioned in the preceding paragraph, brought down to the end of February 1865 ; and again in May 1865, the deceased transmitted the continuation of the said account brought down to the 30th April preceding, being the date of the termination of the agency. The said accounts rendered have been examined by the plaintiff, who verily believes that the true balance now due to him thereon exceeds R1,00,000, without including interest." ing accounts—Principles which regulate a Court of Equity in opening stated and settled accounts. Accounts of long standing and great complication of a mercantile firm at Calcutta, one of the partners of which afterwards acted as agent in England, involving charges for agency and partnership transactions, were mutually agreed to be investigated and closed. After long negotiations and discussion respecting some of the charges, an agreement was come to, the parties agreeing to strike the general balance at a given sum, reserving one item of the account, amounting to a considerable sum, for future investigation. This reserved item was subsequently settled by the acceptance of a bill of exchange for a lesser amount, as such reserved item, if re-opened, would have disarranged the settled general account. The bill of exchange was dishonoured and an action brought to recover the amount. A bill was then filed for an injunction for the cancelment of the bill of exchange, and praying that the accounts so settled might be opened. The Supreme Court at Calcutta held that the reserved item being left open was evidence that the account was not finally closed, and decreed the accounts to be opened, referring the cause to the Master. On appeal, held by the Judicial Committee (reversing such decree, and dismissing the bill with costs), that the transaction amounted to an adjustment of the general account between the parties, subject to the reserved item which was subsequently settled, and that the accounts so settled and closed could not, in the absence of fraud, be re-opened. 1. NEW FORMATION OF ALLUVIAL LAND.

(a) GENERALLY.

1. ——— Beng. Reg. XI of 1825. Bengal Regulation XI of 1825 regards accreted land as the right of that party to whose estate the land is an accretion, and does not divide the accreted land according to the extent of each party's loss by diluvion. The mere fact of a lessee having received a malikana allowance from the Collector during the period of his temporary lease will not bar the right to a permanent settlement of any party who, under the law of alluvion, is entitled to settlement. 4. ——— s. 4, cl. 1—Alluvion—Title to land acquired by gradual accretion—Limitation. Cl. 1 of s. 4 of Regulation XI of 1825 does not depend for its operation on the capability of identification of the accreted lands. Whether the accreted lands are capable of identification or not, the clause applies where the lands have been gained by gradual accession by the recession of a river. In the case of gradual accretions, the ordinary rule of acquisition by prescription does not apply, but each accretion as it occurs comes under the same title as that upon which the land to which it is made is held. such intermediate land belongs to the land-owner on the side of the channel which at any given time is fordable. Held (without deciding whether such a custom falls within s. 2, Regulation XI of 1825), that no clear and definite usage had been established. A fluctuating boundary between zillas does not necessarily affect the rights of landed riparian proprietors. An ikrarnama between two zamindars as to the mode of determining the boundaries of their estates, in the event of changes in the channel of river, cannot bind persons claiming under one with whom the perpetual settlement was subsequently made as to the lands in his possession, he being a stranger to that ikrarnama. Prior to the renewal of that settlement in 1857, the river, which was to the south of the plaintiff's zamindari in Tirhoot, and to the north of the defendant's in Sarun, has suddenly and so completely changed its course that the lands in suit, which were formerly on the north side of the river, were capable of being identified on the south side of it, and were, notwithstanding, summarily settled with the defendant, who obtained possession of them:—Held, that in the absence of proof of usage within the meaning of s. 2 of the Regulation, that the river should be not merely the boundary between the two districts of Tirhoot and Sarun, but also the boundary between the two zamindaries, the plaintiffs were entitled to the lands. 30. ——— Changes in a river's channel—Rights of riparian owners—Accretion by alluvion distinguished—Beng. Reg. XI of 1825, s. 4, cls. 1 and 5. The current of a river changing its course encroached upon either bank alternately detaching land from one bank, followed by the effect that land was added to the opposite bank. The river having taken a course more to the east than its original one, the area of the defendant's village (till then only partly on the western side, inasmuch as the river traversed it throughout) appeared entirely on the west bank. Some land of the plaintiff's village on the eastern side was also carried away, the river continuing its eastward tendency. By another change, in the opposite direction, the current resumed its original channel more towards the west with the effect that the piece of land that had belonged to the defendant's village, and had been submerged when on the east bank during the above change in the river's course, emerged in the end on its former site on the east bank. This restored land was identifiable. But the owner of the village on the east bank now claimed it as an accretion by alluvion to his property, which it adjoined. Held, that the right of property remained in the original owner, the defendant. The owner of the adjoining village on the eastern side could not make out a title to it either under cl. 1, under cl. 5, of s. 4 of Regulation XI of 1825, or in virtue of any known principle. There was no proof of a custom giving this land to him on account of contiguity, and there had been no gain to him from the river by alluvion within the meaning of the Regulation. The first rule established by s. 4, Regulation XI of 1825, does not apparently contemplate land other than that commonly known as alluvion, viz., land gained by gradual and imperceptible accretion, the incrementum latens of the civil law. There is no express provision in the Regulation for the case of land which has been lost to the original proprietor by the encroachment of the sea or a river, and which, after diluviation, reappears on the recession of the sea or river, and there is nothing to take away or destroy the original proprietor's right; such a case is to be determined by the general principles of equity and justice under the 5th rule contained in s. 4. 52. ——— Formation and attachment to estate of island chur formed in river. Defendants were owners, by purchase from Government, of a property called Oojan Chur, which in its origin was an island thrown up in the bed of the river. Plaintiff was owner of the original estate of K, of which a great part was cut off by a stream channel of the river; but afterwards re-appeared, and for some time lay in contiguity with defendant's chur, and separated from plaintiff's estate by the said channel. By the gradual filling up of the sota reformation became more and more extensive until the land again lay in contact with the plaintiff's estate. As it has been clearly ascertained by boundary marks and measurements that the reformation took place on the original site of the plaintiff's land, the right of the plaintiff as by re-formation was held to be preferable to that of the defendants, which rested upon accretion. Both parties were riparian proprietors of adjoining estates on both banks of the river Godavari. The plaintiff claimed the right to newly-formed land, in midstream, which she alleged to have been formed by accretion upon an already existing lanka or alluvial island which belonged to her. there were concurrent findings against her. The accretion had taken place upon a lanka owned, not by her, but by the Government, and higher up stream than hers:—Held, that the plaintiff must abide by the ground of claim which she had presented below, that being that the new land was formed by gradual accretions to definite and visible portions of a lanka previously belonging to her. This she could not now vary to a claim founded on an ownership of the river-bed on the strength of her being zamindar and owner of the land on both banks of the river, without either issue or evidence directed to such subaqueous ownership. In 1876, K was entirely submerged by the Ganges. On the 20th September 1877, F's share was sold in execution of a decree and the auction-purchaser was put in possession. In the sale certificate the village M was named, without specific mention of either of the two mehals, and the Government revenue referred to was the amount assessed on U only. Subsequently the river receded, and part of K was again left dry, and it was treated by the revenue authorities as having accreted by alluvion to U, in the proprietary possession of the auction purchaser. Held, that this view was erroneous, inasmuch as, before the auction-sale of 20th September 1877, the two properties were separate, being separately assessed with revenue, and the incidents of the ownership of one could not affect the ownership of the other; and since there was no such rule of law as would justify the proposition that simply because two mehals are contiguous, and one of them is liable to be submerged, therefore it is nothing more or less, than an accretion to the other. Held, also, that inasmuch as the mehal K, being at the time under water, was not attached in execution of the decree against F, and was not advertized for sale, and the revenue assessed thereon was not referred to in the sale-proceedings, and the sale certificate contained no reference to it as the property sold, the sale of the 20th September 1877 did not convey any rights to the auction-purchaser in respect of K. Mahadeo Dubey v. *Bhola Nath Dichit, I. In that case it was held that, though a Hindu widow cannot alienate property acquired by her out of funds derived from her husband, yet where she held under a deed which conveyed the property to her to enjoy for her lifetime and to incur all needful expenses, she was entitled to invest sums out of the income for the benefit of her daughter and granddaughter in the purchase of immoveable property for their maintenance. A Magistrate acts injudiciously in proceeding with a case after he has been credibly informed, by a telegram from one of the accused to his mukhtear, that a rule for the transfer of the case from his file and for stay of further proceedings had been granted by the High Court. Ratnessari Persad Narayan Sing and another v. Empress 2 C. W. N. 198, referred to. It is illegal to examine an additional witness in the absence of the accused: and a Magistrate, by refusing an application for postponement of a case, further proceedings in which have been stayed by an order of the High Court, to enable the accused to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution with a view to obtain, before commitment, a cancellation of the charges framed against him, and to enable the Magistrate to receive the orders of the High Court, and by taking such precipitate action in the matter, shows his bias against the accused. It is desirable to transfer a case from the file of a Magistrate who, on an application made by the accused under s. 526, cl. (8), for stay of proceedings pending an application to the High Court for transfer, immediately cancelled their bail and committed them to custody. In the matter of SURYA NARAIN SINGH (1900) . 5 C. But long possession coupled with the acquiescence of the landlord in the raising of pucca buildings and his continuing to receive rent from the raiyat after such buildings have been raised may justify the inference that a tenant has a permanent right. Zeshwada Bai v. *Ram Chandra Takaram, I. But there are circumstances which may go far to weaken the force of that inference and one of these is the circumstance of the landlord's interest being let out in ijara at the time the building was raised. The absence of objection on the part of the landlord to the erecting of a permanent building by a tenant during the continuance of an ijara of the landlord's interest should not be construed as amounting to acquiescence such as might be inferred where the landlord is in direct receipt of rent from the tenant. Beni Madhub Banerjee v. *Joy Kissen Mookerjee, 12 W. and land, which could, therefore, be seized and sold in execution of a decree against B, and that the purchaser who had obtained possession could not be dispossessed at the suit of the plaintiff. DURGAPRASAD MISSER v. BRINDABUN SOOKUL 7 B. L. R. 159 : 15 W. R. 274

24. ——— Land let for building purposes. A landlord who allows his lessee to invest capital in erecting buildings on lands let for cultivation, and raises no objection for a considerable number of years, will not be allowed to disturb the holding. The fact of buildings having been permitted without objection to stand on lands for a considerable number of years is primâ facie proof that the land had been originally leased for building purposes. BRAJA NATH KUNDU CHOWDRY v. STEWART. 8 B. L. R. Ap. 51 : 16 W. R. 216

25. ——— Permissive occupancy—Right of possession as against purchaser. Where the defendant had been in possession of land for more than thirty years, and had without objection built upon the land : Held, that he had not by such permissive occupancy acquired a right to retain possession when served without notice to quit by a purchaser of the land. ADDAITA CHARAN DEY v. PETER DAS 13 B. L. R. 417 note : 17 W. R. 383

26. ——— Law of landlord and tenant as to building by the tenant on the land—Acquiescence of lessor—Equitable estoppel preventing ejectment—Onus of proof. A lessor is not restrained by any rule of equity from bringing a suit to evict a tenant, the term of whose lease has expired merely by reason of that tenant's having erected permanent structures on the land leased, such building having been within the knowledge of the lessor, and there not having been any interference on his part to prevent it. To raise an equitable estoppel against the lessor precluding him from suing, on the determination of the tenancy, for possession, the tenant should show facts sufficient to justify the legal inference that the lessor has by plain implication contracted that the right of tenancy should be changed into a right of permanent occupancy. Acquiescence by the lessor in this case was a legal inference to be drawn from such facts as were found. The onus of establishing sufficient cause for an equitable estoppel had not been discharged by the tenant in this instance. Ramsden v. *Dyson, L. R. 1 E. & I. 27. ——— Erection of buildings by tenant—Acquiescence of landlord. To resist ejectment by a tenant on the ground that the tenancy is a permanent one, and that the landlord stood by and permitted him (the tenant) to erect pucca buildings on the land in the belief that the said tenancy was a permanent one, it is incumbent on the tenant to show that in erecting the buildings he was acting under an honest belief that he had a permanent right in the land, and the landlord, knowing that he (the tenants) was acting under such belief, stood by and allowed him to go on with the construction of the buildings. Beni Ram v. *Kundan Lal, I. 28. ——— Delay—Erection of buildings—Laches—Limitation. The plea of acquiescence is applicable to suits for which a fixed term of limitation is prescribed by law, but mere delay in enforcing a right does not constitute acquiescence. The defendants took possession of, and erected buildings on, land which they knew belonged to the plaintiff and they had no claim to, without applying to the plaintiff for consent. The plaintiff abstained from suing to eject them for one or two years, knowing that the defendants were building on the land : Held, under the circumstances, that the delay in the institution of the suit was not sufficient to deprive the plaintiff of her right to relief. UDA BEGUM v. IMAM-UD-DIN . I. L. R. 1 All. 82

29. ——— Standing by and seeing building erected—Right to removal. In a case in which plaintiffs sought to recover possession of some land on which defendants had constructed a pucca house and in which defendants pleaded that they had purchased a building right from a third party with whom plaintiffs had settled the land, and that plaintiffs had seen them building the house in question without offering any objections : Held, that having stood by and allowed defendants to build the house, plaintiffs could not sue to have the house removed. LALA GOPEE CHAND v. LIAKUT HOSSEIN . . . . 25 W. R. 211

30. ——— Absence of protest—Suit for removal of building—Obstruction to right-of-way. In a suit for the removal of a building which the defendants had erected, and which was an obstruction to the plaintiffs' right to use a courtyard adjoining their residences, it appeared that the land on which the building stood did not belong to either party, but that all the inhabitants of the mohulla had from time immemorial exercised a right-of-way over it to and from their houses :—Held, that there was no principle of acquiescence involved in the case, inasmuch as there was no evidence that the plaintiffs had given their actual consent to the building, and the only evidence of their acquiescence could be that they did not immediately protest, and the defendants must have known that they were building upon a courtyard which their neighbours had a right to use. Uda Begum v. *Imam-ud-din, I. 31. ——— Cultivating land without objection.—Acquiescence—Owner standing by and seeing person without title cultivate land—Fraud and deceit. In order to prevent the owner of land who is charged with standing by and allowing another person, who believes he has a good title thereto, to enter on the land and spend money in improving it, from recovering possession thereof, fraud and deceit on the part of the owner must be clearly proved. Dann v. Spurrier, 7 Vesey 251, and Rama v. *Jan Mahomed, 3 B. 32. ——— Cultivation and changing character of land—Landlord and tenant—Injunction—Delay. The tenant of an agricultural holding planted his jote with mango trees to the knowledge, but without the consent, of his landlord, thus changing the character of the land. More than three years afterwards the landlord sued for a mandatory injunction to have the mango trees removed. Held, that having stood by for more than three years and allowed the tenant to spend his labour and capital upon the land without taking any action in the matter, the landlord was not entitled to a mandatory injunction. 33. ——— Malabar kanam—Change in character of land—Passive acquiescence of landlord—Estoppel—Compensation for improvements by tenant. Land was demised on kanam wet for cultivation. The demisee changed the character of the holding by making various improvements which were held to be inconsistent with the purpose for which the land was demised. On a finding that the landlord had stood by while the character of the holding was being changed and had thereby caused a belief that the change had his approval : Held, on second appeal, that the demisee was entitled to compensation for his improvements on redemption of the kanam. Ramsden v. *Dyson, L. second defendant. The second defendant alleged a sale to him by the first defendant, and a subsequent sale to the third defendant, and denied the plaintiff's title. The Munsif gave a decree for the plaintiff; on appeal, the Principal Sudder Amin, finding that the plaintiff knew of the sale and treating the knowledge as evidence of acquiescence in it, reversed the decision of the Munsif. Held, reversing the decision of the Principal Sudder Amin, that such knowledge would not make the plaintiff a party to the sale by the first defendant, so as to bar his right to recover the land for which he sued in ejectment. A person who seeks to bar one who is primâ facie the legal owner, by evidence of ratification, or of facts cogent enough to prove one not a formal to be a substantial party, must make and prove such a case, for he is one who seeks to displace a legal title. 36. ——— Ratification of transfer of property. A solehnama in 1847, to which were parties the sons, daughters and widow of a deceased Mahomedan proprietor, transferred the shares of two minor daughters, in their father's estate, having been executed by their mother, the widow, on their behalf. On the question whether the solehnama should be set aside, at the instance of the two daughters, on the ground of its having been beyond their mother's power to bind them, and of the instruments having been prejudicial to their interests, the evidence showed that it had been acted on and followed by possession, and that the daughters had, after attaining full age, allowed a lengthened period of twenty years to elapse without taking proceedings to dispute it:—Held, that if the mother had exceeded her powers in executing the solehnama on their behalf, and if they might, at one time, have had it set aside, their long acquiescence was sufficient to show ratification of the transaction; and the solehnama was upheld. 37. ——— Presumption from allowing grant of certificate unopposed. In a rival claim between two Hindu widows of a deceased husband the plaintiff sued as mother and guardian of her infant son to establish his right as son and heir of his father. One defence, among others, was that the son was not legitimate, and could not inherit. His legitimacy was established, but the incapacity to inherit was sought to be proved by the plaintiff's virtual acknowledgment of the defendant's title as heiress on the grant to the defendant unopposed by the plaintiff of a certificate of heirship. Held, that it was not the practice of the Courts in India or of the Privy Council to press against either an infant or a Hindu female a presumption by acquiescence in a rival claim from the mere non-contestation for a limited time of an adverse title. 38. ——— Not objecting to sale—Suit to recover property sold—Presumption of consent.

ACQUIESCENCE—contd.

Where R. K, acting ostensibly as recognized agent and manager of the family, sold part of the family property to the ancestors of the defendants, and the plaintiff, who was then of age, did not object to the sale, but afterwards sued to set aside the sale as to his share, on the ground that the property had been purchased by R K with the joint funds while the plaintiff was a minor, and that it was sold by him without authority, the first Court gave him a decree for a one-fourth share of the property. R K appealed, but the other defendants did not appeal. The Judge, assuming the lower Court's finding to be correct, held, that as the plaintiff, who was of age at the time, did not object to the sale, he could not recover possession of property sold by R K as the recognized agent and manager. Held, also, that R K could not found any right upon the presumption of plaintiff's consent, however such presumption might have availed the other defendants, purchasers from R K, who had not appealed. The mortgagee brought a suit upon the mortgage joining as defendants the three brothers, the two younger of whom were sued by the mortgagor as their guardian ad litem. A decree for the plaintiff having been passed, the lands were sold in execution. The two younger brothers now sued to have the decree and the sale set aside as regards them, on the ground that they had both been of age at the date of the suit, and accordingly had been wrongly impleaded. It appeared that the elder plaintiff was in fact a major at the date of the previous suit, but he was aware prior to the sale, of the suit and the execution proceedings, and still allowed his elder brother to conduct the defence and proceedings on his behalf:—Held, that both plaintiffs were bound by the decree in the former suit; RAMACHARI v. DURAISAMI PILLAI

42. ——— Sending agent to settle rent—Acquiescence in rate. The sending of an agent by a tenant to settle with the landlord as to the rent is not a virtual acquiescence in the rate of rent demanded. STALKART v. LALLA BHUBRUT LALL . . . W. R. 1864, Act X, 115

43. ——— Receipt of rent in lieu of grant of land. In a suit to recover possession of land it appeared that the defendant's father had in 1801 obtained possession on a lease of 280 bighas from the Government of Kulabo, and that the plaintiffs' father had in 1806 obtained a grant of 10 unspecified bighas of the same land, but that he never asked to have them marked out and given to him in specie, and that he, and subsequently his sons, the plaintiffs, were content up to the year 1856 to receive from the defendant's family in respect of their grant the rent formerly paid by them to the Government for the same. The District Court reversed the decree of the Munsif, and threw out the claim to recover possession of the land on the ground that the plaintiffs must be taken after such a lapse of time to have acquiesced in the arrangement that a yearly rent was to be received without any particular land being marked out as theirs. Held, that it was competent for the Assistant Judge to come to that conclusion under the circumstances, and that there was no ground for saying that there was any error of law in his decision, which was accordingly affirmed. ACT—contd.

——— 1847—IX—contd.

1. ——— Beng. Reg. XI of 1825—Chur in navigable river, right of Government to. Act IX of 1847 does not alter the state of the law under Regulation XI of 1825, but merely lays down a procedure. There is nothing in Act IX of 1847 to prevent the Government from taking possession of a chur, after it has silted up, if the chur be one that the Government would be entitled to under Regulation XI of 1825. BUDRUNNISSA CHOWDHRAIN v. PROSUNNO KUMAR BOSE
6 B. L. R. F. B. 255 : 14 W. R. F. B. 25

2. ——— Right of Suit—Effect of an order for additional assessment. Certain land, which formed part of the plaintiff's zamindari, became, on its re-formation after submergence by a change in the course of the river Ganges, attached to the zamindari of J, and it being found so attached an additional jumma was, after proceedings taken by the revenue authorities under Act IX of 1847, assessed against J in respect of it. In a suit in the Civil Court brought by the plaintiff against the Government, J, and L, an ijaradar under J, to recover possession of the land: Held, that the suit was not barred by the proceedings under Act IX of 1847. S. 6 of that Act makes the orders passed under its provisions final only against the zemindar, not against third persons. Nor would s. 9 bar the suit; the words of that section do not necessarily extend to forbidding a suit brought to recover property which the Government or its officers may be instrumental in keeping away from the rightful owner. Held, on the facts, that the Government had not, by the proceedings under Act IX of 1847, or otherwise, interfered with the plaintiff's rights so as to entitle him to relief against it in the present suit. COLLECTOR OF MOORSHEDABAD v. ROY DHUNPUT SINGH BAHADOOR
15 B. L. R. 49 : 23 W. R. 38

3. ——— Settlement by Revenue authorities. Although a settlement made by the Revenue authorities under Act IX of 1847 is final, the fact of such settlement will not preclude a proprietor from seeking in a Civil Court to establish his right to the lands so settled. NARAIN CHUNDER v. TAYLER I. L. R. 4 Calc. 103 : 3 C. L. R. 151

4. ——— Rights of third parties. Act IX of 1847 does not affect any question between the person in possession and any person other than the Government. KALIPRASAD MAZUMDAR v. COLLECTOR OF MYMENSINGH
6 B. L. R. 261 note : 13 W. R. 366

5. ——— Right of assessment by Government of accreted lands—Beng. Reg. XI of 1825. Act IX of 1847 refers to re-surveys of zamindari lands which the Government as such may cause to be made at certain intervals, and to assessment consequent on the changes ascertained by such re-surveys, but does not interfere with the rights of the Government, in its capacity of zamindar, to take possession of, and assess all accretions to, its own

4 W. R. 59

6. ——— Land added to revenue-paying estate. The words "land has been added to any estate paying revenue directly to Government" in Act IX of 1847, s. 6, mean added to the estate as it is depicted on the survey map. RAM JEWAN SINGH v. COLLECTOR OF SHAHABAD

18 W. R. 64

7. ——— ss. 6, 9—Assessment of accreted land—Order of Board of Revenue when final under s. 6 of Act IX of 1847. The effect of the words "whose order thereupon shall be final" in s. 6 of Act IX of 1847 is, that where an assessment has been made under s. 6, which has been approved by the Board of Revenue, such assessment is final and cannot be called in question in a civil suit; but the fact of an assessment having been made is no bar to a suit raising the question whether the Board of Revenue had jurisdiction under s. 6 of the Act to assess. Act IX of 1847 applies to land reformed on the site of a permanently-settled estate. SARAT SUNDARI DEBI v. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL
I. L. R. 11 Calc. 784

8. ——— Assessment of reformed land after diluviation—Act IX of 1847, ss. 1, 6, 7, and 9, effect of—Jurisdiction of Board of Revenue, its extent—Civil Court, power of—Survey maps, their evidentiary value. Whereon inspection of a survey map, and after its comparison with a former thak map, the Board of Revenue assessed certain land as alluvial increment, which, however, the Civil Court, in a suit against the order of the Board, found upon further evidence to be a re-formation on the original site of a permanently-settled estate, in respect whereof the plaintiff had all along paid revenue without abatement:—Held, that the land was not liable to fresh assessment under the provisions of s. 6 of Act IX of 1847, nor was the comparison of the two maps by the Revenue Officer conclusive on the question of addition to the estate. Sarat Sundari Debi v. The Secretary of State, I. L. R., 11 Calc., 784, partially overruled.—Held, also, (MITTER, J., dissenting), that the order of the Board of Revenue fixing the land with liability to assessment was not final, and could be set aside by the Civil Court as ultra vires. Dewan Ram Jewan Singh v. The Collector of Shahabad, 18 W. R. 64, Ram Jewan Singh v. The Collector of Shahabad, 19 W. R. 127, overruled. Held, by the majority of the Full Bench, that the language of s. 9 was not such as would prohibit the present suit; and, unless the meaning were clear, its operation should be limited to suits for damages on account of anything done in good faith; for instance, in a case of ouster under s. 7. The Collector of Moorshedabad v.

Roy Dhunput Singh, 15 B. L. R. 49, approved. Held (MITTER, J., dissenting), that s. 1 of Act IX of 1847 repealed everything in the Regulations which enacted by what officers and how the question of liability to assessment should be tried, and therefore took away from Collectors and Boards of Revenue the power of giving any binding decision on the point. Held, also, (MITTER, J., dissenting), that the effect of the words "shall be final" in s. 6 was to make the assessment final in every case in which there was jurisdiction to assess, but to leave it open to the Civil Courts to inquire in each case whether there was such jurisdiction, or whether the lands assessed were liable to assessment. Per MITTER, J. S. 1 has not abolished the judicial functions of the Revenue authorities under Regulation II of 1819; all that has been abolished by that section are the tribunals constituted by Regulation III of 1828. The proceedings of the Revenue authorities under s. 6 embrace an inquiry upon two questions, viz., the question of the liability to assessment, and the rate of assessment, and under the express wording of the section the finality attaches to the whole order of the Sudder Board of Revenue. FAHAMIDANNISSA BEGUM v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL
I. L. R. 14 Calc. 67

9. ——— Held, on appeal to the Privy Council, that a review of the legislation anterior to Act IX of 1847 shows that whilst it was intended to bring under assessment lands not included in the permanent settlement, whether waste or gained by alluvion or dereliction from sea or rivers, yet all such lands as were comprised in permanently-settled estates were to be rigorously excluded from further assessment. Lands included in the permanent settlement having afterwards been covered by water, and having then been formed again on the same site, held not to be lands "gained" from the river by alluvion or dereliction within the meaning of Regulation II of 1819, that expression being confined to meaning lands gained since the period of the settlement. The effect of Act IX of 1847 was merely to change the mode of assessment in the case of land already liable to be assessed under legislation in force when that Act became law. It was not the object of that Act to bring under liability land re-formed on the site of land previously lost, within the area of a permanently-settled estate, the revenue upon which had been paid without abatement since the permanent settlement. Where an order of the Board of Revenue, purporting to be made under Act IX of 1847, subjected land included in the permanent settlement to assessment: Held, that the District Civil Court had jurisdiction (which, therefore, might be invoked as a matter of right) to entertain a suit brought by the landowner contesting that order, and to declare it unauthorised by law. 1. ——— Award—Decision on non-appearance of parties. Act XIII of 1848 "for the greater security of possessory titles in the Presidency of Bengal, derived from awards made by the revenue authorities under Regulation VII of 1822, Regulation IX of 1825, and Regulation IX of 1833 of the Bengal Code," by s. 3, enacted that no suit should be entertained for contesting the justice of any award of the revenue authorities under any of these Regulations made after the passing of the Act after the expiration of three years from the date of the final award. A suit for the amendment of a map was referred by the Deputy Collector to an Ameen for the purpose of a local investigation, and the Ameen returned that, neither of the parties appearing before him, he was unable to make the investigation, whereupon the Deputy Collector struck the case out. Held, that this was not an award within the meaning of the Act. 2. ——— Hindu and Mahomedan Law. There is no indication whatever in Act XL of 1858 of any intention to alter or affect any provision of Hindu or Mahomedan law as to guardians who do not avail themselves of the Act. The scope of the enactment is merely to remove legislative prohibitions, to confer expressly a certain jurisdiction, and to define exactly the position of those who avail themselves of, or are brought under, the Act, leaving persons to whom any existing rules of law apply unaffected. 3. ——— Guardian and Minor—Ground for refusal of certificate. An application for a certificate under Act XL of 1858 (which, if successful, would, in effect, prolong the minority of an infant from eighteen to twenty-one) should not be granted when the alleged minor is admittedly on the point of attaining the age of eighteen, unless under particular circumstances, as where very great weakness of mind is proved, or where it is shown that there is some absolute necessity for making such order. In the matter of the petition of NAZIRUN MUHAMDEE v. NAZIRUN

Therefore, where an application for a certificate was made in 1877, and an order granting it was passed in December 1879, but the certificate was not issued until December 1881: Held, that the minor, in respect of whose property the certificate was applied for, who had between the date of the application and the issue of the certificate attained the age of 18 years, and signed a promissory note, was not entitled to take advantage of s. 3 of the Majority Act, 1875, and set up the plea of minority as a defence to a suit on the note. 6. ——— Period from which authority of guardian dates—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 6. S. 6 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), which says that a certificate under Act XL of 1858 (among other documents) "shall not be filed, exhibited, or recorded in any Court of Justice or received or furnished by any public officer," unless a certain fee be paid, means that such certificate cannot come into existence until the person who has the permission of the Court to obtain it deposits the requisite amount of stamp duty. Independently of this section, however, the preparation of such a certificate after the order granting it is not a purely ministerial act; it must then be applied for by the grantee: and it is from the date of the certificate being actually taken out, and not from the date of the order granting it, that a guardian of the person and property of a minor is to be considered as appointed under Act XL of 1858. Where, therefore, on a petition for such a certificate by J., an order was made that the "application be allowed," and in a suit on certain bonds, in which suit the minor in respect of whose person and property the petition for a certificate was made was a defendant, he was represented by J, by whom no certificate had been actually taken out: Held, in a suit by the minor to set aside the decree as not binding on him, that without the certificate J had no authority to appear on behalf of the minor, and the latter, not having been properly represented in the suit brought against him, was entitled to have the decree set aside. Stephen v. Stephen, I. L. R. 8 Calc., 714, and on appeal, I. L. R., 9 Calc., 901, followed. Chunee Mul Johary v. Brojonath Roy Chowdhry, I. L. R., 8 Calc. 967, dissented from. SAHAI NAND v. MUNGNIRAM MARWARI

Held, however, on appeal by the Privy Council reversing the above decision, that, when a Court to which application has been made under s. 3 of Act XL of 1858 for a certificate has adjudged the applicant entitled to have one, he then substantially obtains it, although it may not be drawn up or issued at the time. Having obtained such an order, he has in substance complied with the terms of the Act, in the same way as when a plaintiff has judgment that he shall have a decree in his suit, it may be said that he has then obtained his decree. Therefore, when a minor had been represented in a suit by a person who had obtained an order for a certificate under s. 3, but had not had it issued to him, the absence of a certificate was held to be not such an irregularity as entitled the minor, on coming of age, to have the proceedings set aside on the ground that he had not been properly represented. (e).* In a suit by a puisne mortgagee against the prior as well as the subsequent mortgagees and the mortgagor's representative it was found that the prior mortgages were executed when the mortgagor was over 18, but under 21. A guardian of his person had been appointed under Act XL of 1858, but there was no evidence as to whether a certificate of administration had also been granted under that Act. The prior mortgagees thereupon contended that under Act XL of 1858 a guardian of the person could not be appointed unless a certificate of administration was also granted, and there being no evidence of the latter being granted, this appointment of a guardian of the person alone was ultra vires: Held, that assuming (but without deciding the point) that under Act XL of 1858 a guardian of the person could not be appointed unless a certificate of administration was also granted, an independent appointment of a guardian of the person may be made, and there being no evidence to show that such a certificate of administration was not granted, the Court must presume the regularity of the order under illus. 8. ——— Purchaser from guardian. Per GARTH, C.J. Previously to the passing of Act XL of 1858, where a suit was brought by a minor on coming of age, to recover property sold by his guardian during his minority, it was generally incumbent upon the purchaser to prove that he acted in good faith ; that he made proper enquiries as to the necessity for the sale ; and had honestly satisfied himself of the existence of that necessity. Now under s. 18 of that Act, the Civil Court not only has the power, but is bound to enquire into the circumstances of each case, and to determine whether, as a matter of law and prudence, it is right that any proposed sale or mortgage of the minor's property should take place ; and if the Court, upon the materials and information brought before it by the guardian, makes an order for sale, a purchaser under such an order is not bound to make the same enquiry which the Judge has made, and to determine for himself whether the Judge has done his duty properly and come to a right conclusion. Where a plaintiff alleges fraud or illegality as a ground for setting aside a sale made under s. 18, the onus lies upon him to make out a primâ facie case of fraud or illegality, and to show that the debt, which formed the consideration for the sale in such case, was one for which the minor was not responsible. Per PRINSEP, J. A stranger purchasing from a guardian, acting under the authority granted under s. 18 of Act XL of 1858, will be entitled to every protection from the Courts, so long as it is not shown that he acted in a fraudulent or collusive manner, knowing that the debts, for the liquidation of which the purchase-money would be applied, were not debts lawfully binding on the minor. The burden of proof in such a case would lie heavily on the person seeking to set aside the alienation. But where the purchaser is himself the creditor, and therefore has the means of satisfying a Court as to the origin and nature of the debts and how they are binding on the minor, the burden of proof is shifted on the purchaser, when the plaintiff has established a primâ facie case. 10. ——— Guardian and minor—Mortgage by certificated guardian without sanction of District Court—Mortgage money applied partly to benefit of minor's estate—Suit by minor to set aside the mortgage—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 65. S. 18 of the Bengal Minors Act (XL of 1858) does not imply that a sale or mortgage or a lease for more than five years, executed by a certificated guardian without sanction of the Civil Court, is illegal and void ab initio; but the proviso means that in the absence of such sanction the certificated guardian, who otherwise would have all the powers which the minor would have if he were of age, shall be relegated to the position which he would occupy if he had been granted no certificate at all. If any one chooses to take a mortgage or a lease for a term exceeding five years under these circumstances, the transaction is on the basis of no certificate having been granted. In a suit brought by the guardian of a Mahomedan minor for a declaration that a mortgage deed executed by the minor's mother was null and void to the extent of the minor's share and for partition and possession of such share, it was found that a considerable proportion of the moneys received by the mortgagor had been applied for the benefit of the minor's estate by discharging incumbrances imposed on it by his deceased father. It appeared that at the time of the mortgage, the mother held a certificate of guardianship under the Bengal Minors Act, and that she had not obtained from the Civil Court any order sanctioning the mortgage under s. 18 of that

Act:—Held, that the omission to obtain such sanction did not make the mortgage illegal or void ab initio, but relegated the parties to the position in which they would have been if no certificate had been granted, i.e., that of a transaction by a Mahomedan mother affecting to mortgage the property of her minor son, with whose estate she had no power to interfere. Held, that this fell within the class of cases in which it has been decided that if a person sells or mortgages another's property, having no legal or equitable right to do so, and that other benefits by the transaction, the latter cannot have it set aside without making restitution to the person whose money has been applied for the benefit of the estate. Held, that even if mortgages executed by a certificated guardian without the sanction required by s. 18 of the Bengal Minors Act were void, the section did not make them illegal; and, with reference to s. 65 of the Contract Act, the plaintiff could not obtain a decree for a declaration that the mortgage was inoperative as against his share, except on condition of his making restitution to the extent of any moneys advanced by the defendant under the mortgage-deed which had gone to the benefit of the plaintiff's estate, or had been expended on his maintenance, education, or marriage. Manji Ram v. Para Singh, *I. The District Judge, assuming that the minor was a member of a joint family, held that the original certificate ought never to have been granted, recalled the certificate, and dismissed the application. Held, that A, having obtained the certificate, brought himself within the jurisdiction of the Court under Act XL of 1858, and that the Court ought to have considered the charges against him. He is, it seems, subject to removal upon summary application under Act XL of 1858, s. 21; but if the ground upon which his removal is applied for involves an investigation of accounts, such investigation must be made in a regular suit under s. 19, previous to such summary application under s. 21. ——— s. 5—Manager of estate under attachment—Sale for arrears of revenue—Portion of estate. Act XI of 1859 is, to a great extent, a remedial Act, passed for the benefit of the subject, and in order to relax the stringency of former Statutes, whereby the Crown was empowered to sell estates for non-payment of revenue. S. 5 of the said Act applies to estates which are under attachment issued under Act VIII of 1859, and which are in the hands of a manager appointed on the application of the judgment-debtor for the purpose of liquidating the debts. Such attachments are not superseded by the appointment of such manager. The words "arrears of estates under attachment" apply to cases where a portion only of an estate is under attachment, as well as to cases in which the whole estate has been attached. All that is necessary under that section is that the notification should specify the estate or shares in the estate to be sold, and in selling a share in an estate it is unnecessary to specify the shares or mouzahs of which that share is composed. The word "estate," as there used, ordinarily means "mehal;" but the term also applies to a portion of a mehal with regard to which a separate account has been opened, but not to an undivided portion of a mehal as to which separate accounts are not kept. 14. ——— Non-specification of nature and extent of work—Contract to supply labourers and get labour performed. A contract to supply labourers and to get labour performed by them, even though the nature and extent of the work are not clearly specified, falls within the provisions of Act XIII of 1859. ROWSON v. HANAMA MESTRI
I. L. R. 1 Mad. 280

15. ——— Advance to labourer—Breach of contract. Act XIII of 1859 relates to fraudulent breaches of contract, and does not apply where an advance has not only been worked off by a labourer, but an actual balance is due to him. TARADOSS BHUTTACHARJEE v. BHALOO SHEIKH
8 W. R. Cr. 69

16. ——— ——— Contract to supply labourers. A contract, in consideration of an advance of money to supply labourers to do certain work on an estate, falls within the scope of Act XIII of 1859, and the fact that such contract contains covenants to pay penalties in default of supplying the labourers, and to repay the advance, if necessary, by personal labour for five years, does not take the contract out of the operation of the Act, so as to make illegal an order directing the contractor to be imprisoned for failure to comply with an order to repay the advance. RÁMÁSÁMI v. KÁNDASÁMI
I. L. R. 8 Mad. 379

17. _____ Contract to work until repayment of advance made. Defendant, in consideration of an advance of money received from complainant, bound himself to work for complainant until the repayment of the sum advanced. For breach of this contract the complainant proceeded against the defendant under Act XIII of 1859. Held, that the contract was not within the Act. ANONYMOUS . . . . 7 Mad. Ap. 31

18. _____ Money advanced on account of work to be performed—Loan on condition that the workmen should enter into a contract of service. A workman agreed in writing to work for the proprietors of an estate for four years and one month, from 1st March 1899 to 31st March 1903, for an initial advance of one rupee which was not to be repaid till after the expiration of the agreement. The same person subsequently obtained an advance of R10, to be re-imbursed by a monthly deduction of one rupee from his wages. He worked from 1st March 1899 till 18th September 1899 when he ceased to work, leaving in all a sum of R5 to be accounted for in the adjustment of the total advance. He was subsequently charged and convicted under s. 2 of the Criminal Breach of Contract Act, XIII of 1859:—Held, that the initial advance of one rupee was not money advanced on account of work to be performed, but rather a loan made without interest on the condition that the workman would enter into a contract of service for the duration of the loan; and that the Criminal Breach of Contract Act, 1859, was inapplicable to this case; that, with reference to the ten rupees to be repaid out of wages, the Act applied, and an order should be made directing the workman to work until the expiration of the term of the contract on account of which this sum had been advanced. TANGI JOGHI v. HALL . I. L. R. 23 Mad. 203

19. _____ Loan—Deduction from wages. Having agreed to work for wages in a tannery and received R10 from M, his employer, T promised to work off the advance by allowing M to deduct 8 annas a week from his weekly wages. Held, that the provisions of Act XIII of 1859 were applicable to this contract. QUEEN v. TALUKANAM I. L. R. 7 Mad. 131

20. _____ Gold and silver given to workman. On the construction of s. 2 of Act XIII of 1859: Held, that gold and silver money given to an artificer as raw material wherewith to make the article contracted for, is an "advance of money" within the meaning of the section. ANONYMOUS . . . . . 6 Mad. Ap. 24

21. _____ Criminal breach of contract—Labourer—Carrier by boat. An advance was made under a contract by which the party who received the advance undertook to convey salt by boat, but did not bind himself to render personal labour. The party who received the advance broke the contract:—Held, that the parties to the contract were not an employer of labour and a labourer respectively, and consequently the contract did not fall within the provisions of Act XIII of 1859. CALURAM v. CHENGAPPA I. L. R. 13 Mad. 351

22. _____ Advance of grain and money —Order to repay value of work not performed. An advance of money and grain having been made to a labourer for work to be done, the labourer failed to complete the work, and an order was passed by a Magistrate, under s. 2 of Act XIII of 1859, directing repayment of the balance of the advance not worked off by the labourer. Held, that as it was not proved that the labourer was offered and accepted the grain in lieu of money to be advanced, the order was illegal. KONDADU v. RAMUDU I. L. R. 8 Mad. 294

23. _____ Working off previous debts —Breach of contract of service—Labourer. A labourer agreed to serve in consideration of money due from him on account of previous debts. He served for three months only, and then quitted service in violation of the agreement. He was prosecuted and convicted of breach of contract of service under Act XIII of 1859. Held, that he was not liable to be dealt with criminally, because there was no fraudulent breach of contract within the meaning of Act XIII of 1859, and because, further, no money in advance was received, the consideration for the agreement to serve being an old debt. REG. v. JETHYA VALAD VESTYA . . 9 Bom. 171

24. _____ Jurisdiction of Magistrates to interfere in cases of wilful and fraudulent breach of contract—Meaning of the expression "Advance of money on account of work." Act XIII of 1859 (an Act to provide for the punishment of breaches of contract by artificers, workmen and labourers in certain cases) applies only where there has been an advance of money on account of any work, which words do not include mere loans or old debts. The interference of the Magistrate under the Act is limited to cases where the neglect or refusal to perform is wilful and without lawful and reasonable excuse. As a rule, a mere breach of contract ought not to be an offence, but only to be the subject of a civil action: and a man cannot be treated as a criminal for not performing a contract which could not be enforced against him by civil process. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAJAB I. L. R. 16 Bom. 368

25. _____ s. 2—Limitation of civil claim —Order by the Magistrate for repayment of advances. In a prosecution for breach of contract under Act XIII of 1859, it appeared that the complainant had advanced certain sums of money to the accused, but that a suit to recover the same was barred by limitation; and the Magistrate thereupon dismissed the charge:—Held, that there was no reason why the Magistrate should not have ordered repayment to be made by the accused under s. 2. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KONDA I. L. R. 16 Mad. 347

ACT—contd.

26. ——— Advance in consideration of exclusive services until repayment—Masters and workmen—Breach of contract on the part of workmen—"Station." An employer of workmen residing and carrying on business in the city of Mirzapur, alleging that he had advanced money to certain workmen on the understanding that they would work for him and no one else until they had repaid such money, and that they had broken such contract by leaving his employment, made a complaint against such workmen under Act XIII of 1859, which had been extended to the "station" of Mirzapur by the Local Government. It appeared that such money was advanced by way of loan, and without any reference to the wages of such workmen or the payment for the work performed by them, and that no deduction on account of such advance was ever made from their wages or the payments made to them. Held, that the contract between the parties was something quite different from any contract contemplated by Act XIII of 1859, and that Act was therefore not applicable. Held, also, that it was doubtful whether that Act applied locally, as it was not shown that the city of Mirzapur was comprised within the "station" of Mirzapur. In the matter of the petition of RAM PRASAD v. DIRGPAL . I. L. R. 3 All. 744

27. ——— Enquiry under Act—Breach of contract by artificer. The enquiry to be made under s. 2 of Act XIII of 1859 is not an enquiry into an offence which may be tried summarily. POLLARD v. MOTHIAL . I. L. R. 4 Mad. 234

28. ——— Imprisonment—Criminal breach of contract—Procedure—Imprisonment. Where an order has been made by a Magistrate under Act XIII of 1859, s. 2, for the fulfilment of a labour contract, a sentence of imprisonment for disobeying such order without complaint made and without taking statements from the accused, is illegal, although the accused, before the order was made, may have stated their inability to perform the work stipulated for. SRINIVASA v. PONNAMBALAM . . . I. L. R. 5 Mad. 376

29. ——— Order of Magistrate for imprisonment for breach of contract—Right of civil suit. The imprisonment of a defendant by order of the Magistrate under Act XIII of 1859 does not preclude the plaintiff from proceeding by civil suit for recovery of money advanced to the defendant for the performance of work. VERNEDE v. ABDUL GIRI CHINNA SWAMI . 2 Mad. 427

30. ——— Former conviction—Breach of contract of service.—Statute 4 Geo. IV, Cap. 34, s. 3—Autrefois convict. A conviction for breach of contract of service under s. 2, Act XIII of 1859, is a bar to any subsequent conviction on the same contract for a further breach for not returning to service. GRIFFITHS v. TEZIA DOSADH I. L. R. 21 Calc. 262

——— 1859—XIII—concld.

31. ——— Breach of contract—"Offence," meaning of—Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, ss. 4 and 250.—Compensation for breach of contract. A mere breach of contract is not, under the first part of s. 2 of Act XIII of 1859, an offence within the meaning of the term in s. 4 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and no compensation can therefore be legally awarded under s. 250 of the Code in respect of such breach. In the matter of the petition of RAM SARUP BHAKAT 4 C. W. N. 253

——— s. 3 and s. 2, cl. 1—Procedure under, whether summary or not—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 370. In the trial of a case under the Workmen's Breach of Contract Act (XIII of 1859), the Magistrate is not bound to frame his record in accordance with the provisions of s. 370 of the Criminal Procedure Code. It is doubtful whether a proceeding under the first clause of s. 2 and under s. 3 of Act XIII of 1859 is a criminal proceeding. There is no offence committed, and there is no accused. The provisions of s. 370 of the Criminal Procedure Code are therefore inapplicable to a case of this nature. AVERAM DAS MOCHI v. ABDUL RAHIM . . . I. L. R. 27 Calc. 131

1. ——— Suit for declaration of trusts of a temple. In bringing a suit under Act XX of 1863 it is not necessary to show that the temple was one which was formerly under control of the Board of Revenue. The Act applies to property in Calcutta. GANES SINGH v. RAMGOPAL SINGH . . . . 5 B. L. R. Ap. 55

2. ——— Suit to establish right to share in management of temple. The suits referred to in Act XX of 1863, as needing the authority of the Court for their jurisdiction, are solely suits charging trustees, managers, or committees with misfeasance, malversation of the temple property, or neglect of duty. There is nothing in the Act to oust the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts over suits to establish a right to share in the management. AGRI SARMA EMBRANDRI v. VISTNU EMBRANDRI. 3. ——— Right of person interested to sue for misfeasance by managers, etc.—Public endowment. In the case of a public endowment transferred to trustees, managers, or superintendents of such lands under Act XX of 1863, any person or persons interested (and the interest need not be a pecuniary one) in the religious establishment, in its worship or service, or in its trusts, has a right of suit, after leave obtained from a Civil Court against such trustees, etc., for misfeasance, or breach of trust, or neglect of duty. 4. ——— Suit for removal of mohunt and appointment of another. A suit for the removal of the present mohunt of a religious endowment and for the appointment of the petitioner in his place is not of such a nature as is contemplated by Act XX of 1863. KISHORE BON MOHUNT v. KALEE CHURN GIREE . . 22 W. R. 364

5. ——— Suit to compel heir of manager to make good deficiency—Leave of Court. Act XX of 1863 does not apply to a suit brought by the dharmakarta of a temple and one of its worshippers to compel the defendant, as heir of the late manager, to make good, out of the property inherited by him, the deficiency in the devasthanam funds caused by breach of trust and misappropriation by the late manager. The leave of the Civil Court for the institution of such a suit is not necessary, and the suit is maintainable. The right of instituting such suits is not a privilege accorded by Act XX of 1863, but a pre-existing right. JEYANGARULAVARU v. DURMA DOSSJI . 4 Mad. 2

6. ——— Suit to eject Dharmakarta or agents from temple—Right of Government to divest itself of power of interfering with appointment—Mad. Reg. VII of 1817. Plaintiffs, members of the committee appointed under Act XX of 1863, sued to eject defendants (the dharmakarta and his agents) from the possession and management of the temple dedicated to Sri Viraragava Swami at Trivellore and to establish their (plaintiffs') right to the possession and control of the said temple. Defendants denied the right of the plaintiffs to exercise any control whatever over the temple. This right depended upon whether, at the period of the passing of Act XX of 1863, the nomination vested in, was exercised by, or was subject to the confirmation of the Government, or any public officer. It was admitted that in 1842 the Board of Revenue did, so far as it could, divest itself of all right to interfere with the appointment of a dharmakarta, but it was contended for the plaintiffs that it was not in the power of the Board of Revenue so to divest itself of the duties imposed upon it by Regulation VII of 1817. Held, that assuming the Board of Revenue to have had such a right, there was nothing in Regulation VII of 1817 to prevent them from renouncing that right if they chose. VENKATESA NAYADU v. SHAGATOPA SHRI SHAGATOPA SWAMI . . . 7 Mad. 77

7. ——— Jurisdiction—Clause in deed of endowment excluding jurisdiction. The jurisdiction given to Courts by Act XX of 1863 cannot be excluded by any clause in a deed of endowment. IMDAD HOSSEIN v. MAHOMED ALI KHAN 23 W. R. 150

8. ——— Madras Regulation VII of 1817, s. 13—Discretionary power of a temple committee to appoint new trustees when the power of management is not hereditary—Trusts Act (II of 1882), s. 49—Jurisdiction of Civil Court. A temple committee appointed under Act XX of 1863 may appoint new trustees when there is no hereditary trustees to add to the existing trustees, but this power, although discretionary, must be exercised reasonably and in good faith, and according to the principle, which is applicable to public trusts, embodied in s. 49 of the Indian Trusts Act. If it is not so exercised, the power may be controlled by a Civil Court of original jurisdiction. DAVUD SAIBA v. HUSSEIN SAIBA I. L. R. 17 Mad. 212

9. ——— Duties and Powers of committee of management—Meetings of committee—Number of members present—Resolution appointing quorum—Resolution by three out of seven—Failure of trustee to submit accounts—Ground for dismissal. Though committees constituted under the Religious Endowments Act, 1863, are not strictly corporations, their procedure in matters relating to the management of properties and trustees under their control should be governed by the rules applicable to regular corporations. In 1879, when a committee consisted of seven members, a meeting was held at which five were present, and a resolution was unanimously passed that at future meetings three should form a quorum. This resolution had never been rescinded, and had always been acted upon. In 1895, when the committee also consisted of seven, a meeting was held after due notice to all its members, at which three were present, and a trustee of the temple was, on valid grounds, dismissed from office and called upon to hand over charge of the temple and its properties. The resolution of dismissal was unanimous, and was confirmed at a subsequent meeting :—Held, that the meeting as constituted was competent to pass the resolution removing the trustee. Whether unanimity of the whole committee might not have been necessary in the event of business having been transacted otherwise than at a meeting. Quære : —Failure on the part of a trustee to submit accounts to the committee is a breach of one of the most important duties cast upon him by law, and is sufficient to justify his dismissal. ANANTANARAYANA AYYAR v. KUTTALAM PILLAI . I. L. R. 22 Mad. 481

1. ——— s. 3—Power of committee appointed under the Act. A committee, appointed under Act XX of 1863, has power to dismiss the trustees or superintendents of temples described in s. 3 of the Act, without having recourse to a civil suit ; but such power can only be exercised on good and sufficient grounds. CHINNA RANGAIYANGAR v. SUBRAYA MUDALI. 3 Mad. 334

2. ——— Removal by Committee of Superintendent of Pagoda—Ground for removal. Where there were not good and sufficient grounds for the removal from office of the defendants, superintendents of a pagoda, within s. 3 of Act XX of 1863, by the committee appointed under that Act, the High Court confirmed the decree of the Civil Judge dismissing a suit brought by the plaintiffs, who had been appointed by the committee as superintendents in place of the defendants for the recovery of the pagoda, and the property belonging to it. CHINNA RANGAIYANGAR v. SUBRAYA MUDALI . . . . . 3 Mad. 338

3 ——— Committee, suit by, to enforce right of control. The committee of a district duly appointed under Act XX of 1863 are entitled to maintain a suit in a Civil Court without having obtained the leave of the Court to bring the suit as well when the object of the suit is to establish their right of control under s. 3 of the Act as when it is sought to enforce such control against the officers of the temple subordinate to them. VENKATASA NAIDU v. SADAGOPASMA IYER 4 Mad. 404

4 ——— ss. 3, 4, 11, 12—Suit by members of a temple committee—Burden of proof—Form of decree. Suit by the members of a temple committee appointed under Act XX of 1863 against one claiming to be the hereditary trustee of a Hindu temple for possession of certain temple property, for a declaration of their right to receive certain annual dues and for a perpetual injunction restraining defendant from interfering with these dues :—Held, that the burden of proving that the temple was of the class mentioned in s. 3 of Act XX of 1863 lay on the plaintiffs. On its appearing that the defendants' ancestor was not the founder of the temple, but was appointed trustee by the Government, as also were his successors in the office of trustee, of whom all were not members of his family :—Held, (i) that the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree declaring the temple in dispute to be of the class mentioned in Act XX of 1863, s. 3, and, as such, subject to their jurisdiction ; (ii) that the plaintiffs were not entitled under Act XX of 1863, ss. 14, 1, and 12, to be put in possession of the property of the temple nor in receipt of its income. The Civil Judge found that the grant was for the performance of religious ceremonies and pious observances only, and that the plaintiff had led a vicious life and been guilty of malversation in his office, and, being of opinion that the plaintiff had been properly deprived of the lands belonging to the muth, under Madras Regulation VII of 1817, dismissed the suit. Held, that, under s. 4 of Act XX of 1863, the plaintiff became entitled, on the passing of the Act, to the restoration of the endowment. Before the jurisdiction which is conferred by s. 5 of the Religious Endowments Act (XX of 1863) can be exercised by a Civil Court, there must be a vacancy in the office, there must have been a transfer to the former trustee, and a dispute must have arisen respecting the right of succession to the office. The words in s. 5, "any dispute shall arise respecting the right of succession," apply to a case in which a question has arisen with reference to the person who is to succeed to the office ; and the jurisdiction of the Civil Court under the section is not confined to cases in which a dispute has arisen respecting the right to succeed to the office. There was a practice on the part of the proprietors and the managers of the institution to divide among themselves the residue of the income and to dispose by way of sale or mortgage of the share enjoyed by them. Held, that this was a religious institution within the meaning of Act XX of 1863. An order under s. 14, Act XX of 1863, should be mandatory, and not prohibitory. 8. ——— Suit by persons interested for breach of trust and neglect of duty—Refusal of trustee without adequate reason to accept and utilise offerings for celebration of festivals—Misfeasance and breach of trust in s. 14 explained. In a suit against the trustee of a religious institution under Act XX of 1863 for alleged breaches of trust and neglect of duty by reason of the non-performance of ceremonies, it is not necessary, in order to give jurisdiction to Civil Courts, for the plaintiffs to show that there are any special funds constituting an endowment of the institution. If it be proved that the ceremonies in question have been conducted as a custom for a series of years, and that the defendant trustee was not absolutely unable, owing to lack of funds, to carry on those ceremonial observances in the customary manner, he must be held to have been guilty of neglect of duty rendering him liable to a suit under s. 14 of the Act. Where it has been usual for the trustee celebrate festivals with the aid of voluntary contributions, it is a breach of duty on the part of the trustee to refuse to celebrate them without adequate reasons if funds are available, and the trustee ought not, contrary to usage, to refuse to receive such offerings and perform the ceremonies for which they are tendered. Per SUBRAHMANIA AYYAR, J. Having regard to the fact that funds voluntarily given to public religious institutions not only enrich the institutions, but promote the interests of public worship, it must be regarded as part of the proper functions of the trustee to utilise such income for the purposes of the institution whenever it is available. It is his duty to accept the money and apply it for the specified purpose unless there are proper grounds for its rejection. Though a trustee may exercise a discretion and cannot be charged with misconduct, if he acts with an absence of indirect motive, with honesty of intention and a fair consideration of the subject, he may be proceeded against it, from corrupt or improper motives, he refuses to allow voluntary contributions offered for purposes not inconsistent with the principles, rules, or usages of the institution to be applied to those purposes.

The Courts are bound to restrain a trustee from injuring the interests of the institution under his charge by corruptly, arbitrarily, or wantonly departing from the ordinary course of procedure in regard to essential or important matters connected with the institution. The ground upon which the Courts exercise such jurisdiction over him is that such departure on his part amounts to a breach of legal duty incumbent on him. Though the Courts cannot be called upon to decide questions of ritual and worship unconnected with civil rights, it is perfectly competent for them to adjudicate upon such questions also when the adjudication is necessary for the determination of civil rights. Amin Sahib v. Ibram Sahib, 4 Mad. 112, explained. And such persons are those to whom the provisions of Regulation XIX of 1810 were applicable. 16. ——— Endowment—Endowment for benefit of family idol—Suit to remove shebaits from office. Arbitration, reference to—Bengal Regulation XIX of 1810. Act XX of 1863 does not apply to an endowment which is not a public one, but which is made for the benefit of an ancestral family idol. Two plaintiffs, members of a Hindu family, applied for and (in the presence of the defendants) obtained leave to institute a suit against the defendants, who were the shebaits of a certain idol, for the purpose of having them removed from their office, on the ground of misconduct. In their plaint they alleged that the endowment was a public one, all Hindus having a common right of worshipping the idol. This was denied by the defendants. After issues had been framed, the Court of first instance made an order, under s. 16 of the Act, referring certain of them to arbitration, although the defendants contended that, as the endowment was not a public one, the Act had no application, and objected to the reference. The arbitrators made an award finding, inter aliâ, that the idol was the ancestral family idol of the parties to the suit, and that the endowment was not made for the benefit of the public. They further in their award laid down certain definite rules according to which the sheba ought to be conducted, and repairs to the temple made. The Court of first instance passed a decree on that award declaring that the idol was the ancestral idol of both parties, and directing that the defendants should perform the worship in a certain manner, and should execute certain repairs to the temple within six months, and declaring that, if the parties did not act as directed, any member of the family should be able to bring a suit for the appointment of a manager. Against that decree the defendants appealed, and contended that the Act did not apply to the case on the finding of facts as to the endowment not being a public one; that the compulsory reference to arbitration was illegal and void, and that the decree was not one authorised by the terms of s. 14 of the Act:—Held, that, on the facts as found by the arbitrators, Act XX of 1863 did not apply to the case, and that the compulsory reference to arbitration and the decree made thereon were illegal and void. Held, further, that the decree itself was bad on the ground that it was not one coming within the scope of s. 14 of the Act. 17. ——— Suspension and dismissal of trustee of a temple —Powers of temple committee. The plaintiff was appointed to the office of trustee of a Hindu temple under Religious Endowments Act, 1863, s. 3, by the temple committee constituted under that Act. Subsequently the committee, having received certain complaints against him, suspended him from office pending inquiry without calling on him for an explanation. They alleged as the grounds of his suspension that he had caused loss of property and money to the temple, and that he had conducted things in the temple contrary to custom so as to cause a disturbance of the peace. The trustee refused to acquiesce in the order of suspension and to give up certain records, etc., which he was by that order required to deliver, and denied the authority of the committee as asserted by them. Shortly afterwards the committee dismissed him. The plaintiff, denying that his suspension and dismissal were legal, brought two suits against the members of the committee, the first for damages for the suspension, and the second for an injunction to restrain the defendants from interfering with the discharge of his duties as trustee. Both of these suits were dismissed, and the plaintiff preferred appeals to the High Court. In the appeal relating to the claim for an injunction, it was found that no misconduct had been proved against the plaintiff previous to the order of suspension. Held by SHEPHARD and DAVIES, JJ., that a trustee in the position of the plaintiff cannot be dismissed from office except for good cause shown, and that his conduct subsequent to the order of suspension did not amount to such good cause. In the appeal relating to damages:—Held by SHEPHARD, J., that the order of suspension was illegal, and that, under the circumstances, the plaintiff was entitled to substantial damages. Held by DAVIES, J. (finding that the committee had proceeded in the bonâ fide belief that they were acting for the good of the temple in suspending the plaintiff pending inquiry), that the order of suspension was not illegal, and that the suit was rightly dismissed. Owing to the difference of opinion between the two Judges, the last-mentioned appeal was referred to the Chief Justice under Civil Procedure Code, s. 575, and was heard by him sitting with the two other Judges:—Held by COLLINS, C.J., and SHEPHARD, J. (DAVIES, J., diss.), that the order of suspension was illegal, and the plaintiff was entitled to substantial damages. Per COLLINS, C.J. The power of suspension by the committee is, in my judgment, the same as the power of dismissal. The committee, having made due inquiry and having called on the trustee for an explanation, may suspend for good and sufficient cause, but not otherwise. SESHADRI AYYANGAR v. NATARAJA AYYAR I. L. not binding on the institution, may be asked for and made when it is ancillary to a claim for the removal of the manager. The plaintiffs in a suit under the Religious Endowments Act based their claim for the removal of a defendant from his office of manager of a mosque on the ground that he had set up a right of private property in the mosque. They sued for a declaration that certain property was the property of the mosque, and that a mortgage created over it was invalid. They also asked that defendant might be removed. Held, that they were entitled to the declarations prayed for. With regard to the claim for the removal of the defendant, as it seemed probable, on the evidence, that he, in setting up a right of private property in the mosque, was acting under the bonâ fide belief that it was the private property of his family, and as, apart from that, there was practically no evidence of misconduct, it was not necessary to dismiss him from his office, but he was ordered to pay the costs of the suit. 1. ——— Leave to sue—Public and private endowments—Reg. XIX of 1810—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Suit to remove mutwalli. A, a Mahomedan lady, executed a wakfnama purporting to dedicate the whole of her property to an imambara in her house, for the purpose of perpetuating various Shiah ceremonies. By the wakfnama she constituted herself joint-mutwalli with one B, and caused the names of herself and B as mutwallis to be substituted in the Collector's register for her own name as owner. On the death of B, A acted as the sole mutwalli. The wakfnama was publicly registered. But though the property was styled "wakf," and A the mutwalli thereof, in all documents connected with the estate, A all along continued to deal with it as absolute proprietress, and the dedication, though made in 1852, was never under the control of the Board of Revenue or of local agents. In a suit, which the plaintiffs obtained leave to institute under s. 18 of Act XX of 1863, to remove A from the mutwalliship, on the ground of misfeasance: Held, that the wakfnama did not constitute a public religious establishment within the meaning of Act XX of 1863, and that, therefore, the Judge below had no authority to give the plaintiffs, under s. 18, leave to sue; and that his decision was consequently ultra vires. S. 18 of Act XX of 1863 applies only to such religious establishments as were under the control or superintendence of the Board of Revenue or of local agents under Regulation XIX of 1810, and were transferred to trustees or managers under s. 4 of the Act. trusteeship with power to appoint successors. The trusteeship of certain public temples was handed down from M to his son, and then to his grandson, after which the younger brother of the grandson succeeded to the office. He, by will, appointed his sister and her husband as trustees to succeed him, and authorised them to appoint their own successors, thus diverting the devolution of the office from the family of the original trustee. The sister and husband assumed office, but the husband died soon after. The sister continued to hold the office of trustee for over twenty-four years. She, by will, appointed as her successor her sister's son, who held office for twenty years, and, by will, appointed his son-in-law, the defendant, as his successor. Defendant was a great grandson of M, and assumed the office of trustee. A suit having been filed by plaintiffs, on behalf of themselves and other worshippers, for a declaration that the appointment of defendant as trustee was illegal and void: Held, that defendant was the rightful trustee, having been appointed by one who had acquired a valid title to the trusteeship with power to appoint a successor. The sister had acquired a valid title to the trusteeship by prescription, and had entered upon it under a will which contained a provision for the appointment of a successor; and she had, acting under that provision, appointed a successor, giving him a similar power to appoint his own successor. Semble: that the title so acquired by the sister and her successor was not a hereditary trusteeship passing necessarily to their heirs, but one with power to appoint a successor. A trusteeship with power to appoint a successor is an estate well known to and recognised by law, and may be prescribed for. The Religious Endowments Act, 1863, was not intended to apply to a suit, brought under the ordinary original jurisdiction of the High Court inherited from the Supreme Court, charging neglect of duty on the part of a temple trustee. Such a suit is therefore maintainable without leave being obtained under s. 18 of that Act. Semble: that where a person who had no right to the office of a trustee, according to the rule of devolution established by the founder of a trust, acquires a title to the office by prescription, but restores it to one who, except for the transferor's prescriptive title, could have taken the office according to the rules laid down by the founder, such transfer should be treated as an exception to the general doctrine that a trusteeship is not assignable. verified, and presented either by the applicant in person or by his pleader. A grant of such leave on an unverified application not presented in Court is a material irregularity within the meaning of s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and a civil revision petition lies from the order granting it. Omission to give notice of such an application to the person whom it is intended to sue does not of itself render the leave, if granted, irregular. Venkatappayya v. Venkatapathi (Appeal No. 230 of 1895), *I. Criminal Procedure Code (Act XXV of 1861), s. 404—Distribution of fine—Possession of opium. Upon the conviction of certain persons under s. 20, Act XIII of 1867, for illicit possession of opium, the Magistrate sentenced them to payment of a fine, and directed that, upon the realisation thereof, one-half should be paid to the Inspector of Police who had apprehended the prisoners, but refused to pay the other half in accordance with s. 30 (for reasons set forth in his order) to the person who gave the information. On a reference by the Sessions Judge to the High Court: Held, that the High Court could not interfere under s. 404 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The distribution of the fine under s. 30, Act XIII of 1867, formed no part of the Magistrate's judgment. QUEEN v. RAMDAYAL SINGH 8 B. L. R. Ap. 7

3. ——— Resumption of Jagir by East India Company—Regulation law. Where lands were held by a jagirdar under the sovereign of an independent State on a jaidad tenure, i.e., on a grant of land, together with the public revenues thereof, on the condition of keeping up a body of troops to be employed when called on in the service of the sovereign, and on the conquest of the State by the East India Company the jagirdar remained in the same position to the Company:—Held, that the resumption of the lands by the Company, and the seizure of the arms and stores appertaining to the tenure, on the death of the jagirdar, was not an act of State, and therefore the Municipal Courts had jurisdiction to entertain a suit by the representatives of the jagirdar against the Government for the possession of the land and for the value of the arms and stores. 4. ——— Confiscation of territories of King of Delhi—Forfeiture. The status of the King of Delhi was that of a King recognized by the British Government; and the confiscation of his territories in 1857 was an act of State, and not an act done under color of any legal right of which a Municipal Court could take cognizance. His tenure of the territories assigned him by the Government was a tenure merely durante regno, and no power was conferred upon him of creating incumbrances which would survive his deposition. The word 'confiscation' does not necessarily import that the appropriation is to be made as a penalty for a crime, nor, when used in that sense, does it necessarily imply that the forfeiture has accrued upon conviction; but it may also be properly used as applicable to appropriations of property by Government as an act of State. 5. ——— Confiscation by Governor of Foreign State—Title to timber. The plaintiff brought a suit at Tonghoo in British Burma to recover possession of certain timber which he alleged the defendants had wrongfully, and in collusion with the Burmese Governor of Ninghan, taken out of his possession in foreign territory and removed to Tonghoo. The defendants stated that they had acquired the timber from the Governor of Ninghan in terms of an agreement between them and the Burmese Government. It appeared that the Governor of Ninghan had confiscated the plaintiff's timber in contravention of a royal mandate. After the institution of the suit, the defendants removed the timber from Tonghoo to Rangoon. Held, that a British Municipal Court might enquire into the character of the act of the Governor of Ninghan, and was not bound to accept it as an act of State. 7. ——— Resumption of village granted by Peishwa of the Deccan. A village, having been granted in inam by the Peishwa of the Deccan, was, after the death of the grantee, seized by the mamlatdar or farmer of the revenues for an alleged debt due to him, and retained until the treaty of Poona in 1818, when it came into the possession of the British Government. In a suit instituted by the representatives of the original grantee for possession of the village, and payment of the arrears of revenue so sequestered, it was held by the Judicial Committee, affirming the decree of the Provincial and Sudder Courts, that the original resumption was the wrongful act of an individual, and not an act of the State : the British Government were therefore ordered to restore the village, but pursuant to Bom. Reg. V of 1827, s. 3, with only six years arrears of revenue. MILLS v. MODEE PESTONJEE KHOORSHIDJEE . 2 Moo. I. A. 37

10. ——— Resumption of inam village and re-grant, effect of —Waikars, status of—Treaties of 1820—Effect of grant of inam under construction—Attachment by Government of such village, effect of. From the year 1820 down to the year 1872 the Waikar family had been in the enjoyment of the village of Pasarni under a treaty between the East India Company and one M A and K M, who were brothers and the last male descendants of M. For an alleged fraud of K M Government restricted the enjoyment of the said village to his lifetime only. A predeceased K. On the death of K M, Government, on the 31st December 1872, placed an attachment over the village. On the 13th July 1874, a judgment-creditor of A caused the lands in dispute, which were mirasi lands of the Waikar family situated at Pasarni, to be sold in execution of his decree against A, and they were purchased by the defendant, who was put in possession on the 22nd April 1876. In the meanwhile, Government, having chosen to recognise the plaintiff as a representative of the Waikar family, had removed the attachment, and regranted the village to the plaintiff shortly before, viz., on the 3rd April 1876. The plaintiff, being dispossessed, sued the defendant, contending (inter alia) that A, having predeceased his brother, had no interest in the lands, which had been purchased by the defendant. The Court of first instance awarded the plaintiff's claim, and directed the defendant to pay the plaintiff's costs. The defendant appealed to the District Judge, who was of opinion that the proceedings of Government since the attachment in 1872 and restoration of the village were acts of State, and he varied the decree of the lower Court by cutting down the plaintiff's costs, made payable by the lower Court's decree, to half. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court : Held, reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that the plaintiff's claim should be dismissed. The attachment placed by Government on the death of K M in December 1872 was limited to an exemption from assessment, and the resumption and re-grant to the plaintiff did not give the plaintiff any title to the lands in question. The proceedings of Government in 1873 and 1876, by which the plaintiff was recognised as the representative of the Waikar family, were not acts of State. The status of the Waikars and other persons, with whom the agreements of 1820 were entered into, was not that of an independent sovereign. They (the Waikars) were merely powerful saranjamdars subordinate to the Raja of Satara, and after the annexation of the territory of the Raja in 1849 they held their lands under the East India Company. Secretary of State for India v. Narayan Balvant Bhosle, Printed Judgments, 1883, p. 244, distinguished. 1. ——— Owner indirectly impleaded —Towage contract—Vice-Admiralty. The M S, a steam tug, was hired to tow the barque N down the Hughli, and in consequence of the negligence of the master of the tug whilst so employed, and of his wilful disobedience to the order of the pilot on board the N, the latter ran foul of a sailing vessel, the S F, considerable damage being done to both sailing vessels. The S F took proceedings against the N for the damage sustained, and an action in rem was brought (pending the proceedings taken by the S F) by the N against the tug to recover damages, including any damages that the N might have to pay to the owners of the S F. The defence set up by the tug was protection under its towage contract, which was to the effect that the proprietors of the tug should not be responsible under any circumstances for any loss or damage to any vessel whilst in tow of the tug, whether the same should have happened through the default of the master or other sailors, etc., of the tug, or through the incompetence or want of skill of the pilot in charge. The Court below held that the accident was due to the wilful disobedience of the master of the tug in not obeying the pilot on board the N, and that such misconduct was a "default" within the meaning of the clause in the towage contract; but inasmuch as the action was one in rem and not against the proprietors, the clause was no answer to the suit. Held, on appeal, that the clause was a sufficient answer; for that, although in every case of a proceeding in rem the suit is directly against the ship itself, still the owner of the ship must always be considered as indirectly impleaded. 2. ——— Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 230—Claim not actionable unless cause of action already matured—Set-off—Debtor can set off against assignee independent claims against assignor—Right of set-off lost by conduct amounting to discharge of claim sought to be set off—Principal and surety—Mortgagor postponing right does not lose his personal remedy—Decree, when conditional on result of a different suit. Under s. 130 of the Transfer of Property Act as it stood before it was amended by Act VI of 1900, a claim was not actionable unless it was "a claim in respect of a cause of action which has already matured and which subject to procedure may be enforced by suit." Shib Lal v. Azmat Ullah, I. L. R. 18 All. 265, followed. In an action by the assignee of a debt, the debtor-defendant is entitled to set off debt due to him by the assignor at the date of the assignment, even when the amount claimed to be set-off is due under a transaction independent of and unconnected with the claim assigned to plaintiff. Such right of set-off will not be open to the defendant, if by his conduct he has given up his right to proceed against the assignor personally for the debt. A mortgagee who consents to postpone his rights and accept the position of a second mortgagee, with the concurrence of the mortgagor, does not thereby lose his personal remedy against the mortgagor. Where a debtor transfers his property, with directions to pay off his debts, to a trustee who does not undertake any personal liability to the creditors, the relationship of principal and surety is not constituted between the trustee and debtor, respectively. The fact that the defendant in a suit by the assignee is prosecuting a suit against the assignor, in which he might be awarded certain equitable reliefs against the assignor, is no ground for refusing an unconditional decree to the assignee in his suit, unless the claims in the two suits are based on obligations arising out of the same contract and are so closely intertwined with each other as to make it equitable that they should be set against one another. Government of Newfoundland v. *Newfoundland Railway Company, L. 4. ——— Suit by creditor —Misjoinder —Multifariousness—Practice. The principle of the rules that the creditor of a deceased person suing for administration is in the same situation with regard to all other persons as if he were bringing an action at law against the administrator, and that a debtor to the estate of a deceased person can only be made answerable as such debtor by the representative of the deceased's estate, is to be adhered to in this country, where there is a different procedure. Therefore, where, to a suit brought against the Administrator General as administrator of the estate of one W B by a creditor of the deceased, other persons who also had a claim against the

Such a suit may be supported where the relations between the legal personal representative and the debtor to the estate present a substantial impediment to the prosecution by the legal personal representative of a suit against the debtor to recover the assets of the testator, and where there is a strong probability of the loss of such assets unless such a suit be allowed. But where there is an administration suit already pending, the proper course to pursue is to obtain an order in the administration suit, directing either a suit to be brought in the name of the legal personal representative, or appointing a Receiver to sue, and in this country the Courts might have the power to direct such Receiver to sue in his own name. 14. ——— Succession Act (X of 1865), s. 202—Estate of intestate Native Christian—Suit for partition of estate by purchaser of widow's share before completion of administration—Dismissal of suit—Only remedy by way of administration suit. A person to whom the Indian Succession Act, 1865, applied having died intestate in April 1884, his widow and son were in September of the same year granted letters of administration, which were cancelled for want of stamp duty, a fresh grant being made on 19th January 1885. Plaintiff, alleging that the said widow had executed a promissory note in her favour in September 1884, filed a suit against her on 6th January 1885, and, there being no appearance of the defendant, obtained an ex-parte decree. In execution of the decree so obtained, plaintiff attached portions of the estate of the deceased and brought them to sale, becoming herself the purchaser of the one-third share of the widow in each lot sold. In March 1885 the son was appointed sole administrator; in January 1888 he died, and the letters of administration were revoked in consequence, and the amin of the District Court was appointed administrator of the estate until October 1894, when the son's widow was so appointed in his stead. Plaintiff now sued for partition of the property comprised in the estate of the deceased in order that she might obtain delivery of the portions of it which she had purchased in execution of the decree against the widow previously obtained as aforesaid. The estate of the deceased had never been administered or distributed. The defence was that the said previous decree had been obtained by fraud:—Held, that under s. 44 of the Indian Evidence Act, the defendants were entitled to set up this defence; and that, the property of the deceased having become vested in his administrator under the Indian Succession Act, it remained so vested until the administrator had distributed the estate, and that, in consequence, the widow had no saleable interest in any part of the estate until in the course of the administration thereof her share had been determined and allotted to her. Until such allotment (which had not yet taken place) the only process by which plaintiff could legally claim the widow's interest in the estate was by a suit for the administration of the estate, to which suit the widow, if alive, would be a necessary party. If not alive, letters of administration to her estate would be necessary, the administrator being made a party. Held, also, that the suit could not be treated, as an administration suit. Plaint, inter alia, stated that plaintiff was informed that in Jaisto 1297 the widow of the testator purported to take in adoption a son, whose natural father was at the time and is now a Brahmo and had renounced the Hindu religion. She submitted that such adoption was absolutely invalid and did not operate to pass any title to the adopted son. There was, however, no prayer asking for any declaration with regard thereto. Held, that upon the suit as at present constituted, the question of adoption was not in issue, and upon the pleadings the fact and validity of the adoption must be taken to be admitted. That, if a declaration with regard to the adoption is sought, the plaint must dispute the fact or validity of the adoption, and should contain a prayer for a declaration as to the fact or validity thereof. The whole substance in the claim for administration being dependent on the adoption being out of the way, the questions raised in the suit cannot be gone into till the question of adoption is determined once for all. Ordered, that on the plaint being amended, the issue as to the adoption be tried as a preliminary issue between the plaintiff and the adopted

The Administrator-General is a person, and the fact that at his death all assets vest in his successor in office under s. 33 of the Administrator-General's Act as opposed to vesting in his executors or administrators, is not sufficient to debar him from accepting an assignment. Under s. 256 of the Succession Act a surety bond must be given to the

The grant of letters of administration to X was void ab initio. Abram v. Cunningham, 2 Lev. 182; Ellis v. Ellis, 1 Ch. 613, referred to. The sureties guaranteed the honesty of X in dealing with the estate of B, and that being so the bond was not void and the Administrator-General can sue upon it. Per HARINGTON and STEPHEN, JJ. The sureties are not liable under the contract, because they and also the Court were under a mistake of fact essential to the agreement, which was the authority of X as attorney of the next of kin to apply for and receive the grant of letters of administration, and but for that mistake the Court could not have granted letters of administration to X, nor have taken a bond from the sureties. The contract of suretyship was void ab initio by reason of the fraud against which the sureties did not give a guarantee, and s. 20 of the Contract Act applied. Lester v. Gooch, 17 W. R. Burr. 373; Kasheba v. Shrysat Narshid, I. L. R., 19 Bom., 697, referred to. Neither the invalidity of the grant of letters of administration, nor the mistake of the Court in accepting the bond are sufficient to discharge the sureties. It was the wrongful acts of X that caused a present loss to the estate, and the sureties were bound to make good the loss. Neither s. 20 of the Contract Act nor ss. 242, 269 of the Succession Act applied. Per GEIDT, J. There was no mistake as to a matter of fact essential to the agreement, and there is nothing in law to indicate that sureties are entitled to evade their contract of guarantee, because of a mistake induced by the principal debtor. It would be a novel and dangerous doctrine to hold that an administration bond is invalidated by the fact that the sureties themselves had been deceived by the very person, for whose honesty they vouch. The parties to an arbitration suit consented to it being referred to the Commissioner to take the usual accounts and to determine their respective shares. On appearing before the Assistant Commissioner the parties came to an understanding that the matter in dispute should be left to be decided by the Assistant Commissioner in a summary manner without going into formal evidence beyond the accounts, objections and surcharges filed before him. The 1st and 6th defendants with their attorney were present at this meeting and after their attorney had agreed to the above course suggested by the Assistant Commissioner, the Assistant Commissioner himself explained to the 1st and 6th defendants in turn his proposal and told them that whatever award he made would be binding on them. To this they agreed, the 1st defendant even saying he would take one rupee if that was the sum awarded to him. It was also agreed that the Assistant Commissioner should draw up his findings in the form of a consent decree to be taken by the parties as that would save the parties a large sum in costs. At another meeting before the Assistant Commissioner the latter recorded his findings and then proceeded to draw up the consent decree embodying these findings therein, but the defendants 1 and 6 refused to be bound by his decision. Upon application being made by the plaintiff that an adjustment of the suit might be recorded under s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code on the basis of the Assistant Commissioner's decision: Held, that there had been no adjustment of the suit. There had been no written submission to arbitration as provided by s. 4 of the Indian Arbitration Act, and, consequently, there had been no legal and valid reference to arbitration and the Assistant Commissioner's award (for it really was an award and nothing else) had no legal foundation, and could therefore have no legal consequences. As there had been no reference to arbitration and no award there could be no adjustment to give effect to under s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code. Samibai v. Premji Pragji I. L. ——— Liability of administrator for loss to estate—Compromise of claim by administrator—Subsequent suit by a creditor of estate to set aside the compromise and for damages for negligence of administrator—Succession Act (X of 1865), ss. 280 and 328. Administrator's liability for neglect to get in any part of the deceased's property. One P mortgaged certain property to H for R2,667. H sued P to recover the mortgage debt. Pending the suit, P died in 1878. Thereupon A, the son of P, took out letters of administration to the deceased's estate, and contested H's claim. H obtained a decree in the Court of first instance for the sale of the mortgaged property, and in execution of this decree the property was sold for R810 and purchased by H. The decree was afterwards, viz., 1 on 2nd August 1883, reversed, on appeal, by the Assistant Judge. Thereupon H entered into a compromise with A, by which it was arranged that A should give up his claim under the appellate decree of the Assistant Judge, to be repaid by H the sum of R810 which he had realized by the sale of the mortgaged property, and that H should pay to A R240 on account of his costs incurred in the suit and in taking out letters of administration. This compromise was effected on 16th November 1883. In the meantime, on 14th September 1883, the plaintiff had purchased from one B an old decree which was outstanding against the estate of the deceased P. On 10th September 1883, the plaintiff sought to execute this decree against the mortgaged property. Having failed in this attempt, the plaintiff filed a suit against A for a declaration that the compromise of the 16th November 1883 had been fraudulently effected with the object of defeating his (the plaintiff's) claim, and to recover

R1,000 as damages from the defendant on account of his fraudulent and negligent conduct as administrator of his deceased father's estate. This suit was dismissed by both the lower Courts, on the ground that, as there were other creditors who had claims against the estate, the plaintiff's proper remedy was an administration suit, which would enable the Court to assess the claims of all the creditors: Held (reversing the lower Court's decree), that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. By the compromise of the 16th November 1883, the defendant had given up his right under the Appellate Court's decree of the 2nd August 1883 to be repaid by H the sum of R810, and had thereby occasioned a loss to the estate of that amount. He was, therefore, liable to the plaintiff to make good the amount under s. 328 of the Succession Act (X of 1865), subject, however, to a deduction, under s. 280 of that Act, of the expenses incurred by him in obtaining letters of administration, and the costs of any judicial proceeding that might be necessary for administering the estate. 4. ——— Sale of immovable property by administrator of deceased person—Title—Succession Act (X of 1865), ss. 179 and 269—Administrator of trustee—Title of assignee of administrator as against cestui que trust—Priority. One Anna De Silva, a Christian inhabitant of Bombay, died intestate in May 1893, leaving her surviving a minor son (the plaintiff), her husband (defendant 1) and a daughter who died in infancy. Previously to her death, the deceased purported to purchase certain leasehold property situate in Bombay, the sale-deed of which was duly executed in her name. In August 1893 her husband (defendant 1), being called upon to make good a large sum of money for which he was responsible as cashier of Messrs. Graham & Co. of Bombay, handed over the title-deeds of the said property to two representatives of the firm, viz., J. F. N. Graham and another, stating that his deceased wife Anna De Silva was merely a trustee of it, and that the beneficial interest was vested solely in him. On the 18th September, 1893, he executed a conveyance of the property to the said two representatives of Graham & Co. He was shortly afterwards convicted of criminal breach of trust, at the prosecution of Graham & Co. On the 1st November, 1893, J. F. N. Graham obtained a limited grant of letters of administration to the estate of Anna De Silva, under s. 221 of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865). Subsequently Graham & Co. sold the property to the second defendant, the said J. F. N. Graham joining in the conveyance as administrator of Anna De Silva's estate. In 1902 the plaintiff, as son and heir of Anna De Silva, brought this suit, claiming to recover his share of the said property, alleging that it belonged absolutely to his mother. The second defendant (the purchaser from Graham & Co.) denied that it had belonged to Anna De Silva. He alleged that it really belonged to her husband (defendant 1), who had paid for it, and for whom she was a trustee. He further contended that, in any event, he had a good title as against the plaintiff having purchased from the administrator of Anna De Silva's estate. Held, that assuming that the property did belong to Anna De Silva, the second defendant had acquired an indefeasible title to it by virtue of the conveyance to him to which her administrator was a party. Her interest in it had vested in her administrator under s. 179 of the Succession Act (X of 1865), and under s. 269 he could dispose of it as he might think fit. Held, also, that even if Anna De Silva held the property as trustee, the second defendant was entitled. The legal estate passed to her administrator, and he conveyed to the second defendant, who also obtained the equitable estate when he received the title-deeds from Graham & Co. as assignees of the first defendant, who was one of the heirs of Anna De Silva and who asserted his own title to the whole property to the exclusion of the plaintiff. The second defendant's title was, therefore, complete unless he could have detected the falsehood of the first defendant's claim by reasonable diligence, and there was nothing to show that he could. able distribution among the creditors of the estate. Held, that in the absence of fraud or collusion the decree and the subsequent sale in execution could not be set aside. Held, further, that according to ss. 13 and 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) the decree having been executed, the execution bound the parties and all persons claiming through them, and that the question was, therefore, res judicata. Per CHANDAVARKAR, J. The position of an executor or administrator, as the case may be, of a deceased person, as such person's legal representative, in whom all the property of the deceased vests as such by virtue of s. 179 of the Succession Act, may be said to be similar to that of the sebait of an idol. Prosunno v. Golab, *L. The administrator, a member of a well-known firm of Solicitors in Calcutta, who represented himself to be the attorney of a fictitious person called the next-of-kin of the deceased, got possession of the assets in India, which consisted of bank shares and converted them to his own use. It was subsequently found that he had obtained the letters of administration by fraudulent misrepresentation to the Court, of which fraud, however, the sureties were not cognizant. He absconded, but was apprehended, tried, and convicted. The grant of administration in his favour was cancelled and in May 1904 letters of administration, with the will annexed, were granted to the respondent, the Administrator-General of Bengal to whom the administration bond of 15th August 1902 was transferred, and who brought a suit against the defaulting administrator and the sureties on the bond. The former did not appear. The first Court made a decree against the defendants for the amount of the proceeds of sale of the bank shares, which was upheld by a majority of the Court of appeal. Held, affirming the decision of the Courts in India, that the sureties were liable. The bond did not become

Previously to the date of the decree (viz., on 4th March 1898), an order had been made by the High Court under ss. 17 and 18 of the Administrator-General's Act (II of 1874), authorizing the Administrator-General to collect the assets of the deceased and ordering him, if necessary, to take out letters of administration to his estate. On the 29th April 1898, the plaintiff, under s. 268 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), attached certain money in the hands of a third party due to the deceased's estate. On the 2nd July 1898, letters of administration were granted to the Administrator-General. Held, that as against the Administrator-General, the attachment was void ab initio. At the date of the decree obtained by the plaintiff, the Administrator-General was entitled, by virtue of the High Court's order, to take possession of the estate of the deceased. As soon as that order was made, his right to possession became paramount, and excluded that of the defendant (the son of the deceased), who was then no longer entitled to recover payment of debts due to his father. A decree, therefore, subsequently obtained against the defendant could not, as against the Administrator-General, confer any rights on the decree-holder, who could not stand in a better position than the defendant, his judgment-debtor. Under ss. 278 and 280 of the Civil Procedure Code the Administrator General had the right to have the attachment removed, because he was exclusively entitled, at first by reason of the order under s. 18 of Act II of 1874 and subsequently by his letters of administration, to recover the debt, and was not subject to any decree which affected his title. Lalchand Ramdayal v. Gumtibai, 8 Bom. 140, distinguished. In consequence of his not complying with the requisition he was prosecuted under s. 574 of the Act. At the trial it was contended that, as the Administrator-General of Bengal was a public servant not removable from his office without the sanction of the Government of India, he could not, under the terms of s. 197 of the Criminal Procedure Code, be prosecuted without the sanction of such Government. Held, that the sanction of Government was not necessary for the institution of the prosecution, s. 197 of the Criminal Procedure Code not being applicable to a case like the present; that the Administrator-General of Bengal was in charge of the premises, in respect of which the offence charged was said to have been committed, not by virtue of his office, but by virtue of his appointment by the Court as administrator to the estate of the deceased; and that he was charged with having committed the offence in the latter capacity. Nando Lal Basak v. *N. 1. ——— Transfer to Administrator-General by Hindu executor—Hindu Wills Act (XXI of 1870), s. 5—Succession Act (X of 1865), ss. 179, 187, and 191—Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881). N L M, a Hindu, died on the 22nd February 1891, leaving property in Calcutta and leaving a will, dated 5th August 1889. The executors appointed by the will took out probate on the 17th March 1891, and on the 14th August 1893 executed a deed, by which they purported, under s. 31 of the Administrator-General's Act (II of 1874), to transfer all estates, effects, and interests vested in them to the Administrator-General of Bengal:—Held by PRINSEP and TREVELYAN, JJ., affirming the decision of SALE, J. (PETHERAM, C.J., dissenting), that the transfer was not a valid one. The executor of a Hindu testator has no power to transfer the property of the testator to the Administrator-General under the terms of s. 31 of Act II of 1874. That section applies only to the executors and administrators of persons of the class mentioned in s. 16 of the Act, that is to say, persons not being Hindus, Mahomedans, or Buddhists. Per PETHERAM, C.J., (contra) The transfer was a valid one. Even if s. 5 of the Hindu Wills Act (XXI of 1870) were sufficient to prevent such transfer to the Administrator-General under s. 30 of the Administrator-General's Act of 1867, which is by no means certain, a Hindu executor has power, if not since the passing of the Hindu Wills Act, at any rate since the coming into force of the Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), to transfer his interest and estate under a will to the Administrator-General, as constituted under Act II of 1874. The course of legislation with reference to the creation of the office of the Administrator-General and to his duties and powers reviewed and considered in construing Act II of 1874. ADMINISTRATOR-GENERAL OF BENGAL v. PREM LALL MULLICK . I. L. R. 21 Calc. 732

Held (on appeal) by the Privy Council, that the right of executors to devolve the property of their testator, with all powers and duties relating to its administration, upon the Administrator-General, conferred by s. 31 of Act II of 1874, is not confined to any particular class of executors or of estates. The right is given to any executor in whom estate of the deceased has been vested by virtue of the probate upon the one condition that the Administrator-General shall consent. It is not required that in a consolidating statute each enactment, when traced to its source, must be construed according to the state of things which existed at a prior time when it first became law: the object being that the statutory law bearing on the subject should be collected and made applicable to the existing circumstances: nor can a positive enactment be annulled by indications of intention, at a prior time, gathered from previous legislation on the matter. Executors, having obtained probate of the will and possession of the estate of a Hindu testator, executed a deed, purporting to be in terms of s. 31, Act II of 1874, transferring the property, vested in them by the probate, to the Administrator-General:—Held, reversing the judgment of a majority of the Appellate Court, and affirming that of the Chief Justice, that this transfer was valid under that section. 2. ——— Transfer by executors to Administrator-General. Where the executors of a will transfer their interest in the estate of the deceased under s. 31 of the Administrator-General's Act to the Administrator-General:—Held, that such a transfer would only transfer such powers of disposition over the

The admission of assets for the payment of a debt is also an admission of assets for the purposes of the suit, and extends to costs if the Court thinks fit to give them. There is nothing in s. 35 of the Administrator-General's Act (II of 1874) which qualifies or restricts or otherwise interferes with the right of a creditor to demand immediate payment of his claim in full when the realizable assets in the hands of the Administrator-General are sufficient for the immediate payment of all claims in full. The "rateable payment" referred to in the above section as well as in s. 282 of the Succession Act (X of 1865), and in s. 104 of the Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), is rateable payment out of the assets: it is nowhere provided that it shall be made out of the nett income of the estate or any other specific part of the assets. The language ("shall be liable to pay costs") used in cl. 1 of s. 35 of the Administrator-General's Act (II of 1874) shows that it was intended not to impose upon a creditor, to whom the condition of exemption was inapplicable, an absolute obligation to pay the costs of the suit, but to leave a discretion to the Court to relieve him of the obligation if the circumstances of the case required it. James v. Young, *L. ——— "Assets," meaning of—Revenue-paying estate. The Administrator-General is entitled to charge only one commission upon his commission. He is entitled to commission upon the entire collections of a revenue-paying estate. He is not entitled to commission on the value of the corpus of such part of the estate as is in the hands of a Receiver, but only on realizations made and handed over to him by such Receiver. Per SALE, J. The entire rents of a revenue-paying estate, when collected by the Administrator-General, become the "property" of the estate in his hands and the application of such property in the payment of revenue is a distribution of such property in due course of administration. In this sense the property of a deceased person applied in payment of revenue is "an asset" within the meaning of the Administrator-General's Act and as such is chargeable with commission. On her husband's death S continued to reside with his brothers, and was supported out of the income of the joint estate. After the death of S, and in the lifetime of M, N also became a childless widow. M died after her mother, leaving a son, R K. R K., attaining majority, sued to recover, with mesne profits, a 4-anna share of the ancestral estates to which he claimed to be entitled on his mother's death as heir of R, and from which he alleged he had been dispossessed by the representatives of R's brothers, whom he made defendants in the suit, joining B and N with them as co-defendants. Sometime after the institution of the suit, a petition was filed purporting to proceed from B and N, by which they admitted that the plaintiff was the heir of R, and that they had no defence to offer. Held, that N being the heir of R, R K had not, during her lifetime, any right to any part of the estate, and that his position was not altered by the petition purporting to proceed from B and N, such petition not amounting to a conveyance or disclaimer of title in his favour. In the English Common-Law Courts and, à fortiori, in the Courts of Law in India, where the pleadings are less technical, an admission of a fact on the pleadings by implication is not an admission for any other purpose than that of the particular issue, and is not tantamount to proof of the fact. The claim, however, was for the entire property. The defendant M filed a written statement setting forth that he had long ago willingly resigned all his rights in favour of the plaintiff, and that the suit had been instituted with his consent. Held, that this statement was only an admission by M of the plaintiff's title, which could not be usd against the other defendant L so as to entitle the plaintiff to a decree for the entire estate : that since L did not set up M's title to defeat the plaintiff, he could not be affected by M's disclaimer : and that the plaintiff could not be allowed in this suit to obtain M's share as his representative, for that would be to decree him the share on a title he never set up. *Amirtolall Bose v. three Mahomedan brothers, their three sisters were impleaded as defendants under s. 32 of the Civil Procedure Code, and two of the latter subsequently filed a written statement in which, after stating that they were on good terms with their brothers, the plaintiffs, and that the suit had been instituted with their knowledge and permission, they prayed that the suit might be decreed, subject to the condition that they would, on some future occasion, "settle with their own brothers as to their right and costs." The third sister did not appear to defend the suit. Held, that the Lower Courts were wrong in treating this admission as sufficient to entitle the plaintiffs to a decree for possession, not only of their own share, but also of the shares of their three sisters, it being a fundamental proposition connected with the administration of justice that a plaintiff cannot sue for more than his own right, and that no defendant can, by an admission of consent of this kind, convey the right or delegate the authority to sue for more than his own share in property. Lachman Singh v. *Tansukh, I. 1.—Question of adoption—Civil Procedure Code, s. 13—Res judicata—Award of committee of taluqdars appointed under s. 3 of the Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869)—Claim in former suit as adopted son—Estoppel—Evidence and proof of adoption—Evidence of adoption where lapse of time precludes proof—Presumption as to probability from conduct of parties. In a suit by the appellant against the respondent for a share in certain family property the question was whether the respondent had been in 1853 validly adopted into another family. Held, that the committee of taluqdars appointed under s. 33 of Act I of 1869 (Oudh Estates Act) to decide on claims for maintenance is not such a Court as is described by s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), and their award refusing the respondent maintenance in his own family on the ground that he had been adopted into another was therefore not res judicata in the present suit. The committee had no jurisdiction to decide the question of adoption, and the affirmation of their award by the Financial Commissioner could not give judicial validity to their decision on a point outside their jurisdiction. The fact that the respondent had in 1879 on the death of his alleged adoptive mother claimed to succeed her as the adopted son of her deceased husband and so secure the succession to which the predecessor in title of the appellant was then entitled, though he did not oppose the respondent's claim, did not estop the respondent from denying the alleged adoption in this suit. To establish the fact of a valid adoption it was essential for the appellant to show that it was made by the direction of the deceased husband of the adoptive mother, and that the respondent's father had given him in adoption. In the absence of proof, which the lapse of time made impossible, it was incumbent on the appellant, before any presumption that those conditions were fulfilled was justified, to establish an initial probability that the adoption was likely to have been validly made, and that the conduct of the parties cognizant of the facts had at least been consistent with such an hypothesis. But the evidence rather showed the contrary ; and no weight could be given to the statements of the respondent, as they fell short of founding an estoppel, and as he had asserted or denied the adoption just as it suited his purpose throughout the whole of the protracted litigation between the members of the family. 2.—Gift of a son by first husband in adoption by a Hindu widow after her re-marriage—Hindu Widow Re-marriage Act (XV of 1856), ss. 2, 3, 4 and 5. According to the text the right of a female parent to give her son in adoption results from the maternal relation and is not derived by delegation from her husband. Assuming that the mother has by Hindu Law a right to give her son in adoption the Hindu Widow Re-marriage Act (XV of 1856) does not afford any indication that the Legislature intended to deprive her of it. The right of guardianship, which under the provisions of Act XV of 1856, s. 3, may, under certain conditions, be transferred from the mother to one of the other relations of the child, does not carry with it the right to give in adoption, for that is a right which can only be exercised by a parent. Panchappa v. *Sanganbasawa, I. 3.—Hindu Law—Adoption by a widow—Alienation by the widow prior to the date of adoption—Right of the adopted son to dispute the alienation. Where a Hindu widow, who has inherited her husband's property, adopts a son, the adoption has the effect of divesting her of the property and putting an end to her estate as heir of her husband. The adoption has the same effect as her death with this difference that after the adoption she has a right of maintenance against the adopted son during the rest of her life. But the right of maintenance so long as it is not a charge on the estate or any portion of it, does not confer on her any right to the estate or entitle her to transfer it by way of sale or mortgage. Thus, if a widow, before the adoption, severs a portion of the inheritance therefrom and transfers it to a stranger, without any proper or necessary purpose binding the estate absolutely according to Hindu Law, the transfer, logically speaking, must cease to have any effect after the adoption, since it could only operate during the time that the estate was represented by her as heir and the result of the adoption is to terminate that estate. Lakshman v. *Radhabai, I. The evidence of marriage between D and P consisted of their statements that they were married to each other and of a statement by K that P was D's wife. K was convicted on the charge of adultery. Held, that such evidence, having regard not only to s. 50 of the Evidence Act, 1872, but to the principle that strict proof should be required in all criminal cases, was not sufficient to establish the vital incident to the charge of adultery, namely, the marital relation of D and P. Empress v. *Pitambur Singh, I. married. In a case of adultery, sexual intercourse must be proved ; the sexual intercourse required for adultery being the same identical thing as the sexual intercourse required for rape. The difference lies in the mode of proof : in rape, no presumption of sexual intercourse can be made ; in adultery, it can be from evidence pointing strongly to an inference of guilt. It is not necessary, therefore, that there should be direct evidence of an act of adultery, nor that the adulterer should know whose wife the woman is, provided he knew she was a married woman. 12. _____ Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 497, 498—Condonation. The complainant alleged that his father-in-law had detained his wife, and that with his help the accused married his wife, and since then had kept her in his house. The accused was convicted under s. 498, Penal Code. The Sessions Judge made a reference under s. 438, Criminal Procedure Code, to the effect that the conviction under s. 498, Penal Code, was bad, inasmuch as there was no evidence whatever to show that the petitioner enticed away the complainant's wife from her husband's or her father's house with intent to have illicit intercourse with her, and that there could not be any conviction under s. 497, Penal Code, as the circumstances of the case warranted the conclusion that the offence, if any, had been condoned by the husband by his omission to take any steps since the last six or seven years against the accused. The High Court agreed with the view of the Sessions Judge. JASIMADDIN SHEIKH v. ICHOHAK MISTRY. I C. W. N. 498

Therefore, where an accused person was committed to the Sessions to stand his trial on a charge, preferred by a husband, of rape, under s. 376 of the Penal Code, and the Sessions Judge at the trial added a charge of adultery under s.497 and acquitted the accused under s. 376, but convicted him of rape under s. 497 : Held, that the Sessions Judge had acted without jurisdiction. XX of the Penal Code ; and, where the validity of the marriage is questioned, mere proof of a de facto marriage would not be sufficient for a conviction under ss. 497, 498, Indian Penal Code. Where the complainant, a Mahomedan, married in nika form a woman who was the uterine sister of his wife, in the wife's lifetime, and also within four months and ten days of the death of the woman's former husband : Held, that the marriage being unlawful upon both these grounds under Mahomedan law, the performance of the nika ceremony alone would not give the complainant the status of a husband in relation to the woman, and the conviction of the accused under ss. 497, 498, Indian Penal Code, was bad. 6. ——— Possession by guardian primâ facie not adverse to the ward—Hindu Law—Reversioner, acceleration of succession of—No acceleration where gift to presumptive reversioner subject to obligations. It is well established that possession is never to be considered adverse if it can be referred to any lawful authority. Possession of the ward's property by a guardian will be presumed to be on behalf of the ward and will not in the absence of evidence to the contrary be held to be adverse to the ward. A gift by a Hindu widow of property in which she has a widow's estate to the presumptive reversioner has not the effect of accelerating the succession of such reversioner, if the transfer imposes on the reversioner obligations which would not have existed if the property had devolved on him by inheritance. 7. ——— Adverse possession between tenants-in-common—What constitutes adverse possession—Acts of exclusive possession—Ouster. The property in dispute belonged jointly to two brothers G and D. The plaintiffs obtained a decree on a mortgage-bond against D as manager of the family, and in execution of the decree the property was sold to V. When V sought to take possession of the property he was obstructed by G and he had to file a suit against G to remove the obstruction. In that suit it was held on the 29th November 1886 that V was entitled to recover possession by partition of a moiety of the property. The application to execute this decree was sent to the Collector who on the 11th of December 1895 effected the partition and made over symbolical possession to V of his share. This share was sold to plaintiff on the 18th March 1898. Meanwhile, on the 4th October 1894, G sold the whole of the property to defendant's father. The plaintiff eventually sued on the 4th October 1906 to recover possession of the property from defendant: the latter contended that the claim was barred by adverse possession. Held, that to entitle the defendant to add to the period of his own adverse possession (which was admittedly less than 12 years before the date of the present suit) the period of his vendor G's possession, it must be shown that the latter's possession was also adverse. That it could not be, so long as the decree for partition was alive and capable of execution as against G during the period of his exclusive possession, because during that period the decree forming the basis of the mutual rights and obligations of the parties prevented them from setting up any title contradicting it and thereby giving to either a new cause of action against the other. The question of adverse possession as between tenants-in-common depends not on a severance of the tenancy-in-common by partition, but on exclusive occupation by one co-tenant amounting to an ouster of the other.

11. ——— Professional misconduct—Hindu Law—Agreement—Compromise. In proceedings for administration of the estate of a Hindu, who died intestate, the appellant, an Advocate in the Court of the Resident in Mysore, acted as legal adviser for two groups of persons, whose succession depended on whether the property of the deceased was separate or joint: in the former case one of his clients was exclusively entitled to the whole estate; in the latter the members of both groups were entitled to divide the estate equally. By two agreements executed on 17th May and 22nd August 1899, the persons composing the two groups bound themselves to treat the estate as joint-property and divide it accordingly: and both agreements were attested by the appellant. On 24th March 1900, the person, who would, if the estate were separate property, be exclusively entitled being then dead, letters of administration of the estate were granted to his two sons. Shortly afterwards, one of the second group of persons, relying on the agreements, sued the administrators for a share of the estate and for partition. The case of the administrators as to the agreements was that they had been entered into under mutual mistake of fact, namely, under the belief that all the parties to them were entitled to share in the estates and that there was no consideration for them. The District Judge, and on appeal the Resident, held that the estate was separate property, but the Courts differed as to the agreements, the Resident holding that the compromises embodied in them were valid and binding. Charges of professional misconduct were made against the appellant in respect of the agreements to the effect that, knowing them to be invalid, he had allowed his clients to execute them, and had even attested them himself, without warning them that they were invalid and that he knew that the father of the administrators and his sons after him were alone entitled to the estate and yet allowed those clients to give away their rights by compromises. The appellant admitted that at the time the agreements were executed he thought them to be invalid. The charges were held to be proved and the appellant was suspended from practice for four months. Held, that the charges could not be sustained. At the time the agreements were made and up to the decision on appeal that the property was separate it was a matter of opinion whether they were invalid or not, and they were eventually held to be valid. There was nothing to show that the appellant had any knowledge or any means of knowledge, which his clients did not possess; they were fully aware of their legal position, and were under no mistake, but deliberately

12. ——— Charges against an advocate—Evidence—Conviction reversed. The appellant, a barrister and advocate of the Chief Court of Lower Burma, was charged before the said Court with gross professional misconduct, in that (i) whilst employed as an advocate for the prosecution in an abduction case he advised the prosecutor's family to say nothing about letters having been received from his abducted daughter and designedly withheld from the police and the senior advocate for the prosecution the fact that such letters had been received; (ii) that whilst the trial was proceeding, and while acting as an advocate for the prosecution, he suggested or hinted to the prosecutor that he should influence or attempt to influence by improper means a certain expert witness in handwriting to give evidence favourable to the prosecution in connection with certain letters produced. He was acquitted on the first charge, but convicted on the second and dismissed from his office as an advocate of the said Court:—Held, on an examination of the evidence, that he must be acquitted on the second charge also. Evidence given by the said senior advocate and by the Government advocate of the prosecutor's statements to them in the absence of the appellant, even if admissible, could not avail to contradict the prosecutor's sworn denial that the appellant had advised him to bribe. Other evidence given was wholly insufficient and the improbabilities of the appellant having acted as charged were very great. 13. ——— Dismissal of Advocate from his office for professional misconduct—Charge of advising client to bribe a witness—Evidence, admissibility of—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 154, 155, cl. (3), 157—Probabilities of case. The appellant, an Advocate of the Chief Court of Lower Burma, was charged with having, whilst employed as an Advocate for the prosecution of certain persons being tried at the Criminal Sessions of the Court for the abduction of a girl, the daughter of one Ohn Ghine, advised Ohn Ghine to bribe a European witness in the case, the Government of India expert in handwriting, and with being "thereby guilty of gross professional misconduct." The charge was founded on short and hurried conversations (one in the corridor of the Court and the other in the Court itself) with his senior conducting the case, who, without being able to give the exact words, stated that the appellant had used expressions to the effect that he (the appellant) had done a thing he had never done before and had advised Ohn Ghine to bribe the witness. The appellant denied having done so, or having used any such expressions as alleged. Ohn Ghine stated that the appellant had hinted to him that the witness should be "watched," and it was found as a matter of fact that he was watched, but there was no evidence that any one bribed or attempted to bribe him. The Chief Court, after examining witnesses and considering the evidence, found the appellant guilty and dismissed him from his office as an Advocate of the Court. Held, that the evidence of persons, to whom his senior had, in the absence of the appellant, repeated the conversations out of which the charge originated, though admissible in evidence under s. 157 of the Evidence Act, did not carry any further the determination of the real issue, whether the appellant did in fact advise Ohn Ghine to bribe the witness. Particulars given by his senior of interviews he had with Ohn Ghine, in the absence of the appellant and statements then made by Ohn Ghine; and particulars given by the Government Advocate of a conversation between Ohn Ghine and himself had been admitted in evidence by the Chief Court. Held, that such evidence was inadmissible for the purpose of impeaching Ohn Ghine's credit under s. 155, cl. (3), of the Evidence Act, or against the appellant, and that there was, therefore, no direct evidence except that of the senior Counsel conducting the case, and this, having regard to the fact that he could not remember the exact words used, and that the words deposed to were innocent or otherwise according to the context, and considering also the circumstances under which both conversations took place, was insufficient to support the grave charge made against the appellant. 14. ——— Power of High Court to deal with Advocate who is also a member of the English Bar—Constitution of Bench of High Court under Rules of Court—Rules 2, 180, 181, 197—Letters Patent, cls. 7, 8—Misconduct—Libel on the Judges—Contempt of Court—"Reasonable cause" for suspension. The High Court at Allahabad is not precluded from dealing under the Letters Patent of the Court with an advocate of the Court for misconduct by reason of his being a member of the English Bar. By rule 2 of the High Court Rules, a Bench of three Judges of the Court is a tribunal properly constituted to deal with a charge of misconduct made against an advocate of the Court. Rule 197 does not make a Bench of five Judges necessary in such a case, but only provides for cases in which the High Court may for good cause and without charge or trial suspend or remove from the roll any advocate of the Court. After an altercation, durin the hearing of a case, with one of the Judges of the High Court, in the course of which he alleged that he had been told by the Judge to "hold his tongue" and to "sit down" an advocate of the Court attempted to defend his conduct by publishing in a newspaper, of which he was the editor, an article which was a libel reflecting not only on the Judge before whom he had appeared but upon other Judges of the Court in their judicial capacity, and in reference to their conduct in the discharge of their public duties, and which amounted to a contempt of Court which might have been dealt with as such by the High Court. Held, that such publication constituted under cl. 8 of the Letters Patent of the Court "reasonable cause" for an order suspending the advocate from practising. Such publication was not excusable on the ground that it was written in his capacity as editor of the newspaper and not in his capacity as an advocate. The controversy arose from the misbehaviour of the advocate conducting a case before the Court, and the contempt of which he was found guilty was committed in the attempt to vindicate his professional conduct in a publication for which he was solely responsible. *In re Wallace, L. 15. ——— Unprofessional conduct—Arrangement with client without intervention of Solicitor—Threat—Compensation. An advocate of the High Court made an arrangement to do professional work for his client, without the intervention of a solicitor, at a fee of half the usual charge; and, on another occasion, he wrote to the same client to the effect that he had an offer to work professionally against her (the client) in a case the plaint of which was settled by him for her, and unless she paid him ten gold mohurs (five times the usual fee) for refusing the brief offered, he would take up the case against her. Held, that the advocate was guilty of highly unprofessional conduct. An order by the Prothonotary calling upon the Advocate General to show cause why a suit instituted by him should not be dismissed for want of prosecution is not one which is within the jurisdiction of the Prothonotary to make. ——— ss. 56, 57 (a) and (c) and 80—Landholder and tenant—Ejectment—Construction of document—Lease—Condition inconsistent with the provisions of the Tenancy Act. The plaintiff leased a village to the defendant. The defendant executed a kabuliat containing, amongst other provisions, a covenant for payment of the rent, amounting to R7,050, half in the month of Kartik and half in the month of Baisakh, as also, in the event of the revenue of the village being enhanced, enhanced rent to the extent of the increase in the revenue. The lessee also covenanted to plant 10 bighas kham per plough with indigo and to transmit the indigo to the plaintiff every year and also to render in kind other produce. The kabuliat further contained a provision that the lessee should not allow any tenant to acquire occupancy rights, and that on failure to observe this provision he should pay to the lessor R50 per plough as enhanced rent during the term of the lease. There was a further provision that, if the lessee failed to comply with the conditions of the lease, the plaintiff should have the power to dispossess him during the term of the lease. On failure of the lessee to observe the conditions above set forth, the lessor sued for and obtained a decree for his ejectment. Held, that the condition of forfeiture for non-payment of rent was inconsistent with the provisions of the Agra Tenancy Act, 1901, and the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain his suit for ejectment. But, inasmuch as the lease would expire by effluxion of time within a year from the date of the High Court's judgment, the lessee was not under s. 80 of the Act entitled to be restored to possession. On the contrary, the zamindar put in his own tenant. One of the daughters of the late occupancy tenant, however, gave a lease of half the holding, and the lessees ultimately sued the zamindar's tenant in a Civil Court to recover possession. Held, that the plaintiff's proper remedy was by suit under s. 79 of Act II of 1901, and as he had been out of possession for something like three years, his suit was barred by limitation. Dalip Rai v. *Deoki Rai, I. 1. ——— Agreement to refer matter in dispute between the parties to a Commission appointed by Court, and to abide by his report—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 150 and 151—Estoppel—Equitable estoppel. In a suit for possession of land, the plaintiff and defendants, while the case was in the Court of the Munsiff, applied that a pleader might be appointed as Commissioner to ascertain who held the land on either side of the khal in dispute, and agreed that, if the plaintiffs were found in possession of such land, they should get a decree; while if defendant No. 1 was found in possession the suit should be dismissed. Accordingly, a Commissioner was appointed, and the plaintiff's suit was decreed in accordance with the Commissioner's report. From this decision the defendants appealed to the Subordinate Judge, who remanded the case to the first Court. Held, that the agreement between the parties to abide by the decision of the Commissioner on the fact of possession was a valid

The Court decided accordingly and held that "the thak map itself showed that the plaintiff's predecessor and his co-sharers were disputing about the land and the survey map showed that it was newly formed chur land, and that in such circumstances the thak map could not be held sufficient evidence of plaintiff's title." Held, that in deciding the question on the basis of the thakbust map, in accordance with the agreement of the parties the Court acted as arbitrator, and hence no appeal lay from that decision. AJMERE COURTS REGULATION (I of 1877).

——— ss. 17, 18, 21, 36, 37—Reference to the High Court by the Chief Commissioner of Ajmere and Mairwara—Reference to Chief Commissioner by Commissioner of Ajmere—Appeal from Commissioner's decree made in accordance with Chief Commissioner's judgment. On an appeal from a decision in a civil suit of the Assistant Commissioner of Ajmere to the Commissioner of Ajmere, the latter, feeling doubtful on a question of the nature specified in s. 17 of the Ajmere Courts Regulation I of 1877, referred such question, under s. 36 of that Regulation, to the Chief Commissioner of Ajmere and Mairwara. The Chief Commissioner dealt with the case as prescribed in s. 37 of that Regulation, and returned it to the Commissioner, who dismissed the suit in accordance with the Chief Commissioner's judgment. The plaintiff preferred an appeal to the Chief Commissioner from the Commissioner's decision. The Chief Commissioner did not make any order on the memorandum of appeal admitting it, or directing that it should be registered, or that the respondent should be summoned, or that the appellant should appear on a certain day under s. 551 of Act X of 1877, but issued a notice to the appellant's counsel to appear on a certain day. The appellant's counsel appeared on that day, and the Chief Commissioner intimated that he was acting under s. 551 of Act X of 1877. The appellant's counsel then proceeded to address the Chief Commissioner, and was heard for some time, and then stopped in consequence of the Chief Commissioner resolving to refer to the High Court the question whether the appeal from the Commissioner's decision lay to him or to Her Majesty in Council. The Chief Commissioner subsequently referred such question to the High Court. Held by the Full Bench (SPANKIE, J., dissenting), on a reference by the Division Bench before which the Chief Commissioner's reference came, that such question arose "in the trial of an appeal" within the meaning of s. 21 of the Ajmere Courts Regulation I of 1877, and was properly referred to the High Court. Held by the Division Bench (SPANKIE, J., and STRAIGHT, J.), that the appeal from the Commissioner's decision lay, in this particular case, not to the Chief Commissioner, but to Her Majesty in Council. 1. ABATEMENT OF APPEAL.

1. ——— Death of respondent pending appeal—Suit for accounts of partnership—Application for substitution of representative made out of time—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 175 (c)—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 363, 582—Act VII of 1888, s. 66. A respondent, to whom a sum of money was due under the decree of the first Court, died pending an appeal to the High Court, and an application to have a representative substituted for him on the record was not made within six months after his death, and no sufficient cause was shown for the delay. Held, by the Judicial Committee, that the nature of the suit being such that the cause of action did not survive against the remaining respondents alone, the appeal abated under s. 368 (as amended by s. 66 of Act VII of 1888) and s. 582 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) and had been rightly dismissed by the High Court on that ground. 1. ABATEMENT OF APPEAL—contd.

2. ——— Abatement of appeal—Practice—Personal right to sue—Suit dismissed—Appeal by plaintiff—Decease pending appeal—Abatement—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 361, 582. A suit was brought by a plaintiff, who claimed to be the sister's son of a deceased, and as such the nearest reversioner, to set aside alienations made by the widow. The suit was dismissed on the ground that plaintiff had failed to establish the legitimacy of his mother, and the plaintiff appealed. While the appeal was pending, the plaintiff died. His son thereupon applied by petition to carry on the appeal, and his petition was allowed without notice being issued to the other parties. At the hearing of the appeal it was objected that the alleged right on which the suit was based was personal to the plaintiff, even assuming that he was the reversioner, and that, such right having ceased with plaintiff's death, the appeal abated. Held, that the right to sue in the case was a personal right and ceased with the death of the plaintiff, and the appeal abated. 5. ———— Legal representative—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 368, 582—Substitution—Suit by joint-owners to set aside revenue sale—Death of some of plaintiffs, respondents, during pendency of appeal. During the pendency of an appeal against a decree setting aside the sale of a joint estate for arrears of revenue, two of the plaintiffs, respondents, died and there was no application for substitution of the heirs of the deceased respondents, the right to sue not surviving against the other respondents. Held, that the appeal should abate inasmuch as the decree could not be reversed without the representatives of the deceased being placed on the record. That under no circumstances could the decree be affirmed as to the unascertained shares of some joint shareholders and reversed as to the unascertained shares of the other joint shareholders. 44. ——— s. 43—Civil Procedure Code (1882), ss. 492, 503—Order purporting to be passed under appealable section—Appeal entertained though Judge had no power to pass orders under the section as he purported to do. By s. 43 (4) of the Guardian and Wards Act, 1890, in case of disobedience to an order passed under sub-ss. (1) and (2) of that section, in relation to the conduct or proceedings of guardians, the order may be enforced in the same manner as an injunction granted under s. 492 or s. 493 of the Code of Civil Procedure. On a petition being presented to a District Court, asking that the guardians of certain minors, who had been appointed by the Court under the Guardian and Wards Act, might be removed, the Judge passed an order in which he purported to issue an injunction under s. 492 of the Code of Civil Procedure for the attachment of the estate of the minors and to appoint a receiver to manage the estate. On an appeal being preferred against the said orders, it was contended that the Judge must be taken to have acted under the Guardian and Wards Act, 1890, and that, inasmuch as no appeal was provided by that Act in respect of such an order, no appeal lay:—Held, that though both orders were passed without jurisdiction, the Judge purporting to have acted under s. 492 of the Code of Civil Procedure as regards the issue of an injunction, and under s. 503 as regards the appointment of a receiver, inasmuch as orders under either of these sections were appealable, the fact that the Judge had no power in this case to pass orders under them did not bar the High Court from treating the orders as having been passed thereunder for the purpose of entertaining an appeal against the orders, since there was no provision of law under which the Judge could pass orders attaching property or appointing a receiver without such orders being subject to appeal. Hurrish Chunder Chowdhry v. *Kali Sundari Debia, L. 49. ——— Land Acquisition Act (X of 1870), s. 15—District Judge's order on reference by the Collector—Questions of conflicting claims to title—Persons claiming interest in the compensation—"Apportionment," construction of the term. A Collector having acquired land under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act (X of 1870), and a question having arisen as to the right to the compensation,—each of two rival claimants claiming exclusive title to the whole of the compensation awarded,—the Collector referred the question to the decision of the District Judge under s. 15 of the Act. The District Judge having decided the question in favour of one of the claimants, the other appealed to the High Court. In appeal, it was contended that, as the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act apply to cases in which there was a dispute as to the apportionment of compensation, and not to cases in which there was no question as to apportionment, and in which each of the claimants laid claim to the entire amount of the compensation, the order passed by the District Judge was not appealable under the provisions of the Act, as there was no question of apportionment to be determined :—Held, that, looking to the language of s. 15 of the Land Acquisition Act (X of 1870), which clearly contemplates the reference of such a dispute being provided for in the subsequent part of the Act, and as there is no other provision in the Act made for it, the term "apportionment" in Part IV should be given a liberal construction, as including the case where the Court has to decide between rival claimants to the entire compensation. In another case the question was referred to a Full Bench, whether, when an award has been ordered to be filed, and judgment has been given in accordance with it under s. 327 of Act VIII of 1859, is such judgment open to appeal ? on the next day, an order was recorded by the Munsif that the parties were to file their objections to the award in one day, notwithstanding that s. 324, Act VIII of 1859, allows the parties ten days for such purpose. The plaintiffs, in accordance with that order, filed a petition of objection to the award, and an order was endorsed by the Munsif on this petition, that it should be laid before the Court with the papers of the arbitrator. The Munsif then gave his judgment, in which he went into the evidence, and, overruling the objection of the plaintiffs, gave a decision on the merits, which decision was in accordance with the award. Held, that such judgment, though in accordance with the award, was not final under s. 325 of Act VIII of 1859, but was open to appeal. 5. ——— In a suit in the Munsif's Court seven issues were fixed for determination, and the suit was then referred by agreement to three arbitrators. In coming to an award, the arbitrators took up specifically some of the issues framed in the Munsif's Court, and declined to enter into others. They determined the matter in issue between the parties, and the award was signed by the three arbitrators. Two of the arbitrators subjoined to the award a suggestion which, if acted on, would prevent the necessity of carrying out the award. The Munsif dealt with this suggestion as surplusage, and gave the plaintiff a decree in accordance with the award signed by the three arbitrators. In appeal it was contended that the award was not a legal one, and it was sought to set the decree of the Munsif aside; but the Judge found that the decree was in accordance with the award, and that he was precluded by s. 325 from disturbing the decision of the Munsif. On special appeal it was contended that the award was incomplete, as all the issues were not decided, and that the decree was not in accordance with the award, as it did not embody the suggestion of the two of the three arbitrators. Held, that the decree was in accordance with the award, and was, therefore, final under s. 325. The arbitrators were of opinion that the case of the plaintiff was fictitious, but nevertheless gave an award in his favour. The Munsif refused to uphold the award, on the ground that the arbitrators had been guilty of misconduct in giving an award contrary to the evidence. The Judge revised their decision, on the ground that the Munsif had no jurisdiction to refer to the evidence taken before the arbitrators in order to determine whether they were guilty of misconduct or not: he gave judgment in accordance with the award. Held, that his decision was not final under s. 325, Act VIII of 1859: the provisions of that section refer only to the Court by which the case is referred to arbitration. The Munsif was entitled to refer to the evidence before the arbitrators in order to determine whether they had misconducted themselves or not. PARESHNATH DEY v. NABIN CHANDRA DUTT

August 1875. On 3rd September, the same arbitrators granted an application for re-hearing. Before the matter was re-heard, one of the four died, and an order striking off the application was made by two of the surviving arbitrators. On 21st February 1876, an application was made to the Court to have the award filed, which was opposed. The Court overruled the objection, and ordering the award to be filed under s. 325, Act VIII of 1859, gave a decree to the plaintiffs. Held, that the award was not a valid and final award; that the decree passed thereon was not final; and that an appeal would lie. 35. ——— Finality of decree—Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), s. 325. A case was referred by consent to arbitration, and, after having been recalled into Court, was again referred. An award was made by the arbitrator and filed in Court. The defendants then objected on the ground that they had no notice after the second reference, and that they were not heard, and that the arbitrator had otherwise misconducted himself. These objections were disallowed by the Subordinate Judge, who gave a decree in the terms of the award. This decree was upheld by the Judge on appeal, who, however, found that the arbitrator had been guilty of misconduct. Held, that, if the decree of the first Court was not final under s. 325, Act VIII of 1859, all that the lower Appellate Court could do was to remand the case to be dealt with on its merits: but inasmuch as there had been an award and a decree thereon, which was final within the terms of that section, the lower Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal or to express any opinion on what had passed in the first Court. 36. ——— Judgment in accordance with award—Appeal—Defendants not all joining in reference to arbitration. The question whether under s. 522 of the Code of Civil Procedure an appeal will lie against a decree given in accordance with an award, depends upon whether the award upon which the decree is based is a valid and legal award. A plaintiff and some of the defendants to a suit applied to refer the suit to arbitration (certain other of the defendants not having joined in the application); an award was passed and a decree made in accordance with such award. The plaintiffs objected to the validity of the award, on the ground that all the parties to the suit had not joined in referring the suit to arbitration; the objection was dismissed, and judgment given in accordance with the award. Held, that an appeal would lie from a decree dismissing the objection and confirming the award. in a suit were referred to arbitration. An award was duly made and filed, and a decree passed in accordance with the terms thereof. Subsequently, on the application of the plaintiff in the suit, the Court passed an order setting aside the decree and the award, and ordering the case to be set down for hearing upon the ground that the proceedings in connection with the arbitration had been taken, and the award had been filed, without notice to the plaintiff, and that, although the award was alleged to have been made with the consent of the parties, the plaintiff had not consented to it. Held, that no appeal lay from such order. Howard v. Wilson, *I. The award was remitted, on the ground that the arbitrators had not determined the issues Nos. 1 and 2, 5 and 6 :—Held, that (i) the legality of an order remitting an award for the reconsideration of the arbitrators may be challenged on appeal against the decree ultimately passed ; and (ii) that the award ought not to have been remitted : there was no illegality on the face of it, and there was a decision on the whole matter in issue between the parties. Mathooranath Tewaree v. Brindaban Tewaree, *14 W. The plaintiffs then applied to the Subordinate Judge to have the award filed in Court under the provisions of s. 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The defendants came in and objected to the award on the following amongst other grounds :—(i) That the value of the property in suit was R500 only, and therefore that the application should have been made in the Munsif's Court and not in that of the Subordinate Judge ; (ii) that the agreement of submission was vague and indefinite, and did not clearly set out the matters in dispute. The Subordinate Judge overruled the objection without taking any evidence, and directed the award to be filed and a decree to be passed thereon. The plaintiff appealed. The defendants contended that no appeal lay, and that, if it did, it lay to the District Judge, and not to the High Court :—Held, that, assuming that in a proceeding under ss. 525 and 526 the Court has power to consider such objections as are mentioned in ss. 520 and 521, the above objections did not fall under either section, and therefore no appeal lay. The arbitrators being unable to agree upon the matters referred, the Court, on the application of one of them, appointed an umpire, and directed that the award should be submitted on a particular date. An award was made by the umpire and one arbitrator, without the concurrence of the other arbitrator, submitted to the Court which passed a decree in accordance with its terms. On appeal by the defendants in the case, the District Judge reversed

The plaintiff preferred objections to the award in so far as it directed payment by instalments, and the Court, holding that the arbitrators had no power to make such a direction, modified the award to that extent, under s. 518 of the Civil Procedure Code. On appeal, the District Judge, while allowing the power of the arbitrators to direct payment by instalments, reduced the number of instalments, which had been fixed. Held, that the decree of the first Court not being in accordance with the award, an appeal lay to the Judge, with reference to s. 522 of the Code. Per MAHMOOD, J. The word "award" used in the last sentence of s. 522 of the Code must be understood to mean an award as given by the arbitrators, and not as amended by the Court under s. 518. The words "in excess of or not in accordance with, the award," used in s. 522, were intended to enable the Court of appeal to check the improper use of the power conferred by s. 518. With the arbitrator's consent the defendant accepted such offer, and gave evidence on such oath. The arbitrator made an award in accordance with the evidence so given. The plaintiff objected to the award, not on any of the grounds mentioned in ss. 520 and 521 of the Civil Procedure Code, but on the ground that the procedure of the arbitrator had been illegal. The Court disallowed this objection, and gave a judgment and decree in accordance with the award. Held by STRAIGHT, J., that such decree, being in accordance with the award, was not appealable. Held by STUART, C.J., that the award not being open to objection on any of the grounds mentioned in ss. 520 and 521 of the Civil Procedure

The second defendant presented a petition praying that the compromise should be recorded, and a decree passed according to its terms. The Court made a decree in accordance with the prayer of the second defendant's petition. The first defendant appealed. Held, that an appeal lay, s. 375 of the Code of Civil Procedure merely covering cases in which all parties consent to have the terms entered into, carried out, and judgment entered up. Ruttonsey Lalji v. *Pooribai, I. 4. ARBITRATION—contd.

—Power of arbitrators—Error in law in award—Revision. References to arbitration are dealt with by Ch. XXXVII of the Civil Procedure Code under three heads :—(a) where the parties to litigation desire to refer to arbitration any matter in difference between them in the suit : in that case all proceedings are under the supervision of the Court ; (b) where parties, without having recourse to litigation, agree to refer their differences to arbitration, and it is desired that the agreement of reference should have the sanction of the Court : in that case all further proceedings are under the supervision of the Court ; (c) where the agreement of reference is made and the arbitration itself takes place without the intervention of the Court, and the assistance of the Court is only sought in order to give effect to the award. Under (a), the agreement to refer, and the application to the Court founded upon it, must have the concurrence of all parties concerned, and the actual reference is the order of the Court ; so that no question can arise as to the regularity of the proceedings up to that point. Under (b) and (c), proceedings described as a suit and registered as such must be taken in order to bring the matter—the agreement to refer, or the award, as the case may be—under the cognizance of the Court : that is or may be a litigious proceeding, cause may be shown against the application, and it would seem that the order made thereon is a decree within the meaning of that expression as defined in the Civil Procedure Code. The suit was brought in the Court of a Subordinate Judge, and, as to part of the relief asked for, was excluded from the cognizance of the Civil Courts by s. 77 of the Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887) ; and the question as to the jurisdiction of the Court was one of the issues in the case. The whole case was referred to arbitrators for decision. They submitted their award, in which amongst the other matters in dispute, they decided that the suit was cognizable by the Civil Court. Objections to the award were overruled, and an application to set it aside was refused by the Subordinate Judge, who, under s. 522 of the Civil Procedure Code, duly pronounced a decree in accordance with, and not in excess of, the award. The Chief Court admitted an application for revision of the decree under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, (affirming the judgment of a Full Bench of the Chief Court of the Punjab), that no appeal lay from this decree. Held, also, that the application for revision was incompetent. It was avowedly an application to set aside the award, and as such was barred by Art. 158, Sch. II, of the Limitation Act. But even if it had been in time, it could not have been brought under s. 622. The arbitrators had power to decide the question of jurisdiction, and they did so : they may have erred in law, but arbitrators may be judges of law as well as judges of fact, and an error in law does not vitiate an award. The award having been made, and not having been corrected or modified, and the application to set it aside having been refused, the Subordinate Judge had no option but to pronounce a decree in accordance with it.

74.—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 506, 522—Reference to arbitration—Petition not joined in by all the parties to the suit—Legality of reference. In a suit for partnership accounts, two out of three defendants petitioned the Court, under s. 506 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to refer the matters in dispute to arbitration. The representatives of the third defendant (who was then deceased) were not parties to the application, which was, however, granted. An award was made, and a decree was passed in terms of it. Held, that as the reference was illegal and the award in consequence was void, an appeal lay against the decree, notwithstanding that it was in conformity with what purported to be an award. The District Munsif passed an order in terms of the petition, and inspected the site, and considered the documents, and ultimately passed a decree in plaintiff's favour. Against that decree, defendant appealed. Held, that the District Munsif had acted as an arbitrator by consent of the parties, and no appeal lay from his decision, which must be looked upon as an award. And, as no reasons had been shown for setting aside the award under s. 521 of the Code, the decree must be taken to have been passed in accordance with the award, and, as such, upheld. One suit was brought in 1886 by one of the members of the family in the Court of the Political Agent in Bhopal for partition of the property within the jurisdiction of that Court; and the other was instituted in 1888 by another member of the family in the Court of the District Judge of Delhi for partition of all the property both within and outside British India. By agreement of parties "all matters in dispute" were eventually referred to an arbitrator, who was to determine "what joint property moveable and immoveable (except the immoveable property outside British India) was to be partitioned between the parties," one of the matters in dispute was the jurisdiction of the Punjab Court as to the moveable property outside British India. The arbitrator finally submitted his award on 29th June, 1900. Objections to it by the defendants, mostly on the ground of misconduct of the arbitrator, were overruled, and the District Judge of Delhi made a decree in accordance with the award for appeal and in the alternative a petition for revision under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code was preferred by the defendants to the Chief Court who held that the arbitrator must be taken to have decided the question of jurisdiction, and affirmed the decree as not being assailable either by appeal or revision, the case being governed by Ghulam Khan v. Muhammad Hassan, I. L. R. 29 Calc. 167; L. R. 29 I. A. 51. Similar proceedings were taken in the Sehore Court (where the suit was adjourned pending the decision by the Punjab Court) resulting in the decree in accordance with the award made by the Political Agent in Bhopal being upheld on appeal by the Court of the Agent to the Governor-General for Central India, and special leave being granted to appeal to the Privy Council with liberty to the Secretary of State for India in Council to intervene on the appeal. Held, by the Judicial Committee, that there was no "misconduct" of the arbitrator within the meaning of that expression in the arbitration sections of the Civil Procedure Code; and, inasmuch as it did not appear that the decree was in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award, there was plaintiffs valued the relief sought approximately at ₹510, and this was the only valuation stated in the plaint. The suit was filed in the Court of a first-class Subordinate Judge, who rejected the plaintiff's claim. Against this decision the plaintiffs preferred an appeal to the High Court:—Held, that as the approximate amount of the claim was stated in the plaint to be ₹510, that must be taken to be the value of the subject-matter of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction. The appeal, therefore, lay under ss. 8 and 26 of Act XIV of 1869, not to the High Court, but to the District Court. KHUSHALCHAND MULCHAND v. NAGINDAS MOTICHAND

The Court of first instance, finding that the claim to the former property was admitted and that to the latter was not denied, but resisted as barred by s. 13 of Act X of 1877, and holding it not to be so barred, made a decree returning the plaint to the plaintiffs that they might, after correcting it, file it either in the Revenue Court in regard to the profits of the former property or in the Civil Court for possession of the latter property. Held, that, although the claim of the plaintiffs was not either decreed or dismissed, yet as the right and title asserted by them to such properties was implicitly recognised by such decree, the defendants were entitled to appeal from it. 20. ——— Order dismissing suit in its present form—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 2, 13, 540—Judgment. The plaintiff in this suit sued for the possession of certain land, on the ground that he was the owner thereof in virtue of a purchase from N. The defendants claimed such land as owners, on the ground that it was included in a certain garden which they had previously purchased at a sale in the execution of a decree against N, and they also claimed it on the ground that they were lessees thereof under a lease from N, the term whereof had not expired. They also set up as a defence to the suit that it had been finally determined in a former suit between themselves and N, whom the plaintiff represented, that such land was included in such garden, and that consequently their title to such land as owners could not be questioned in the present suit. The Court of first instance held that such land was not included in the defendants' garden, and they were not the owners of it, but that they could not be ejected from it, as they were in possession under the lease, which had not expired, and that the question whether such land was included in the defendants' garden, and they were the owners of it, was not res judicata. It made a decree dismissing the suit in these terms: "Ordered that the plaintiff's claim as it stands at present be dismissed." Held (STRAIGHT, J., dissenting), that the defendants were entitled, under s. 540 of Act X of 1877, to appeal from such decree. 26. ——— Order rejecting appeal as barred—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 2, 540—Presentation of appeal beyond time. The plaintiff's claim to redeem certain lands was rejected by a Subordinate Judge on 21st December 1882. On the 1st February 1883, the plaintiff, who was an agriculturist, presented an application for review to the Special Judge appointed under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act. His application was rejected by that Judge, who was of opinion that the plaintiff's remedy lay in an appeal to the District Judge. The plaintiff was not informed of the result of his application to the Special Judge until the following May, at which time the Court of the District Judge was closed for vacation. On the 3rd June 1883 he presented an appeal on the opening of the District Court. The District Judge dismissed the appeal as barred by limitation. On appeal to the High Court, a preliminary objection being taken that a second appeal would not lie:—Held, that the order of the District Judge, having the force of a decree within the meaning of s. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act XIV of 1882, was appealable under s. 540 of the Code. The Munsif found both objections against them, and allowed the purchaser to execute the decree. Held, that the question was one between the parties to the suit or their representatives relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree, and that the decision of that question was a decree under ss. 2 and 244 of the Code and therefore appealable, and a second appeal lay therefrom to the High Court. jurisdiction of the District Munsif, who passed a decree for the plaintiff. On appeal it was held that the suit was not within the jurisdiction of the Court. The decree accordingly was reversed, and it was ordered that the plaint be returned for presentation to the proper Court. The plaintiff preferred this second appeal to the High Court:—Held, that the lower Appellate Court had not passed a decree within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code, s. 2, and that plaintiff's remedy was not by way of a second appeal, but he should have proceeded under Civil Procedure Code, s. 588. In a suit to have the defendants removed from the office of shebaits of an endowment, in which, should leave to institute it had been obtained under s. 18 of the Act, it was contended that, having regard to the provisions of s. 20 of Act XII of 1887, an appeal to the High Court lay from that order:—Held, that s. 20 of Act XII of 1887 was intended only to define the Court to which an appeal lies from a decree or order of a District Judge, and was not intended to define the right of appeal of the class of decrees or orders from which appeals shall lie, and that no appeal lay from the order passed under s. 18 of Act XX of 1863 granting the plaintiffs leave to institute the suit. The plaintiff applied to the Subordinate Judge for leave, under s. 44, rule (a), of the Civil Procedure Code, to join the claim for grain with the claim for possession of the house. The Subordinate Judge refused leave, and returned the plaint, with directions that the plaintiff should institute two suits for recovery of the house and the grain, respectively, in the Court of the Munsif. Held, that the Subordinate Judge's order was substantially an order rejecting the plaint on the ground that the plaintiff had joined a cause of action with a suit for recovery of immoveable property; that although this might have been a misapplication of s. 44, rule (a), of the Code, its effect was to reject the plaint; that such an order was a decree with reference to the definition in s. 2, and was appealable as such to the District Judge; and that therefore a second appeal lay in the case to the High Court, and that Court was not competent to interfere in revision under s. 622. Where those proceedings, however, were left to be taken in execution of the decree, the High Court, treating it as an error in point of form, and without deciding whether or not an objection, if it had been taken, would have been fatal to the proceedings, dealt with the case in the same way as was done in Gyan Chunder Sen v. *Doorga Churn Sen, I. 42. ——— Order declaring the rights of parties to a partition suit in certain specific shares—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 2 and 591. In a suit for partition the Court of first instance (the Munsif), on the 28th of February 1893, passed the following order :—" Plaintiff is entitled to a moiety of the lands described in the plaint and to a decree thereto. The lands set out in the plant will, therefore, be divided into two equal shares by a Civil Court Amin, and when that is done, one of these shares will be decreed to plaintiff with costs of the suit." On the 30th June 1893, the Munsif decreed the suit in accordance with the report of the Amin. On the 11th August 1893, the defendants filed an appeal from the final decree to the District Judge, and questioned the legality of the order of the 28th February 1893 :—Held, that the order of the 28th February 1893, declaring the rights of parties to a partition in certain specific shares, was a decree within the meaning of s. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and therefore appealable. Dulhin Golab Koer v. *Radha Dulari Koer, I. On the 31st May 1893, the Munsif decreed the suit, and made defendants Nos. 1 and 2 liable to pay certain sums of money in accordance with the report of the Commissioner. On the 14th July 1893, defendant No. 1 filed an appeal to the District Judge, in which he questioned the correctness of the preliminary order of the Munsif making him liable as a partner. Held, that the order of the District Judge, allowing the plea of defendant No. 1 and finding that he was not a partner, was right, though no appeal against the preliminary order had been filed within the period of limitation. Subsequently another application was made to the Original Court to refer the case to arbitration, and on the 10th May the record was sent to the arbitrator with directions to submit his award within seven days. On the 12th September, as the award had not been sent in, the Original Court passed an order recalling the record, and subsequently the award of the arbitrator, dated the 12th September, was filed. The Original Court thereupon forwarded the record to the Appellate Court for its decision. Objections were taken to the award, but overruled, and the Appellate Court passed an order directing the case to be sent back to the Original Court, with orders to pass a formal decree in accordance with the award of the arbitrator. Held, that a second appeal lay against the last-mentioned order, inasmuch as it amounted to a decree under the provisions of s. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code. The judgment-debtor opposed the application on the grounds that M's name had not been substituted for the names of the original decree-holders who had transferred to him, and that the transfers to M were inoperative, as the instruments of transfer had not been registered at the place where the substantial portion of the mortgaged property was situate in accordance with s. 28 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). It appeared that no notice had been issued to M under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code ; that he was dead ; and that his legal representatives had not been cited as required by law. The memorandum was returned for amendment on the ground that it contained language disrespectful to the Court of first instance. The appellant's pleader presented the appeal memorandum unamended, stating he wished to rely in the appeal on the passages objected to, and asking that the Court would, if necessary, strike them out. The District Judge thereupon rejected the memorandum of appeal under Civil Procedure Code, s. 543. 75. ———— Order refusing application for appointment of commissioner to effect division of property by metes and bounds in partition suit—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 178. The parties to a suit for partition entered into a compromise, which was recorded by the Court and by which their respective shares in the family property were agreed upon. An application was subsequently made for the appointment of a commissioner to effect an actual division of the property, but the Subordinate Judge dismissed it on the ground that the right to claim further relief in the matter had become barred by limitation. This order was reversed on appeal and the case was remanded by the District Judge for disposal according to law. An appeal was then preferred to the High Court against the order of remand, when it was contended that no appeal lay to the District Judge against the order of the Subordinate Judge :—Held, that an appeal lay. The order of the Subordinate Judge on the face of it purported to decide a question to be dealt with under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure and was therefore a decree within the meaning of that term in the Code, and that the party, against whom it was passed, was entitled to appeal therefrom. Even if there was no decree to be executed, and the Subordinate Judge erroneously supposed the matter to be one in execution, and held the application to be barred, such usurpation of jurisdistion could not make the order passed in consequence thereof less appealable than would have been the case had the order been passed in execution proceedings under a decree duly passed. Hurrish Chunder Chowdry v. *Kali Sundari Debia, L. 12. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 556, 558. An Appellate Court, the appellant not attending in person or by his pleader, instead of dismissing the appal for default, as provided by s. 556 of Act X of 1877, proceeded, in contravention of the provisions of that law, to dispose of the appeal on the merits, and dismissed it. The appellant preferred a second appeal to the High Court, contending that the Appellate Court had acted contrary to law. Held, that the Appellate Court had so acted, and its decision could only be treated as a dismissal for default, and that, so treating it, the proper and only course open to the appellant was to have applied under s. 558 for the re-admission of his appeal, and under these circumstances the second appeal would not lie. Nand Ram v. *Muhammad Bakhsh, I. The pleader applied to the Court for an adjournment on the ground that he had not time to fully prepare himself in the case. The Court refused to grant any adjournment, and dismissed the appeal for default:—Held, that the order of dismissal was bad. The mere fact that the appellant's pleader was not prepared to proceed with the case would not enable the Court to deal with the case as if there was no appearance at all for the appellant, and to dismiss the appeal for default. Per BIRDWOOD, J.—An order dismissing an appeal for default is one falling within the definition of a "decree" contained in s. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), and is, therefore, appealable. 10. DEFAULT IN APPEARANCE—contd.

26. —Counsel—Pleader—Dismissal of appeal for default—Appearance of appellants by pleader—Application for adjournment on ground of absence of counsel—Dismissal of appeal—No written judgment—Invalidity of order. On an appeal being called on for hearing in a District Court, the pleader for the appellants duly appeared, but asked for an adjournment. He did not withdraw from the case, but urged that, as the records were in possession of counsel who was retained to lead him and who was absent, he was unable to argue the appeal. The District Judge refused to grant an adjournment, and dismissed the appeal. Held, on appeal to the High Court, that, though it was, no doubt, open to the Judge to refuse the adjournment, he was bound to write a judgment and dispose of the appeal. He could not dismiss it for default. The appeal was accordingly remanded to him to be heard. Jamnadas Chhabildas v. Sorabji Kharsedji, I. L. R. 16 Bom. 27, followed. 27.—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 103, 108 and 558—Application to restore—Prevented by sufficient cause from appearing—Power of Court to restore where sufficient cause not shown. The affirmative provisions in ss. 103, 108 and 558 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that a plaintiff or appellant (as the case may be) may prove that he was "prevented by sufficient cause" from appearing or attending when his suit or appeal was called on and dismissed, do not imply the negative, namely, that an application for restoration cannot be granted unless sufficient cause is shown. The effect of the enactments is that, if sufficient cause is shown, restoration is made obligatory on the Courts, there being no discretion in the matter; whereas in other cases the merits of the applicant's case will form an important element for consideration when the Court is asked to exercise its discretion. 28. ——— Default—Dismissal of application for default—Revival—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 103, 318, 588, 647. There is no appeal against an order rejecting an application under s. 103 of the Civil Procedure Code for reviving an application under s. 311 of the Code, which has been dismissed for non-appearance of the judgment-debtor: Ningappa v. *Gangawa, I. 11. DISMISSAL OF APPEAL.

1. ——— Power of the lower Court to amend decree after dismissal of appeal—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 551 and 577—Practice. The dismissal of an appeal under s. 551 of the Civil Procedure Code (1882) leaves the decree of the lower Court untouched, neither confirmed, nor varied, nor reversed, and it remains the decree of the lower Court which can amend it, in order to bring it into accordance with its judgment. 2. ——— Effect of dismissal of appeal—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 206 551—Amendment or alteration of decree—Power of the High Court to amend decree of lower Court improperly drawn—Practice. The order of dismissal of an appeal under s. 551 of the Civil Procedure Code, being a final determination of, and an adjudication on, the questions raised in the appeal, is a "decree"; and in this respect there is no distinction between an appeal which is dismissed under s. 551 of the Civil Procedure Code and an appeal which is dismissed under any other section of the Code after full hearing. Royal Reddi v. Linga Reddi, I. L. R. 3 Mad. 1, referred to. When an appeal is dismissed under s. 551 of the Civil Procedure Code, or, in the case of a second appeal, when the decree is one of dismissal, the effect practically is to make the decree which is confirmed the final decree to be executed in the suit; and the High Court making such order has power to amend the decree of the lower Court which has been in effect confirmed by it, so as to bring it in conformity with the judgment, which is also confirmed. Kunhikutti v. Achotti, I. L. R. 14 Mad. 462, dissented from. A brought a suit against B in the Court of a Munsif. B objected to it on the ground that the suit had been undervalued, and, if properly valued, it would not lie in that Court. The Munsif overruled the objection, and gave judgment for the plaintiff on the merits. B appealed to the District Judge, who held that the proper value of the suit being over-rupees five thousand, he had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal, and he accordingly returned the memorandum of appeal to the appellant's pleader. A rule having been obtained against this order: Held, that the District Judge was bound to hear and dispose of the appeal, having regard to the provisions of s. 11 of the Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), and to determine, amongst other questions, whether the undervaluation of the suit had prejudicially affected the disposal of it on its merits. 6. ——— Effect of dismissal of appeal—Amendment of decree—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 206. Held, that the dismissal of an appeal under s. 551 of the Code of Civil Procedure is a decree and supersedes the decree of the Court below. The Court, therefore, which has taken action under s. 551 is the only Court which has jurisdiction to amend the decree under s. 206 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Uma Sundari Devi v. *Bindu Basini Chowdharani, I. The Subordinate Judge, being of opinion that the application could not be granted, inasmuch as the execution of the decrees was then barred by limitation, referred the case to the High Court under s. 617 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held, that the question could not be referred under s. 617 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), as the order applied for to the Subordinate Judge was appealable under s. 2 of the Code. The question raised by the application related to the satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of s. 244 of the Code. RANGJI v. BHAIJI HARJIVAN . I. L. R. 11 Bom. 57

That section is in terms confined to questions arising in the execution of decrees, which expression, as used in the said Code, means the enforcement of the decree on the application of one or other of the parties to it. Held, that an order of a Judge confirming the report of the Commissioner for taking accounts, by which he refused to require the defendants to give inspection of certain books, was not an order within the contemplation of that section, and was, therefore, not appealable. and which must relate in terms to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree. A judgment-debtor under a decree for foreclosure made an application to the Court two days after the expiry of time prescribed by the decree for payment of the amount due thereunder, in which she alleged that, by reason of the two previous days having been holidays, she had been unable to pay the money before, and asked to be allowed to deposit the same. Upon this application the Court passed the following order:—"Permission granted. Applicant may deposit the money." The money was deposited accordingly. Held, that the order was merely a ministerial act, and nothing more than a direction from the Judge to his subordinate official to receive the money, which, as it did not fall within either s. 244 or s. 588 of the Civil Procedure Code, was not appealable; and that the proper remedy of the decree-holder, assuming the deposit to have not been made in time, was to apply for an order absolute for foreclosure, which order would be subject to any steps the parties affected by it might take by way of appeal or otherwise. 27. ——— Questions between execution-creditor and persons placed on the record as representative of deceased judgment-debtor—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 244, 278, and 283. Certain decree-holders obtained during the lifetime of their judgment-debtor attachment of certain immoveable property as belonging to the said judgment-debtor ; but, on the decree-holders seeking to bring the property to sale, one S D came forward with an objection that the property was his, and was not liable to sale in execution of the decree in question. Pending the decision of the Court on this objection, the decree-holders applied to the Court to have the names of S D and the widow of the judgment-debtor (who died about the time the previous objection was filed) placed on the record as representatives of the judgment-debtor. S D filed a similar objection to this application also ; but both objections, being heard together on the 6th September 1892, were dismissed, and S D was placed on the record as representative of the deceased judgment-debtor. On appeal by S D against " the order of the District Judge of Jaunpur of the 6th September 1892," it was held that the order making S D a party to the execution proceedings as representative of the judgment-debtor rendered any order as to his former objection superfluous, and that order was appealable under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. 31. ——— Order staying execution of decree. All orders staying execution of decrees, whether passed by the Court which passed the decree or by the Court to which it is sent for execution, are "questions arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, and relating to the execution" thereof, within the meaning of s. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, and, as such, appealable, irrespective of the provisions of s. 588. Kristomohiny Dassee v. *Bama Churn Nag Chowdry, I. 33. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 2 and 244—Stay of execution—Amount of security required in granting of execution: a question in execution and order thereon appealable. The defendant in a redemption suit against whom a decree had been passed appealed to the High Court, which on his application granted usual stay of execution pending the appeal, upon security being given by him. The Subordinate Judge, feeling doubt as to whether the actual value of the property or the value stated in the plaint should be regarded in fixing the security, referred the case to the High Court. Held, that the question as to the amount of the security was a question relating to execution as contemplated by s. 244 of the Code, and, therefore, an order determining that question would be appealable under s. 2 of the Code. 34. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 244—Question as to what had actually been subject of sale—Question between judgment-debtor and auction-purchaser. Land was sold in execution of a decree of a subordinate Court, and a sale-certificate was issued. A question having subsequently arisen as to what had actually been the subject of the sale, the auction-purchaser applied to the Court, and an order was made by which the sale-certificate was amended. The judgment-debtor appealed to the District Court joining the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser as respondents. The appeal was dismissed on the ground that no appeal lay. Held, that the question was not one which could be determined under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 244, and consequently the decision of the lower Appellate Court was right. After the issue of the sale-notification, and three days prior to the date fixed for the sale, one of the judgment-debtors applied to have the sale stayed on the ground that an administration suit was pending with respect to the property of his father, the mortgagor, and also asked that a receiver might be appointed and arrangements made for the purpose of paying off the mortgage-debt and saving the property from being sold. On this application the Court passed an order staying the sale. Held, that such order was appealable, being a question arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed and relating to the execution of that decree, and as such coming within the provision of cl. (c), s. 244, Act X of 1877. Gambhirmal v. Chejmal Jodhmal, 11 Bom.

The Subordinate Judge held the undervaluation to be immaterial, and dismissed the application, whereupon the judgment-debtor appealed to the High Court. On the preliminary objection being there taken that no appeal lay from the order of dismissal: Held, that an appeal lay, the order having been made with reference to a question which related to the execution, and the question being one arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed and relating to its execution, within the meaning of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The property was knocked down to the two decree-holders jointly. An application was then made, to the officer conducting the sale, by one of the decree-holders auction-purchasers, but purporting to act in the name of, and on behalf of, the other auction-purchaser as well, asking that the purchase-money should be set off against the amount due under the decree, and that to that extent satisfaction of the decree should be entered up; he at the same time paid the auction fees. This application was made under the second clause of s. 294 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A receipt for the amount of the purchase money was given to the officer conducting the sale, and by him was forwarded to the Court of the Subordinate Judge, under whose orders the sale was held. The judgment-debtor subsequently made an application under s. 311 to the Subordinate Judge, asking to have the sale set aside. That application was rejected; but the Subordinate Judge, instead of confirming the sale, set it aside, on the ground that only one of the decree-holders auction-purchasers had put in the receipt under the second clause of s. 294, and directed a re-sale, and this notwithstanding that the other decree-holder admitted that the receipt had been presented on his behalf also. On appeal to the District Judge, the order of the Subordinate Judge was set aside, and an order passed confirming the sale. From this order the judgment-debtor appealed to the High Court, on the sole ground that no appeal lay to the District Judge. Held, that the order passed by the Subordinate Judge was appealable, as an order passed under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. On the property stood a house. After the sale, the auction-purchaser obtained possession of the house. (a) QUESTIONS IN EXECUTION—concld.

On appeal to the High Court, it was contended, first that the order passed by the Subordinate Judge was not appealable; and, second, that the second application could not be granted because the judgment-debtor had already applied to set aside the sale under s. 311 of the Code. Held, (i) that the order passed by the Subordinate Judge was appealable. Pita v. Chunilal I. L. R. 31 Bom. 207, followed; (ii) that the allegation in the first application being that the sale had been brought about by the fraud of the residents of the village where the lands were situate and where the decree-holder resided, the application must be regarded as an application under s. 244 and not under s. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882. Decree of the District Judge confirmed. Golam Ahad Chowdhry v. Judhister Chundra Shaha, I. L. R. 30 Calc. 142, followed. HARIHAR KANTA v. RAMA PANDU (1909) . . . . . I. L. R. 33 Bom. 698

60. ——— Liability of defaulting purchaser—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 244, 293, 306—Appeal from order under s. 293. At a sale in execution of a decree, a decree-holder, who had obtained leave to bid, was alleged to have made a bid through his agent of R90,000, but he shortly afterwards repudiated the bid, and did not pay the deposit. The property was put up for sale again on the following day under s. 306 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and was in due course knocked down for a smaller sum. The judgment-debtor filed a petition under s. 293 to recover from the decree-holder the loss by resale; the petition was rejected. On appeal:—Held, that the question at issue was one arising between the parties to the suit, and that an appeal lay against the order rejecting the petition. VALLABHAN v. PANGUNNI

The property was put up for sale again and knocked down for a smaller sum. The decree-holder sought in execution to recover the amount of the difference from the first purchaser. The Court of first instance made an order dismissing the application. Held,

The Appellate Court reversed so much of that decree as adjudicated upon the claim as between the plaintiff and B and confirmed its decree for possession against A, but awarded costs against B. Held, that B continued to be a defendant in the suit, and had a right of appeal under s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, and that he was not as "a person other than the defendant" bound to come in under s. 230, Act VIII of 1859. The third party appealed from that order. Held, that this was not a case in which an appeal lay under s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, inasmuch as the questions raised by the appeal were not questions between the parties to the suit. Several subsequent applications for execution were made, against one of which the objection was raised by some of the representatives of the judgment-debtor, that the decree was barred by lapse of time; but it was overruled by the High Court in special appeal. A further application was made, and was opposed by one of the representatives who had since attained his majority upon the ground that the suit was barred. The Munsif disallowed the objection. On appeal the Judge reversed his decision. Held, in special appeal, that the terms of s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, did not prohibit an appeal by a representative of a deceased judgment-debtor against an order passed in execution of a decree against his ancestor. The decree-holder attached and prepared to bring to sale certain villages of the judgment-debtor. These villages were included in a mortgage subsequently executed by the judgment-debtor in favour of third parties. Both before and after the mortgage the decree-holder received from the zamindar certain sums in consideration of his agreeing to postponements of the sale; also it was agreed between them at a date subsequent to the mortgage that interest should be computed at a higher rate than that provided by the decree. Subsequently the decree-holder sought to bring the land to sale, and in computing the amount then due gave credit for none of the sums so received, and calculated interest at the enhanced rate. The mortgagee objected that the computation was erroneous in both these respects, and the District Judge upheld his objection. The judgment-debtor took no part in the contest. Held, that the mortgagee was a representative of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code, s. 244, and that an appeal lay against the order of the District Judge. The judgment-debtor had resisted the purchaser's efforts to obtain possession in 1887, and set up in bar of the application in 1888 an oral agreement alleged to have been made between him and the purchaser. The application was rejected. Held, that the question was one relating to the execution of the decree between the representative of the original decree-holder and one of the defendants to this suit, and fell within s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and an appeal therefore lay against the order rejecting the application. The fund was not sufficient to satisfy all the decrees in full. The Principal Sudder Ameen, by order of the Judge, heard the various execution cases together, but recorded separate orders in each case for the rateable distribution of the fund amongst the creditors. On appeal by the first attaching creditor, who claimed to be entitled to be paid the amount of his decree in full, to which appeal the rival decree-holders, as well as the judgment-debtor, were made parties: Held (per PEACOCK, C.J., and SETON-KARR, JACKSON, and HOBHOUSE, JJ.), that the several orders of the Principal Sudder Ameen were substantially only one order made upon one hearing in one case, to which all the execution-creditors in the several suits were parties; that the rival decree-holders were properly made respondents in the appeal, and could not be struck out; and that the question to be determined being one between the rival decree-holders, and not between the parties in each suit, the case was not appealable under s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861. Held per

Prior to attachment, the talukhdars assigned their interest in eight annas of the hypothecated property to A, and made a maurasi lease of the remaining eight annas to him. The decree-holder then obtained an order for summary sale for the rent due for 1876-77. She then attempted to sell the property hypothecated to her. An objection by A was allowed. A regular suit was then instituted by the decree-holder against A, and it was declared that she was, after selling the talukh, entitled to sell the hypothecated property. The decree-holder again attempted to execute her rent-decree by attaching and selling the hypothecated property, and an objection by A was disallowed. Held, that no appeal lay from the order disallowing the objection, as A could not be considered to be a " representative " of the talukhdars within the meaning of s. 244, cl. or as the representative of third parties in which capacity he has been sued, the question between him and the attaching creditor is properly one between the parties to the suit under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. But where the judgment-debtor raises the claim or objection on behalf of third parties who are not represented before the Court, the order passed thereon must be regarded as an order under s. 280 of the Code, and the only mode in which that order can be contested is in a regular suit as provided by s. 283. In execution of a decree against a judgment-debtor in his private capacity, the judgment-creditor attached certain property. Thereupon the judgment-debtor objected that the property attached had been dedicated by him some time previous as wakf under a registered wakfnamah, and that he was only in possession as mutwali under the deed. The lower Court found that the document created a valid wakf, and allowed the objection and released the property from attachment. The judgment-creditor appealed. At the hearing of the appeal it was contended that no appeal lay, inasmuch as the order was one under s. 280 of the Civil Procedure Code. On behalf of the judgment-creditor it was contended that the order was one under s. 244, and was thus appealable. Held, that the order was one under s. 280, and that no appeal lay, the remedy of the judgment-creditor being by way of a regular suit as provided by s. 283. The Subordinate Judge upheld the trust, and ordered the properties to be released from the attachment. Plaintiff then appealed to the High Court, when objection was taken that no appeal lay against the order of the Subordinate Judge. The Court referred to a Full Bench the question whether an appeal lies against an order passed with regard to a party to a suit against whom there is a personal decree, in respect of a claim he may set up to hold property, attached in execution of that decree, as a trustee on behalf of third persons not parties to the suit. Held, that such a claim falls under s. 278, and not under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that no appeal lies against any order passed on it by the Court executing the decree. The claims of third parties, whether put forward by themselves or by a party to the suit,

The Subordinate Judge refused to execute the order, on the ground that the pauper suit was still pending in another Court. His order was affirmed by the District Judge on appeal. On second appeal to the High Court: Held, that there was no appeal, and, therefore, no second appeal, under s. 244, cl. setting aside the sale on the ground of fraud practised by the judgment-creditor on the judgment-debtor in connection with the sale, in consequence of which fraud the property had been sold at an undervalue: Held, that, inasmuch as the order involved the decision of a question between the parties to the suit relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree (the decree having been satisfied as far as the purchase-money bid by the decree-holder went, and the order cancelling that pro tanto satisfaction), though not appealable under the provisions of s. 588, cl. 16, was appealable as a decree under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), s. 2, and s. 244, cl. Having taken out certificates of sale, they applied to be put in possession of the property purchased by them, and obtained an order for possession. On appeal by the judgment-debtors against this order, it was held that no appeal lay, the order objected to being one under s. 319 and not under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The decree-holder as such was not entitled to the order for possession; he was only entitled to it in his character of auction-purchaser, which character did not bring him within s. 244 as a party to the suit. Subhajit v. *Sri Gopal, I. The Court made an order under Civil Procedure Code, s. 308, cancelling the sale and ordering a re-sale on the ground that the purchaser had not paid the full amount due on his purchase within the time limited. Held, that the petitioner was the representative of the decree-holder within the meaning of Civil Procedure Code, s. 244, and an appeal by him lay against the order. latter decree and sale, B obtained a decree against D or possession of certain lands which were proved to belong to this mehal. E then obtained a decree against B, in execution of which the right, title, and interest of B in this same mehal was sold and purchased by F. C and F transferred their rights under their respective purchasers to E. E thereupon, as purchaser of the right, title, and interest of B from F, applied to execute the decree obtained by B against D. This application was rejected by the Subordinate Judge but, on appeal to the District Judge, was allowed. B thereupon applied to the High Court to have this order set aside. Held, that the order should be set aside, inasmuch as no appeal lay from the order of the Subordinate Judge, the order not being a decree within the meaning of ss. 2 and 244 (cls. a, b, and c) of the Civil Procedure Code. The Subordinate Judge decreed the claim. On appeal, the District Judge rejected it. The plaintiff then preferred a second appeal to the High Court, which finally decided in plaintiff's favour. To this second appeal A was not made a party. In execution of the High Court's decree, A was dispossessed, but was restored to possession by the Subordinate Judge under s. 332 of the Code of Civil Procedure. This order was reversed on appeal by the District Judge. A thereupon applied to the High Court, under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to set aside the District Judge's order as ultra vires on the ground that s. 244 of the Code was not applicable to the case, A not having been a party to the appeal in which the decree under execution was passed, and that, therefore, no appeal lay to the District Judge from the Subordinate Judge's order:—Held, that, A being a party to the suit, though not to the appeal in which the final decree, was passed, the District Judge had jurisdiction to hear the appeal under s. 244, cl. Notice was served on the defendant's pleader but he did not inform the defendant:—Held, that the notice was not a good notice on the defendant and an ex-parte decree passed against the defendant on the date fixed should be set aside. In a suit between the widows of two brothers deceased, the plaintiff's title rested on this, that her and the defendant's late husbands, respectively, having been the sons of the same father, had, therefore, been sapindas to each other, so that the plaintiff as the widow of the one would be the heir of the other, expectant on the death of his widow. In this character she sued to have set aside an adoption made by the defendant. The Courts, however, found that the plaintiff's husband was an illegitimate son, and not a sapinda, and the suit was dismissed. The plaintiff, now appellant, on findings of fact that both the sons were illegitimate, urged that, though they could not inherit from their father, they yet could succeed to the estate of one another. Held, that this contention was so inconsistent with the case made below that it was now inadmissible. Srimati Dasi v. *Lalanmani, 2 B. Where an application for review of judgment is granted 'for any other sufficient reason' under s. 623 of the Code, the sufficiency or otherwise of the reason is not a good ground of appeal against the order and is not, notwithstanding the general provisions of ss. 584 and 591, a good ground of appeal against the final decree. 1. ——— N.-W. P. Rent Act (XVIII of 1873), s. 148 – Landholder and tenant—Suit in which right to receive rent is disputed—Determination of such right—Determination of Proprietary right. C sued J for the rent for certain land, alleging that he was the tenant of such land and J was his sub-tenant. J disputed C's right to receive rent for such land, alleging that he was not his sub-tenant but S's, and had paid such rent to S. Under the provision of s. 148 of Act XVIII of 1873, S was made a party to the suit. The Collector decided on appeal in the suit that S, and not C, was the tenant of such land, and J was her sub-tenant and not C's, and had paid such rent to S. Held, that there was no determination by the Collector of the title to such land, but as incidental to the question who was entitled to receive the rent, and consequently the decision of the Collector was not appealable to the District Judge. The Collector decided in favour of V. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge, making all three persons respondents. The District Judge reversed the decision of the Collector, and ordered the whole costs to be paid by V, who thereupon appealed to the High Court. Held, that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal so far as the party brought in under s. 148 was concerned, and, that being so, had

His right to receive rent was disputed by H, a third person, who was made a defendant under the provisions of s. 148 of Act XVIII of 1873. The suit was tried by an Assistant Collector of the second class, who decided that K was entitled to the rent. H and B appealed to the Collector, who decided that H was entitled to the rent. K thereupon appealed to the District Judge, who affirmed the decision of the Collector. K then appealed to the High Court. Held, that the Collector was not competent to entertain an appeal by H; that as between K and B all that the Collector could decide was whether or not K was entitled to the amount of rent claimed; that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain K's appeal; and that K's appeal to the High Court was not entertainable, the District Judge not having decided any question of proprietary right that would justify such an appeal. of certain alluvial land, the amount claimed not being above R100, and the tenant objected that there was a custom in the village by which rent was paid in case of alluvial land only on the culturable portion, and that during some of the years in suit a less portion of the land than that for which rent was claimed, had been culturable :—Held, that in such a suit the rate of rent was in dispute, and an appeal would therefore lie. Radha Prasad Singh v. *Pergash Rai, I. 8. ——— Landholder and tenant—Rent payable by tenant—Rate of rent. The criterion to be used in deciding whether an appeal lies under s. 189 of Act XII of 1881 is whether the decision would merely affect a particular year, or whether it would supply a plea of res judicata, if not appealed against, for all succeeding years in which the landlord and tenant stood in the same relation as when the suit was brought. Radha Prasad Singh v. *Mathura Chaube, I. 9. ——— Suit to recover arrears of revenue—"Rent"—"Revenue." The term "rent" as used in s. 189 of Act XII of 1881 cannot be extended so as to include revenue. Hence where a plaintiff sued to recover arrears of revenue alleged to be payable to the plaintiff by the defendants under an agreement, the defendants being admitted to be inferior proprietors of the land in respect of which the revenue claimed was payable, it was held that no appeal lay to the District Judge under s. 189 of Act XII of 1881. 14. ——— Order for partition by Assistant Collector confirmed by Collector—Objection subsequently made to mode of partition—Question of title. Upon an application made under s. 103 of the N.-W.P. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873) for partition of a share in a mehal, no question of title or proprietary right of the nature contemplated by s. 113 was raised, nor any serious objection made by any of the co-sharers, and the Assistant Collector recorded a proceeding setting forth the rules which were to govern the partition, and this proceeding was confirmed by the Collector under s. 131. An Amin was ordered to carry out the partition, and, in taking steps to do so, stated the principle upon which he proposed to distribute the common land. An objection was then for the first time raised by two of the co-sharers in the Court of the Assistant Collector to the inclusion of a particular piece of land in the partition, on the ground that it appertained exclusively to their share. This objection was disallowed by the Assistant Collector and, on appeal, by the District Judge : Held, that at the stage of the proceedings when objections were taken, it was too late to determine questions of title under s. 113 of the Act ; that accordingly the Assistant Collector could not be said to have done so ; that the objections could, therefore, only be regarded in the light of objections to the mode in which it was proposed to make the partition ; and that consequently there was no appeal from the order of the Assistant Collector to the District Judge, or from the District Judge to the High Court. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit on the ground that the fruit on such tree had not been removed, but found incidentally that such tree belonged to the plaintiff. The plaintiff appealed from the decree of the Court of first instance, and the defendants objected to the decree, contending that such tree belonged to them. Held, that inasmuch as the Court of first instance did not, in deciding that such tree belonged to the plaintiff, decide a question substantially in issue, it did not decide in this matter "against the defendants" within the meaning of s. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code, and as the decree was limited to dismissing the suit, the defendants as respondents were not qualified to take an objection which they could not have taken by way of appeal, and therefore the Appellate Court was not warranted by law in entertaining the objection taken by the defendants. The defendants appealed against that part of the decree which disallowed them their costs. The plaintiff filed a notice of objections to the decree on the merits as required by s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure (XIV of 1882). The lower Court of Appeal varied the decree by allowing the defendants their costs of suit, and held that the plaintiff was not entitled to file any objections. Held, that the Court of Appeal was in error in holding that the plaintiff's objections could not be entertained. S. 561 of the Code gives the respondent the power of taking any objection to the decree at the hearing of an appeal which he could have taken by way of appeal, provided he has filed a notice of his objections not less than seven days before the date fixed for the hearing of the appeal: and this power is independent of whether an appeal lies on a mere question of costs. 44. ——— Whether a respondent can prefer a cross-objection against another respondent—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 561. In a suit for possession of land the Court of first instance decreed the plaintiff's suit in part against the defendants. Some of the defendants appealed to the High Court without making the other defendants party-respondents. The plaintiffs preferred a cross-objection under s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The non-appealing defendants were added as respondents by an order of the High Court to the effect that they might be made parties without prejudice to any objection that might be urged on their behalf at the hearing of the appeal. The non-appealing defendants at the hearing of the appeal contended that they were wrongly made parties, and that the plaintiffs could not urge their cross-objection as against them. Held, that, as a general rule, the right of a respondent to urge cross-objections should be limited to his urging them against the appellant, and it is only by way of exception to this general rule that one respondent may urge a cross-objection against another respondent, the exception holding good, among other cases in those in which the appeal of some of the parties opens out questions which cannot be disposed of completely without matters being allowed to be opened up as between co-respondents; but as there was nothing exceptional in this case, the plaintiffs were not allowed to urge their cross-objections against the non-appealing defendants. 53.—Cross-objection—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 561—Cross-objection against co-respondents—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 5. X brought a suit against A, B, C, D, E and others, to recover a sum of money and to enforce a security bond given by E. The suit was decreed against E alone. On appeal by E, X preferred a cross-objection, under s. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code, against A, B, C and D, without giving them notice. Held, that there was nothing in the suit which could be taken as an exception to the general rule that the right of a respondent to urge cross-objections under s. 561 of the Code should be limited to his urging them against the appellant only. Anwar Jan Bibee v. *Ajmut Ali, 15 W. The lower Appellate Court improperly directed the Court of first instance to settle the matter in dispute in accordance with a decision of a former Judge in the matter, and allowed the parties ten days after the return of the case to file objections. Held, that the proceeding of the lower Appellate Court was unwarranted by law, and must be taken to be, if anything, an interlocutory order, and, as such, unappealable. On the 24th July 1888, an application for review was filed with the Registrar. Various reasons prevented the two Judges from sitting together until the month of March 1889. On the 6th March the matter came up before them when a rule was issued, calling upon the respondents to show cause why a review should not be granted, and made returnable on the 28th March 1889. On that day one of the Judges had left India on furlough, and the rule was taken up, heard, and made absolute by the other of the two Judges sitting alone. Held, that the order was not a judgment within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent; and that no appeal would lie therefrom, the order being final under s. 629 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Bombay and Persia Steam Navi-

47. ——— Stay of execution pending suit between decree-holder and judgment-debtor—Appeal from order staying execution—Civil Procedure Code, s. 243. An appeal lies from an order passed under s. 243 of the Civil Procedure Code, staying execution of a decree pending a suit between the decree-holder and judgment-debtor. The plaintiff instituted a suit against defendant for recovery of money and other relief, which was ultimately dismissed in appeal by the High Court, and he was ordered to pay defendant R1,000 as costs of the litigation. Plaintiff then brought this suit against defendant in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Farukhabad, and while it was pending, defendant applied to the Court to execute his decree for costs. Plaintiff then applied for stay of the execution, and his application was refused by the first Court, but granted by the District Court. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court from such order as an order returning a plaint to be presented to the proper Court. Held, that such order could not be regarded as one to which Art. 6 of s. 588 of Act X of 1877 was applicable. That relates to orders returning plaints for amendment or to be presented to the proper Court passed by a Court of first instance, and not to an order by an Appellate Court upon an appeal to it from the decree of a Court of first instance on general grounds. It subsequently made an additional order directing that the case "should be returned for re-trial." 85. ——— Decree—Judgment—Objections by respondent to decree—Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 13, 540, 561, 584. In a suit to obtain possession of certain property, and to set aside a deed called a deed of endowment (wakfnama) on the ground that the defendant had fraudulently obtained its execution, the defendant pleaded (i) that the deed was a valid one, and (ii) that she was in possession of the property in satisfaction of a dower-debt, and her possession could not be disturbed so long as the debt remained unsatisfied. The Court of first instance held that the deed was invalid, but that the defendant was entitled to remain in possession of the property till her dower-debt was satisfied, and the Court passed a decree which merely dismissed the suit, without embodying the finding as to the deed. On appeal by the plaintiff to the District Judge, the defendant filed objections under s. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code in regard to the first Court's decision that the deed of endowment was invalid. The Judge dismissed the plaintiff's appeal, affirming the finding as to the dower, and, refusing to decide the question of the validity of the deed as being unnecessary for disposal of the claim, disallowed the defendant's objections. The defendant appealed to the High Court. Held, by the Full Bench (OLDFIELD and MAHMOOD, JJ., dissenting), that if a decree is, upon the face of it, entirely in favour of a party to a suit, such decree being the thing which by law is made appealable, and nothing else, that party has no right of appeal therefrom. If, in the judgment of which such decree is the formal expression, findings have been recorded upon some issues against that party, and he desires to have formal effect given to them by the decree, so as to allow of his filing objections thereto under s. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code or of appealing therefrom under s. 540, he must take steps under s. 206 to have the decree properly brought into conformity with the judgment, so that there may be matter on the face of it to show that something has been decided against him ; but if he fails to take this course, the decree, though in general terms, will stand good as finally deciding the issues raised by the pleadings upon which the ultimate determination of the cause and the decree itself rested. The findings in a judgment upon matters which subsequently turn out to be immaterial to the grounds upon which a suit is finally disposed of, as to the plaintiff's right to any portion of the relief sought by him as declared by the decree, amount to no more than obiter dicta, and do not constitute a final decision of the kind contemplated by s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, also, that in the present case the Judge was right in holding that the question as to the validity or otherwise of the deed of endowment was wholly immaterial. The judgment of STRAIGHT, J., in Lachman Singh v. Mohan, I. L. R. 4 All. 497, approved and followed. Per OLDFIELD, J., contra, that the decree, to agree with the judgment and fulfil the requirements of s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, should contain the material points for determination arising out of the claim and material for the decision thereon ; that if this has not been done, the defect is a good ground of appeal, notwithstanding that the decree, on its face, may be altogether in favour of the appellant, and notwithstanding that he may not have applied for amendment of the decree under s. 206 or for review of judgment ; and that, in the present case, the defect in the decree would afford a good ground of appeal. Per MAHMOOD, J., that, inasmuch as the provisions of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code relate as well to the trial of issues as to the trial of suits, and in the present case the validity or otherwise of the deed was a matter directly and substantially in issue between the parties, and was adjudicated upon, the finding of the first Court upon that issue was not a mere obiter dictum, but would be binding upon the defendant as res judicata notwithstanding the fact that the suit against her was dismissed on the ground that she held possession of the property in lieu of dower ; that whatever has the force of res judicata is necessarily appealable ; that the word "from" as used in s. 540 or s. 584 and the expression "objection to the decree" in s. 561, refer not only to matters existing upon the face of the decree, but also to those which should have existed, but do not exist there ; and that the defendant in the present case was aggrieved or injured by the omission in the decree of the first Court, and was therefore entitled to file objections to it, and, for the same reason, to appeal to the High Court from the decree of the lower Appellate Court. Also per MAHMOOD, J., that it was doubtful whether the reliefs contemplated by ss. 206 and 623 were open to the defendant ; but that, even conceding that she ought to have sought her remedy under either of those sections, her neglect to do so did not make her incapable of obtaining the same result by the exercise of her right of appeal. Anusuyabai v. Sakkaram Pandurang, *I. The defendant appealed and the Subordinate Judge held that the objection was well founded, and should prevail; and, setting aside the award, he remanded the case for trial. On appeal, the Appellate Court remanded the case for the purpose of a local investigation being held at the cost, in the first instance, of the plaintiff. The lower Court thereupon made an order that the plaintiff should deposit the costs of the local investigation, and, on default being made by the plaintiff, it dismissed the suit. The order of remand was found to be invalid as made without jurisdiction. Held, that all proceedings taken by the Court of first instance alter the remand and pending the hearing of the appeal against the remand order were null and void, inasmuch as the jurisdiction of that Court to hear the case upon remand depended upon the validity of the remand order. An appeal, therefore, lay from the order of remand, notwithstanding the Court of first instance had subsequently made what purported to be a final decree in the case. The claim was for R530-7-3, as money had and received by the defendant to the plaintiff's use. The Subordinate Judge did not deal with the case under his Small Cause Court jurisdiction, but tried it as an ordinary suit, and gave the plaintiff a decree for R441-0-7. On appeal, the District Judge was of opinion that the claim had been recklessly overvalued, and he held, therefore, that the suit was one cognizable by a Small Cause Court, and that the appeal was barred. Held, reversing the decision of the lower Appellate Court, that as the claim or "demand" exceeded R500—the pecuniary limit of the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes under s. 5 of Act XI of 1865—and as the case was not "tried under" the Act, s. 21 gave no finality to the decree of the Subordinate Judge, which was, therefore, appealable. 128.——— Order on further directions varying report of Commissioners under decree for account in partnership suit——Time for appeal—Letters Patent, cl. 15—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 588, 591. A decree was passed in a partnership suit directing (inter alia) the taking of an account. The Commissioner having taken the account and made his report, an order was made, on further directions, varying it in certain respects. Subsequently a final decree was passed, founded in part on the order on further directions. An appeal was filed against the final decree, in which objection was taken to the order on further directions. It was contended that no appeal having been filed against the order on further directions, as might have been done under s. 15 of the Letters Patent, so much of the appeal as arose out of that order had been barred by lapse of time. Held, that the order passed on further directions was not appealable under Chapter XLI of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and that it fell, therefore, under the concluding portion of s. 591 of the Civil Procedure Code, and any error in it might subsequently be set forth as a ground of appeal against the final decree. Per JENKINS, C.J.—Assuming that the order on further directions was a judgment within the meaning of s. 15 of the Letters Patent, and as such appealable, the contention of the respondent cannot prevail, as that would not deprive the appellants of their right to appeal under the Code. 129. ——— Order made in the course of execution proceedings and not appealed against—Right to raise the question as to its propriety in the appeal against the final order. A decree having in 1894 been passed in favour of the plaintiff in a suit against a number of defendants for the recovery of land with mesne profits, the amount of such mesne profits was ordered to be fixed in execution. In 1897, an order was passed declaring that all the defendants were liable jointly and severally for such mesne profits, which order was not appealed against. Later in the same year a Commissioner was appointed to ascertain the amount of the said mesne profits, and in due course a final order in execution was passed by the District Court. At the time when the last-mentioned order was passed, certain of the defendants desired to re-open the question of their joint liability, but were not permitted to do so. Held, that, even assuming that the order declaring the defendants to be jointly and severally liable was one from which an appeal could have been preferred,—as to which there might be some doubt,—it was a determination of one of the questions which had to be determined before the particular application for execution could be finally disposed of; and the question of the propriety of the order was one that need not be at once raised by appeal, but could be raised in the appeal against the final order. Caussanel v. Soures, *I. 130. ——— Order confirming appointment of head of muths—Nomination by a pandaram under a decree—Revocation of such nomination by the pandaram's successor. The pandaram of a muth, being empowered under a decree to nominate a person to be the head of a subordinate muth, subject to the approval of the subordinate Court, made a nomination, and died before the subordinate Court had come to a determination as to the fitness of his nominee. His successor in office was brought on to the record, and revoked his nomination and made a fresh nomination. The subordinate Court treated the fresh nomination as a nullity, and made an order confirming the first. The pandaram appealed against this order. Held, (i) that an appeal lay against the order complained of; (ii) that the person whose nomination had been confirmed was a necessary party to the appeal. 131. ——— Order in execution of decree of Privy Council—Civil Procedure Code, s. 610. Land was put up and purchased in execution of a decree, and the sale was confirmed, and the purchaser put into possession. On appeal against the order confirming the sale, the High Court set the sale aside. The purchaser preferred an appeal to the Privy Council, pending which he had to give up possession of the land, but security was furnished under an order of the Court by persons not parties to the suit for its re-delivery to him and for payment of mesne profits in case of his appeal being successful. On appeal, the Privy Council reversed the order of the High Court. The purchaser was accordingly replaced in possession of the land, and he applied for execution in respect of the mesne profits against the respondents in the Privy Council and the sureties. The Court of first instance dismissed the application as against the sureties, and limited the applicant's claim against the others to the net income of the land, less the cost of management, and allowed him no interest. Held, that the order must be taken to have been made under Civil Procedure Code, s. 610, and an appeal lay therefrom. 154.——————Purchase of mortgaged property by mortgagee—Application by purchaser to recover possession as against defendants who held possession under prior sale based on prior mortgage—Question rasied whether purchaser could recover possession without first paying defendants amount of prior mortgage—"Execution and enforcement of decree"—Appeal. A mortgagee obtained a decree directing the sale of property in the possession of certan defendants, subject to a prior charge thereon. At the sale in execution of that decree, the mortgagee purchased the property. He now sought to recover possession of it from the defendants, the question raised being whether, under the terms of the decree, he was entitled to be put into possession without paying the amount of the prior charge, the defendants so dispossessed being at liberty to bring a separate suit to enforce the charge. Held, that the question thus raised between the decree-holder (purchaser) and the defendants related, within the meaning of s. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, to the execution or enforcement of the decree against these defendants, and an appeal lay from an order passed thereon. Per MOORE, J.—Even if the purchaser had not been also the decree-holder, he would have been a representative of a judgment-creditor. Per BHASHYAM AYYANGAR, J.—The order was not the less an order under s. 244 because it was also passed under ss. 318 and 334 of the Code. 156.— Order under s. 372, Civil Procedure Code—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 2, 372, 588 (21)—Order allowing objection under s. 372—Order decree. A suit was brought by one Mewa Ram against Tej Singh and others. That suit was decreed ex parte. An application was, however, made by the defendants under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure, as the result of which the ex parte decree was set aside and the suit reinstated. Upon the restoration of the suit, one Chabeli Ram, claiming to be an assignee of the rights of the original plaintiff, applied under s. 372 of the Code that his own name might be substituted as plaintiff for that of Mewa Ram. The plaintiff did not oppose this application. But the defendants objected, and the application was rejected. Subsequently, on the same day, the suit was dismissed. Chabeli Ram appealed against the Court's order rejecting his application under s. 372 of the Code. His appeal was allowed, and his name was brought on the record. This appeal seems to have been treated as also an appeal from the decree in the suit, and the Court made an order under s. 562 of the Code, remanding the suit for trial on the merits. Held, on appeal from this order, that no appeal lay to the lower Appellate Court from the order of the Court of first instance allowing the defendant's objection to Chabeli Ram's application under s. 372 of the Code of Civil Procedure; neither was such order a decree within the meaning of s. 2. Moti Ram v. *Kundan Lal, I. One of the defendants in the suit applied to have B removed from the office of receiver on the ground of his alleged mismanagement of the estate. Nor does an appeal lie from the order of the District Court confirming such nomination, but the District Court ought, when the question is raised, to decide on the necessity for the appointment of a receiver, the words "or pass such other order as it thinks fit" in s. 505 being sufficient to include that question, and not merely to decide the fitness or otherwise of the person nominated to the office of receiver. W. N. 895; s. c. I. L. R. 32 Calc. 1023,* referred to. Per Mukherjee, J. An Appellate Court does not act without jurisdiction when it makes an erroneous order of remand, but merely commits an error of law, in making an order of a particular description in the exercise of its undoubted jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the litigation. Such error may be cured by consent. It cannot be laid down as an inflexible rule of law that under all circumstances the final disposal of a suit must be taken to be the delivery of the judgment. When a litigant has the right to choose between two remedies, which are not co-existent, but alternative, and adopts one of those remedies, his act at once operates as a bar as regards the other and the bar is final and absolute. After having taken the full benefit of an order of remand, it is not open to a party to turn round and appeal against it. BAIKUNTHA NATH DEY v. SALIMULLA BAHADUR (1907) . . . . 12 C. W. N. 590

4.—— Judgment of lower Appellate Court not complying with the requirements of section—Order to be made on second appeal. Where, on second appeal, it is found that the judgment of the lower Appellate Court does not fulfil the requirements of s. 574 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the proper order to be made on second appeal is one setting aside the decree, and remanding the case to the Appellate Court to be disposed of according to law. Krishna Reddi v. Srinivasa Reddi, 4 M. H. C. 174, not followed. If the Judge of the Court to which the case remanded is the Judge who heard the appeal in the first instance he is not bound to re-hear the appeal if he considers that the case might be properly disposed of without so doing. In such a case his writing a judgment satisfying the requirements of s. 574 will be a sufficient compliance with the order to dispose of the case according to law. But where the Judge of the Court to which the case is remanded is not the Judge who heard the appeal in the first instance, as also in cases where the Judge, though the same, considers such a course necessary for a proper disposal of the case, a re-hearing is necessary for a disposal of the case according to law. On the 4th June 1877, the Court of first instance refused the attachment on the ground that the decree directed the sale of certain immoveable property for its satisfaction, and awarded no other relief. The order of the Court of first instance was affirmed by the lower Appellate Court on the 4th August 1877. Act X of 1877, repealing Act VIII of 1859 and Act XXIII of 1861, came into force on the 1st October 1877. On the 13th November 1877, the decree-holder applied to the High Court for the admission of a second appeal from the order of the lower Appellate Court, on the ground that the decree had been misconstrued. Held, that an appeal was admissible under the repealed Act VIII of 1859, under the provisions of s. 6 of Act I of 1868. Held, also, that the order of the lower Appellate Court was also appealable under Act X of 1877. Consolidation Act (I of 1868), s. 6. On the 25th June 1879, a Subordinate Judge made an order setting aside the sale of immoveable property in the execution of a decree from which an appeal was preferred, under Act X of 1877, to the District Court, on the 25th July 1879, before Act XII of 1879 came into force. Held, that, as the appeal would not have lain at all had Act XII of 1879 been in force on the date of its institution, s. 102 of that Act did not apply; but as the appeal lay to the District Court under the law in force on that date, it was competent to dispose of it under the provision of s. 6 of Act I of 1868. In deciding whether an order is appealable under that section the point for consideration is not what that decree in the suit decided, but what the order decided. Monmohini Dasi v. *Lakhinarain Chandra, I. The consequence of the grant of the certificate is that there shall be an appeal to the High Court from the award, or any part of the award, and this must mean that there shall be a right to appeal or, to use the language of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), that an appeal will lie to the High Court and the respondents will be entitled to object in the manner provided by s. 561 of the Code. The result of the adjudication was that there was a formal expression of an adjudication by the lower Appellate Court upon a right claimed by the defendants (appellants in second appeal) and thus there was a decree within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code from which an appeal would lie. 18. ——— Review of judgment. An application under s. 311 of Act X of 1877 to set aside a sale in execution of a decree having been made by the judgment-debtor, the Court executing the decree (Subordinate Judge) disallowed the objections, and passed an order confirming such sale. The judgment-debtor subsequently applied to the Subordinate Judge for a review of judgment. The Subordinate Judge, without recording his reasons for granting such application, and without recording an order granting such application, irregularly proceeded at once to pass an order setting aside such sale, without cancelling the previous order confirming it. The auction-purchaser appealed to the District Judge. That officer, treating the appeal as one from an order granting an application for review of judgment, entertained it, and set aside the Subordinate Judge's second order. Held, that the District Judge was not justified in entertaining such appeal, such order not being one granting an application for review, but one setting aside a sale, and, as such, not appealable. Before it was knocked down to him, A, the decree-holder, who had obtaind permission to bid for and purchase such share, and who was a co-sharer of such share, bid the same sum as that for which it was knocked down to M, claiming the right of pre-emption. 21. ———— Order confirming sale before time for filing objections has expired—Appeal from order—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 311, 312—Objection to sale—Legal disability. Although s. 312 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates that objections to a sale under s. 311 shall be filed before an order for confirmation is passed, if the precipitate action of the Court has led to the confirmation of a sale before the time allowed for filing objection to the sale has expired, whether or not that Court could entertain such objections after confirming the sale, the High Court on appeal is bound to interfere, and to see that objections which by law the appellant is empowered to make are heard and determined before a sale of his property is confirmed or becomes absolute. An application under s. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code, on behalf of a judgment-debtor who was a minor, was rejected on the ground that the applicant did not legally represent the minor, and the Court thereupon confirmed the sale. A second application to the same effect was then filed on behalf of the minor by his guardian, and was rejected on the ground that the Court had already confirmed the sale, and was precluded from entertaining objections after such confirmation, prior to which no proper application had been filed. From this order the judgment-debtor appealed. Held, that the appeal must be considered to be one from an order under the first paragraph of s. 312 of the Civil Procedure Code, confirming the sale after disallowing the appellant's objection, and that it would, therefore, lie. The order disallowing the application and the order confirming the sale were set aside and the case remanded for disposal of the appellant's objections. BALDEO SINGH v. KISHAN LAL . I. L. The Sessions Judge, although he disagreed with the verdict, declined to submit the case to the High Court under s. 263 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The Local Government thereupon directed the Legal Remembrancer to appeal under s. 272 of the Code, and in pursuance of this direction an appeal was preferred by the Junior Government Pleader. Held, that the appeal was duly made. Held, further, that the judgment passed by the Court of Session, following the verdict of a jury acquitting the prisoner, was a judgment of acquittal within the meaning of s. 272. Held, also, that there being an acquittal on the charge of murder, the appeal lay. 7. ——— Ground for setting aside acquittal on appeal—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 272. It is not because a Judge or a Magistrate has taken a view of a case in which the Local Government does not coincide, and has acquitted accused persons, that an appeal by the Local Government must necessarily prevail, or that the High Court should be called upon to disturb the ordinary course of justice, by putting in force the arbitrary powers conferred on it by s. 272 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The doing so should be limited to those instances in which the lower Court has so obstinately blundered and gone wrong as to produce a result mischievous at once to the administration of justice and the interests of the public: Held, therefore, the Local Government having appealed from an original judgment of acquittal of a Sessions Judge, that, as such judgment was an honest and not unreasonable one, of which the facts of the case were susceptible, such appeal should be dismissed. The Sessions Judge postponed passing any final decision upon this application, until it became apparent that the charge under s. 206 was not sustainable on the evidence to be adduced by the prosecution. After hearing the evidence for the prosecution on this charge, the Sessions Judge, without going into the defence or recording the opinions of the assessors, passed an order of acquittal. At the same time, he rejected the application for framing new heads of charge, holding, on the authority of Queen-Empress v. Appa, I. L. R. 8 Bom. 200, that he had no power to frame any new charges in addition to the original charge. He was also of opinion that the dismissal of a complaint, which the prosecutor had previously filed against the accused on the very charges which were sought to be added, was also a sufficient ground for rejecting the application. The Local Government appealed to the High Court against the order of acquittal. At the hearing of the appeal it was contended on behalf of the Crown that the Sessions Judge was wrong in refusing to frame additional charges as sought by the Public Prosecutor. The accused's counsel objected to this point being raised by Government in an appeal against an order of acquittal. Held, per TELANG, J., (i) that under s. 417 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882) it was not open to Government to appeal to the High Court on the ground of the Sessions Judge's refusal to add new charges, or against any other interlocutory order made during the trial. (2) That the Sessions Judge ought to have finally disposed of the application for framing additional charges at the very commencement of the trial when it was made, especially because it did not purport to be based on any facts other than those contained in the deposi-

The witness stated that he had refused to pay the bribe at that time, but that on the following day, when the accused stated that the weighing would only be properly proceeded with if the present were made, he consented, and the accused agreed to send his peon (who was charged with abetment) for the money. According to the witness, the peon came to his shop, and was paid ₹50 by his accountant by his order, and in his presence, and in the presence of two other persons who were in the employment of the witness. The prosecution evidence, if true, only showed that these two other persons had witnessed the transaction without taking any part in it. The accountant and the other two persons were called and gave evidence, as second, third and fourth witnesses respectively, for the prosecution. Some entries in account books were relied on in support of the oral evidence of the witnesses, but they were challenged by the accused as false entries, and they were, in fact, discredited by the High Court. The writer of them was called as the fifth prosecution witness, and they had been made after the alleged transaction was over. The Sessions Judge, in his charge to the jury, warned them against accepting the evidence of accomplices without corroboration in material particulars. He said that the first and second witnesses were certainly accomplices, and that the third, fourth and fifth witnesses had put themselves practically in the same position as accomplices and that their evidence also required corroboration before the jury could act on it. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and the Sessions Judge acquitted the accused. Upon an appeal being preferred by the Public Prosecutor against the acquittal, on the ground of misdirection : Held, that, as regards the first and second witnesses, the charge was accurate ; but that the description of the third, fourth and fifth witnesses was a misdirection. Held, further, that it was not obligatory on the High Court, in such circumstances, to order further inquiry or a retrial, and that the High Court could consider the evidence, and if, after so doing, it formed the opinion that the evidence could not in any proper view of the case, support a conviction, it would not alter or reverse the order of acquittal. Queen-Empress v. Magan Lal, I. Held, that an Appellate Court, when it acts under s. 423 (1) (b) of the Code of Criminal Procedure and "alters the finding, maintaining the sentence," is not bound in respect of such altered finding by such conditions precedent as, for example, sanction or complaint by the person aggrieved, as would be binding on a Court of first instance. Hence, when, in appeal from a conviction under s. 182, the Appellate Court altered the conviction to one under s. 500 of the Indian Penal Code, it was held that this was within the competence of the Appellate Court, notwithstanding that there was in existence no complaint by the person aggrieved. Held, also, that under the circumstances of the case, there was not so material a difference between the two offences, both arising out of the same facts, as would necessarily lead to the conclusion that the accused had been prejudiced by the alteration of the finding by the Appellate Court. has been sent for and perused under s. 423, the Appellate Court is competent, under the last-mentioned section, to dispose of the appeal, though the appellant is not present and is not represented by a pleader. The only limitation placed by s. 423 on the powers of the Appellate Court is that the Court, before disposing of the appeal, must peruse the record, and, if the appellant is present or is represented by a pleader, the appellant in person must be heard, or the pleader must be heard: so held by the Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting). Held by MAHMOOD, J. (contra), that the principles of audi alteram partem and ubi jus ibi remedium, and the provisions of s. 422 of the Code, as to notice of appeal, imply that, where an appeal is admitted and not summarily rejected under s. 421, the appellant must have a real opportunity of being heard; that in the passage in s. 423, "after perusing the record and hearing the appellant or his pleader if he appears," the word "he" refers to the pleader, and must not be read as "either of them"; that, in any case, the words "if he appears" make it a condition precedent to the disposal of an appeal under the section that the appellant is heard, or at least has the choice of appearing; that the word "appears" refers to the personal appearance of the appellant; and that an appeal which has been admitted cannot be disposed of unless the appellant is before the Appellate Court, or can be heard within the meaning of s. 423. Semble: per MAHMOOD, J., but the High Court in appeal is competent to send for a criminal to appear before it to explain a difficulty in his case. 11. ——— Duty of Court to fix date of hearing—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 278. A general notice posted in a Sessions Court-house that appeals will be heard for admission only on the first Court-day after the date of presentation of the appeal is not a compliance with the requirement of s. 278 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, viz., that a reasonable time shall be fixed, within which the appellant, his counsel or agent may appear and be heard in support of the appeal. MALAN v. THE QUEEN . . . I. L. R. 5 Mad. 11

12. ——— Rejection of appeal for non-appearance—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 278. When a criminal appeal has been rejected without hearing the appellant's pleader, and it is afterwards proved to the satisfaction of the Appellate Court that an adequate excuse has been made for the pleader's non-appearance, it is open to the Appellate Court to re-hear the appeal on its merits. ANONYMOUS . . 7 Mad. Ap. 29

13. ——— Omission to fix time for hearing—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 278. When the Appellate Court did not fix a reasonable time for the appearance of the appellant or his counsel as required by s. 278, Act X of 1872, the error was held to invalidate the proceedings. In the matter of the petition of HURI PERSHAD 24 W. 14. ——— Power of Court on appeal—Stolen property—Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 517, 520. An order passed under s. 517 of the Code of Criminal Procedure may be revised by a Court of Appeal, although no appeal has been preferred in the case in which such order was passed. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. AHMED I. L. R. 9 Mad. 448

15. ——— Powers of Appellate Court to alter finding of Court of first instance—Criminal Procedure Code, s. 423. Where the Court of Session had tried, convicted, and sentenced an accused person under s. 409 of the Penal Code, and the High Court was of opinion that the conviction was not sustainable under that section, the Court refused to alter the finding, under s. 423 of the Criminal Procedure Code, to a conviction for some other offence for which the accused had not been charged or tried. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. IMDAD KHAN I. L. R. 8 All. 120

16. ——— Alteration of conviction on appeal. When on appeal against a conviction for one offence, it became apparent that, although there was not sufficient evidence to support the conviction, there was evidence which might have led to the conviction of the appellants for an essentially different offence, with which they had not been charged, the Court declined to consider that evidence with a view to altering the conviction of the appellants. Queen-Empress v. Parbati, Weekly Notes, 1887, 130, referred to. 20. ——— Powers of Appellate Court in disposing of appeal—Appellant bound to show ground for interference—Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 421, 423. A convicted person appealing is not in the same position before the Appellate Court as he is before the Court trying him : he must satisfy the Appellate Court that there is sufficient ground for interfering with the order of conviction ; and if no such ground is shown, it is the duty of the Appellate Court not to interfere. EMPRESS v. SAJIWAN LAL . . . I. L. R. 5 All. 386

21. ——— Powers of Appellate Court in cases of trial by jury when there has been misdirection—Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 138, 423, and 137. An accused in a trial by jury is entitled to the verdict of the jury on questions of fact, and where a verdict is vitiated owing to misdirection by the Judge, the Appeal Court has no option but to set aside the verdict and direct a re-trial. Were the Appeal Court to go into the facts in such a case, it would be substituting the decision of the Judges of that Court for the verdict of the jury, who have the opportunity of seeing the demeanour of the witnesses and weighing the evidence with the assistance which this affords, whereas the Judges of the Appeal Court can only arrive at a decision on the perusal of the evidence. Makin v. Attorney-General of New South Wales, [1894] A. C. 57, referred to. S. 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure does not warrant an Appeal Court, in a case where there has been misdirection in a charge to a jury, going into the evidence with a view to decide whether there is sufficient evidence to justify a conviction. Under s. 418, an appeal in a case tried by a jury lies on matters of law only, and the Appeal Court has no power to try the accused on matters of fact. The word "erroneous" in cl. (d) of s. 423 must not be read as "wrong on the facts," but must be read in connection with the words that follow as meaning that the verdict has been vitiated and rendered bad or defective by reason of a misdirection or a misunderstanding of the law. 22. ——— Power of the Appellate Court to alter a finding of acquittal into one of conviction—Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s. 423. The Appellate Court can, under the provisions of s. 423 of the Criminal Procedure Code, in an appeal from a conviction, alter the finding of the lower Court and find the appellant guilty of an offence of which he was acquitted by that Court. Held*, that the alteration by an Appellate Court of a sentence of a fine of R50 or in default two months' simple imprisonment to a sentence of six months' rigorous imprisonment was an enhancement of the sentence, and, as such, prohibited by s. 423 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Queen-Empress v. *Dansang Dada, I. 26. ——— Power of Appellate Court to order a re-trial—Criminal Procedure Code (V of 1898), s. 423, cl. (b). A conviction and sentence under s. 211 of the Penal Code by a Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the case was on appeal set aside, and a new trial under the same section was directed by the Sessions Judge. It was contended that the power to order a new trial under s. 423, cl. (b), of the Criminal Procedure Code could only be exercised when the conviction and sentence were set aside for want of jurisdiction in the trying Magistrate. Held, that there is nothing in s. 423, cl. 27. ——— Appellate Court, duty of—Presumption. Per WHITE, J. The sound rule to apply in trying a criminal appeal where questions of fact are in issue is to consider whether the conviction is right, and in this respect a criminal appeal differs from a civil one. In the latter case the Court must be convinced before reversing a finding of fact by a lower Court that the finding is wrong. PROTAB CHUNDER MUKERJEE v EMPRESS 11 C. L. R. 25

28. ——— Duty of Appellate Court trying criminal appeal. If the Judge of the Appellate Court has any doubt that the conviction is a right one, whatever the original Court has done, the Judge of the Appellate Court should discharge the accused. In this respect the duty of an Appellate Court in criminal cases is not similar to that of an Appellate Court in civil cases. In the latter case the Court must be satisfied before setting aside an order of the lower Court that the order is wrong. Protab Chunder Mukerjee v. Empress, 11 C. L. R. 25, followed. The Court is bound, in forming its conclusions as to the credibility of the witnesses, to attach great weight to the opinion which the Judge who heard them has expressed upon that matter. 31. ——— Appeals from conviction on trials by jury. REG. v. RAMASWAMI MUDLIAR . . . . 6 Bom. Cr. 47

32. ——— Improper admission of evidence—Discharge of prisoner on appeal—Conviction set aside. Where the High Court on appeal found the evidence against a prisoner insufficient to support the conviction, and would, if the case had been before them on the facts, have reversed the conviction if the case had been tried without a jury, they ordered the verdict to be set aside, and the prisoner to be discharged, though where a verdict is set aside on appeal they can order a new trial. 39. ———— Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s. 431—Appeal by accused against conviction—Power of revision by High Court. Two persons M and N were convicted of criminal breach of trust, and each was sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment and fine of ₹1,000. Both prisoners filed an appeal to the High Court. N died pending his appeal. On M's appeal the High Court passed an order acquitting him and reversing his conviction and sentence. Thereupon one of the relatives of the deceased N applied to the High Court to set aside the conviction and sentence passed in his case and order the fine to be refunded. Held, that on N's death his appeal abated under s. 431 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882). That was the only charge before the Magistrate. On appeal, the Sessions Judge acquitted them of rioting, but convicted them under ss. 448 and 323 of the Penal Code of house-trespass and hurt. Held, that the convictions by the Sessions Judge should be set aside; that the offences were distinct and separate offences, which should have formed the subject of separate charges, and that the accused had been prejudiced by the omission of those charges. V of 1831, s. 26, cl. 2.* An order of the High Court at Calcutta, under s. 26, cl. 2, of Bengal Regulation V of 1831, dismissing a Munsif for corruption in the exercise of his functions as Judge, is final, and there is no jurisdiction in the Judicial Committee to admit a special appeal therefrom. In the matter of SREE MOHUN GHUTTUCK . . 13 Moo. 3.——————Award under Act XVIII of 1848—Administration of private estate of Nawab of Surat—Statutes 7 and 8 Vict., c. 69 ; 3 & 4 Will. IV, c. 41. An act of the Legislature of India—(XVIII of 1848)—empowered the Governor in Council of Bombay to administer the private estate of the late Nawab of Surat, and it was by s. 2 enacted "that no Act of the said Governor of Bombay in Council in respect of the administration to, and distribution of, such property, from the date of the death of the said Nawab, should be liable to be questioned in any Court of law or equity." No provision was made for an appeal from the Governor's decision. In pursuance of the power conferred by this Act, the Government Agent at Surat, to whom the matter was referred, made an award distributing the estate in certain shares among the heirs of the deceased, which award was confirmed by the Governor in Council. On an application by a claimant dissatisfied with the award to the Judicial Committee, for leave to appeal from the Governor in Council's confirmation of the award :—Held, that the award was not such a judicial act as to come within the operation of s. 3 of the Statute 3 & 4 Will. 6. ——— Order confirming sale in execution—Order made on appeal—Letters Patent, cl. 39—24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, s. 15. Certain property having been sold in execution of a decree, the judgment-debtor applied to have the sale set aside. This application was rejected; but a review of the order rejecting it was subsequently granted, and the sale set aside, and an application by the auction-purchaser for the cancelment of the order setting aside the sale was refused. Thereupon the purchaser applied by petition to the High Court, praying that the order made on review might be reversed. In his petition he submitted that "the sale ought to have been confirmed" when the application of the judgment-debtor to have it set aside was first rejected, but the petition did not contain a formal prayer for confirmation of the sale. A rule, however, was granted, calling on the judgment-debtor to show cause why the order reversing the sale should not be set aside and the sale confirmed, which rule, after argument, was made absolute. The judgment-debtor having obtained leave to appeal to the Privy Council from the order making the rule absolute, the purchaser objected that such order was not appealable under cl. 39 of the Letters Patent, 1865, on the ground that it was not an order "made on appeal." Held, that as the purchaser had obtained a rule calling on the judgment-debtor to show cause why the sale should not be confirmed, and had allowed that rule to be made absolute, he could not contend that the order making the rule absolute was not an order made on appeal. Semble: Orders made by the High Court under s. 15 of 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, are subject to appeal to the Privy Council. 15. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 595 (a)—"Final decree." Certain persons interested in an award applied under s. 525 of the Civil Procedure Code to have it filed in Court. The Court made an order under s. 526 "that the claim of the plaintiffs be decreed." The defendants appealed to the High Court from this "decree." The High Court held that the appeal would not lie, and suggested to the plaintiffs to apply to the lower Court to give judgment according to the award, and a decree to follow it. Thereupon the plaintiffs made an application to the lower Court of the nature suggested, but styled it one for review of judgment. The lower Court granted the so-called review of judgment. The defendants appealed from the order of the lower Court contending that the "review of judgment" had been improperly granted. On the 23rd June 1880 the High Court held that the order of the lower Court was not appealable, not being one passed on review of judgment, but on an application to give judgment and decree in accordance with an award which had been filed in Court. The defendants applied for leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council from the order of the High Court of the 23rd June 1880. Held, that such order was not a "final decree" within the meaning of s. 595 (a) of the Civil Procedure Code, and therefore it was not appealable to Her Majesty in Council. On appeal by the plaintiff, the High Court passed a decree setting aside the decree of the Court of first instance, declaring the alleged adoption to be established, and remanding the suit for the trial of the remaining issues. On the ground that a decree for an account was not final within that section, the High Court refused, under s. 601, to grant the defendant a certificate. that the Court had refused the certificate without good cause, while leave could also be granted on the latter ground, if established, to make this application was, perhaps, more convenient than to appeal from the order of refusal. Held, also, that the real question in this suit having been the liability of the defendant to account to the plaintiff upon several claims, the decree had decided this against the defendant in such a way that, although the account had not been taken, the decree was final within s. 495. The certificate of which the grant was part of the procedure in the admission of such an appeal was refused by the High Court on the ground that the proposed appeal was from an order remanding a suit under s. 562, Civil Procedure Code; and that orders of remand under that section were, by the practice of the Court, treated as not final within s. 595, cl. There is a distinction between the confirmation of a decree and the affirmation of the decision and findings of the Courts of first instance by the High Court. The substantial question of law referred to in s. 596 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) need not directly arise out of the concurrent findings of fact, but it is enough if it is involved in those findings, and can, if the appeal is allowed, be raised in the course of the argument. In re VISHWAMBHAR PANDIT . I. The Court to which the application was made granted execution. The judgment-debtor appealed to the High Court, by which the order of the lower Court was sustained upon production before it (the High Court) of the necessary certificate of succession. Held, that an objection, that the said application for execution was improperly granted by reason of the non-production of the succession certificate before the lower Court, did not raise a "substantial question of law" within the meaning of s. 596 of the Code of Civil Procedure, so as to warn the High Court in granting leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council. 1882), s. 596—Decree of Appellate Court that "appeal be dismissed" where decision on questions of fact is not the same. The word "decision," in s. 596 of the Code of Civil Procedure, means merely the decision of the suit by the Court, and cannot, like the word "judgment," be defined as meaning the statement of the grounds on which the Court proceeds to make the decree. In order to "affirm the decision of the Court below," within the meaning of that section, it is sufficient for the Appellate Court to affirm the decree: it need not also affirm the grounds of fact on which the judgment was passed. Where the decree of the Appellate Court was that "the appeal be dismissed," but the reasons given were not the same as those of the lower Court in respect of some matters of fact: Held, that the Appellate Court affirmed the decision of the lower Court, within the meaning of s. 596; and a certificate, which granted leave to appeal to the Privy Council on the ground that by its decree the Appellate Court did not affirm the Court below, and which did not find that the appeal involved a substantial question of law, was held not to comply with that section. 38. ——— Assent of respondent—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 595, 596 and 600—Substantial point of law—Certificate of High Court—Assent of respondent to the appeal. Under s. 596, Civil Procedure Code, there is no right of appeal to the Privy Council simply on the ground that a substantial point of law is involved. The presence of such a question does not give a right of appeal when the value is below the mark; the Code restricts the right of appeal when the higher Court affirms the decision of the lower and the dispute either directly or indirectly relates to an amount of ₹10,000. Under ss. 595 and 600, Civil Procedure Code, there is a right of appeal if the High Court certifies that the case is "otherwise" a fit one for appeal. The word "otherwise" refers to special cases, such as, where the point in dispute is not measurable by money, though it may be of great public or private importance. But in all such cases a special certificate to that effect must be granted by the High Court. The mere assent of the respondent to an appeal does not give the appellant a right of appeal which the Code does not allow, or sustain a certificate which is obviously erroneous. The plaintiff appealed, and the Appeal Court dismissed the appeal on the same grounds; and, on appeal to the Privy Council, their Lordships also held that, both as regards malice and the absence of reasonable and probable cause, the plaintiff had failed to discharge the burden of proof which lay upon him. The case came before the Privy Council on a certificate granted by the High Court of Bombay that the appeal involved a substantial question of law. It appeared to their Lordships of the Privy Council that this certificate must have been granted under a misapprehension. The only question involved was a question of fact on which there were concurrent findings. According to

English Law, it is for the Judge and not for the jury to determine what is reasonable and probable cause in an action for malicious prosecution. The jury finds the facts. The Judge draws the proper inference from the findings of the jury. In that sense the question is a question of law. (a) LEAVE TO APPEAL.

1. ——— Petition of appeal—Act VI of 1874, ss. 5, 7, and 9—Practice. The petition of appeal to the Privy Council should distinctly state what the substantial question of law is that it is proposed to submit to the Privy Council. Petitions on the Original Side should be signed by counsel and on the Appellate Side by counsel or a pleader. ALI ABKAR v. ABDUL LATIF SHUSBU 12 Bom. 8

2. ——— Appeal presented without security bond—Rule of 7th December 1858. The High Court has no authority to receive a petition of appeal to England tendered without the usual security bond duly registered, as provided by the 8th Rule of the 7th December 1858. PERSHAD SEIN v. RAJENDRA KISHORE . 7 W. R. 338

3. ——— Appeal in formâ pauperis. An application to appeal to the Privy Council in formâ pauperis may be made to the High Court on unstamped paper, and accompanied by a certificate of counsel that there is a reasonable ground of appeal; the usual security for costs being given, and the costs of translation deposited. In the matter of the petition of JOWAD ALI . 8 W. it was deposited, not the sum which had been estimated as the cost of translating, printing, and transmitting the record, but the estimate less the charges of printing; nothing being deposited as the cost of transcription. The petition was accordingly refused. Held, that the petitioner had no right to amend the estimate made by the clerk of the Privy Council Department, still less to amend it in the way he did; and that the plea of oversight was not sufficient to excuse him for non-compliance with the rules of Court or to admit his application beyond the prescribed time. In the matter of the petition of GOUR SURN DASS . 19 W. R. 305

6. ——— Certificate—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 595, 596 and 600—Certificate where case is "otherwise" fit for appeal. In considering under what section of the Civil Procedure Code the certificate of fitness was given by the Court, it is the certificate itself which has to be looked at, and not the order for the certificate. In granting a certificate under s. 600, Civil Procedure Code, the Court must exercise its judicial discretion upon the matter. Unless the certificate upon which the leave to appeal is based is in such a form as to justify that leave, the Court must find that leave was not properly given, and the appeal must be dismissed. Banarsi Parshad v. *Kashi Krishna Narain, 5 C. 7. ——— Separate Suits—Valuation of appeal in three similar but unconsolidated suits. Where an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council is made in three separate suits, which are not consolidated, though the questions to be decided are the same in all of them, it is necessary to show that, in each of the suits, the amount or value of the matter in dispute in the appeal to the Privy Council is R10,000 or upwards. The Company desired to appeal to His Majesty in Council. Leave to appeal was opposed on three grounds: (1) that no appeal lay under the Memorandum of Association Act or Companies Act; (2) that the pecuniary test was not satisfied; (3) that there was no substantial question of law. Held, that the order dismissing the petition was a "decree" within the definition of that term contained in s. 594 of the Code. Held, as to objections (2) and (3), that the only question was whether the case was a fit one for appeal to the King in Council, within the meaning of cl. (b) of s. 595. Held, further, that having regard to the fact that the commercial and financial position of the Company might be seriously affected by the questions at issue, and to the importance to Indian Companies generally of having such rights precisely defined, the case ought to be certified as a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council. Held, further, that the proceedings fell within Ch. The Court held that payment should be made to the legatee on his attaining majority, and that the will conferred on the executor no right to the income. The executor applied for leave to appeal to the Privy Council, and contended that the matter in dispute was of the value of R10,000, as required by s. 596 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as it involved the right to the whole fund. Held, refusing leave, that the subject-matter of the dispute was only the income and was not of the requisite value. The case had proceeded on the hypothesis that the executor held the corpus of the estate as a trustee, and the only question was as to the income. the Civil Procedure Code only applies to a case where a certificate of leave to appeal to the Privy Council has been granted by the High Court, it has been the invariable practice of the Calcutta High Court to treat that section as applying to cases where special leave has been granted by the Privy Council. The High Court has power to extend the time as provided by s. 602 of the Civil Procedure Code for depositing the estimated cost of translating, transcribing, indexing and transmitting to the Privy Council the record of a case under appeal, but it ought not to do so without some cogent reason. Burjore and Bhawani Parshad v. *Bhagana, I. 20. ——— Date of decree—Appeal from Vice-Admiralty Court of Bengal—Rule 35 of Vice-Admiralty Rules. By rule 35 of the rules respecting appeals from the Vice-Admiralty Courts abroad, made and ordained by King William IV in Council, in pursuance of the Statute 2 Will. IV, in c. 51, all appeals from the decrees of Vice-Admiralty Courts are to be asserted within fifteen days after the date of the decree. Held, that the words "after the date of the decree" mean after the date when the decree is pronounced by the Admiralty or Vice-Admiralty Court, as the case may be, not the date when the decree is reduced to writing and signed. On the 23rd July 1880, the High Court in its Appellate Jurisdiction, modifying a decree of the High Court as a Court of Vice-Admiralty in a cause of damage by collision, referred it to the Registrar to assess the damages that had been incurred in reference to one of the ships, both of which were held to be in fault. The parties went, without protest, before the Registrar for that purpose, the impugnants also having taken out process to compel the appearance of the promovents before him, and the damages were assessed with the consent of both parties at a certain amount. On the 2nd September 1880, a notice of appeal was given on behalf of the impugnants, and was recorded as asserted pursuant to rule 35 above referred to. Held, that the appeal was not within time, more than fifteen days having elapsed after the decree before the appeal was asserted. According to the law laid down in the Vice-Admiralty Courts, the proceedings taken before the Registrar were themselves sufficient also to prevent an appeal as of right. The owners of the ship "BRENHILDA" v. THE BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY

Accordingly the period during which they were required to deposit the amount for the translation of the record, under s. 11, cl. (b), of Act VI of 1874, expired on the 4th of November. The offices of the Court re-opened after the vacation on the 23rd October, but the Benches did not begin to sit till the 16th November. On the last-mentioned date the petitioner brought in the money, and it was refused by the officer of the Court as being too late. Held, that it was rightly refused, and that the Court had no power to grant permission to deposit it after the prescribed time. In the matter of the petition of LALLA GOPEE CHUND . I. 22. ——— Act VI of 1874, s. 11—Power to enlarge time—Practice. The requirements of s. 11, Act VI of 1874, as to the deposit of costs, are not absolutely imperative. The Court has power in its discretion to modify them, and when the period for making the deposit expires on a day when the offices of the Court are closed, it is a reasonable exercise of that discretion to allow the deposit to be made on the day they re-open. In the matter of the petition of SOORJMUKHI KOER

The Court granted a rule calling on the appellant to show cause why the proceedings on appeal should not be stayed, and, on his not appearing to show cause, ordered that the appeal should be struck off the file. As, however, the defendant in the Court below who would have been respondent in the appeal, had filed an appeal under the Letters Patent, s. 15, against the grant of the certificate, the applicant contended that the six weeks would not begin to run until such appeal was finally disposed of. Held, that there was no ground for this contention, as the appeal did not operate as a stay of proceedings, nor remove the record to any other Court. Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to enlarge the time specified in s. 11. although they are not to be departed from without cogent reason, the Court from which the appeal is preferred has the right of extending the time. Where a debtor assigned to his creditor a debt due to him by a third person and the latter made no attempt to recover any portion of it : Held, upon accounts taken between them, that the creditor was rightly debited with the amount of the debt. In this case the Judicial Committee had, upon the application of the respondent, deferred giving judgment in order that the parties might have an opportunity of further considering and arguing (and upon fresh materials, if available) a point which was raised by the appellant for the first time before the Judicial Committee. There was a fresh hearing on that point in consequence. SYAMA KUMARI v. RAMESWAR SINGH (1904)

46. ——— "Interested in the result of appeal"—Where defendants have been exonerated and there is no appeal against that portion of the decree, they cannot be brought on the record under s. 559. A party, who is not made a respondent in an appeal, is not "interested in the result of the appeal" within the meaning of s. 559 of the Code of Civil Procedure, unless the decree sought to be obtained against the respondents in the appeal would have the effect of prejudicing him in some way or other. The party sought to be made a respondent in the appeal under s. 559 must be shown to be interested in the result of the appeal before he is brought on the record, and the interest he may acquire as a result of being added as a respondent, will not suffice. Where a defendant has been exonerated and there is no appeal against so much of the decree as exonerates him, no decree can be passed against him in an appeal by any other party as he is not a party to the appeal and cannot be said to be interested in the result of such appeal. Atma Ram v. *Balkishen, I. Sudder Court, on an ex-parte application without notice, issued an execution order putting the decree-holder in possession. This was done without calling for security as provided by s. 4, Bengal Regulation XVI of 1797. The appellant, on the admission of the appeal, applied to the Sudder Court for security from the party in possession pending the appeal, but that Court held that, as the decree-holder was in possession under an execution order which could not be appealed from, they had no power to interfere. On petition the Judicial Committee, under the circumstances and on affidavit of waste, made an order declaring that it was competent to the Sudder Court to require security to be given for protection of the property pending the appeal, notwithstanding execution of the decree had issued, and gave permission to the appellant to apply to the Sudder Court with an intimation of that opinion. Against such remand an appeal was preferred to Her Majesty in Council. The Zillah Court, however, proceeded with the case, and eventually dismissed the whole suit, and the defendant applied to execute the decree for his costs. Held, that, in such circumstances, the High Court was not competent, under s. 4, Regulation XVI of 1797 (the last-mentioned decree not having been appealed to it), to suspend execution of decree, or to direct the taking of security. In the matter of the petition of ONOOROOP CHUNDER MOOKERJEE 6 W. 1. ——— Effect of order of Privy Council dismissing suit on power of High Court to make orders in suit—Petition for the amendment of an order in Council dismissing a suit—Receiver's liability to account—Rights as between the Administrator-General and executors transferring estate to him, and the petitioner interested in the estate—Act II of 1874, s. 31. A Court having appointed a receiver in a suit has authority, incidental to its jurisdiction, to order him to account, although the suit may be no longer pending. The estate is in its hands, and the receiver is its officer, and the dismissal of the suit by an Appellate Court does not alter that state of things. The original Court in such a case may permit parties interested to intervene on questions as to the accounts, and may deal with costs and other matters. In a suit by a plaintiff interested in the estate, wholly based on the alleged illegality of its transfer by the executors named in the will of a Hindu, to the Administrator-General (Act II of 1874, s. 31), decrees were made by the High Court, Original and Appellate, in the plaintiff's favour. The Judicial Committee, however, held the transfer legal; and the suit, brought against the Administrator-General and the executors as co-defendants, was dismissed. Held, on the plaintiff's petition for such modification of the order dismissing the suit as would maintain what had been ordered below relating to the accounts, thereby enabling the High Court to bring matters in dispute to an end, that there were no grounds for the amendment. Their Lordships' opinion was that the High Court would not be deprived of any jurisdiction in that respect by the dismissal of the suit. If it should be necessary to the carrying out of the transfer that the Administrator-General should take proceedings, he could do so. To make orders upon the Court's receiver was within its powers; and either the receiver or the executors could be called to further account without the petitioner being met by the defence of prior adjudication of the matter (s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure). In the matter of the petition of PREM LALL MULLICK. At the close of the Judge's charge to the jury counsel for the first accused asked that the following points might be reserved for the decision of the Court under s. 434 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), viz.:—(i) Whether the order for the prosecution was sufficient under s. 196 of the Criminal Procedure Code. (ii) Whether the High Court had power, in the absence of a sufficient order, to accept the commitment of the accused under s. 532 of the Criminal Procedure Code and to proceed with the trial. (iii) Whether the meaning given to the term "disaffection" by the Judge in his charge to the jury was correct. The Judge declined to reserve the above points. The first accused, having been convicted, applied to a Full Bench, under cl. 41 of the Letters Patent, 1865, for a certificate that the case was a fit one for appeal to the Privy Council. 1. GENERAL DUTY OF APPELLATE COURTS.

1. ——— High Court, practice of—Appeal on questions of fact—Credibility of witnesses. The High Court, sitting in appeal on questions of fact, was guided by the same rules as those of the Privy Council when they sat upon motions for a rule for new trials from the old Supreme Court. The High Court, sitting in appeal, will not disturb a judgment upon a question as to the credibility of witnesses, unless it be manifestly clear, from the probabilities attached to certain circumstances in the case, that the Court was wrong in the conclusion drawn from such evidence. The High Court, sitting in appeal, will look upon the decree of a Judge as to facts in the same light as the verdict of a jury, and, though some of the reasons given for the conclusion arrived at be erroneous, the High Court in appeal will not say that the decree is against the weight of evidence, if sufficient reason for such decree still remain. HEERALALL CHUCKERBUTTY v. MOHESH CHUNDER GHOSAUL . 1 Hyde 105

2. ——— Privy Council, practice of —Appeal on questions of fact. The rule of the Privy Council not to disturb a judgment of a Court in India upon a question of fact, unless it is clear from the probabilities of the case that the judgment is wrong, however necessary as regards a Court of Appeal far removed from India, would hardly be extended as one equally necessary and applicable with the same strictness to a Court of Appeal in India. SARODA SOONDERY v. TINCOWRY NUNDY 1 Hyde 223

3. ——— Question of fact, ground for disturbing finding on. Held, on examination of the evidence, that the lower Appellate Court ought not to have disturbed the distinct finding of the lower Court, as it had, upon what appeared to be mere conjecture. LAL MAHOMED BIPARI v. SHOILA BEWA . . . 11 C. L. R. 104

4. ——— Jurisdiction where appeal is barred. When an appeal is barred by law, an Appellate Court cannot interfere in any matter legitimately arising out of the case, unless there is want of jurisdiction. KURUM CHAND KOLEEAH v. HUREE MOHUN GHOSE . 2 W. R. Mis. 45

5. ——— Presumption of correctness of judgment appealed from—Duty of Judge. A Judge of appeal is not in the position of an arbitrator who has to look at the evidence on both sides and determine which is preferable. He has to deal with the decision of a properly constituted Court, which, if not shown to be erroneous, ought to be affirmed. SHETABDEE BISWAS v. MOLAMDEE MUNDUL . . . 25 W. R 30

6. ——— Presumption as to facts found by lower Court—Omission to file objections under Civil Procedure Code, s. 561. Where a decree is in favour of the respondent, the Appellate Court is not entitled to accept the facts found by the Court of first instance as incontestably proved, merely because the respondent has not filed any cross-objections to the decree under s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). BHAGOJI v. BAPUJI . . I. L. R. 13 Bom. 75

Appellate Court is not at liberty to say that it disbelieves them without stating reasons. HOYMO DASSEE v. SREEKISSEN NUNDY . 14 W. R. 58

9. ——— Dealing with documentary evidence. Where a Munsif pronounces an opinion as to the authenticity of certain documents, the lower Appellate Court must assume that he did his duty and looked into each and every one of them before pronouncing such opinion. On a question of simple credit to be given to a witness, an Appellate Court, having before it merely written depositions, is not authorized to set aside the opinion of the Court of first instance which heard the witness and recorded that his demeanour was not satisfactory. 10. ——— Method of dealing with questions of fact in appeal. In dealing with questions of fact which turn entirely upon evidence given on the trial, the High Court ought not merely to consider whether the lower Court has come to the same conclusion as that to which it should have come if it had originally heard the witnesses, but, before reversing the decision, it ought to be satisfied that the Court was clearly wrong. OOTUM v. MULLICK GHOLAM HOSSEIN . . 2 Hay 359

11. ——— Point taken in appeal, but not argued by pleader. Where a point is taken on appeal, the Appellate Court should consider and decide it, although the vakil may omit to argue it. DADA VALAD VALLI v. BAVASHA VALAD KASAM 6 Bom. A. C. 9

12. ——— Duty of Judge to hear comments on evidence. It is the duty of the Judge of an Appellate Court to allow the parties or their pleaders to submit the evidence to him at the hearing in open Court, and to make upon the evidence so submitted every comment, and found upon it every argument they may think necessary. LALLA JUGGESHUR SAHOY v. GOPAL LALL . 15 W. R. 54

13. ——— Duty of Appellate Court to direct examination of witnesses before reversing decree—Dismissal of suit by first Court without examining defendant's witnesses—Reversal of decree on appeal. Where a Court of first instance, considering it unnecessary to examine certain witnesses for the defence, dismissed the suit, and the lower Appellate Court, disbelieving the evidence of those witnesses for the defence who were examined, allowed the plaintiff's appeal:—Held, that before doing so the lower Appellate Court should have afforded the defendants an opportunity of supplementing the evidence which they had given in the first Court by the testimony of those witnesses whom that Court had declared it unnecessary to hear, and that the case must be regarded as one in which the first Court had refused to examine the

I. L. R. 9 All. 339

14.———— Duty of Appellate Court to call the remaining witnesses before reversing the decree of first court—Dismissal of case in first Court without hearing all the witnesses. The Subordinate Judge, having heard all the witnesses for the plaintiff and some of the witnesses for the defendant, intimated that he did not consider it necessary for the defendant to call any more evidence. He then dismissed the suit. On appeal by the plaintiff, the Judge, upon the recorded evidence, reversed the decree, and allowed the plaintiff's claim. The defendant appealed to the High Court, contending that the lower Court ought not to have found against him without allowing him an opportunity to call the witnesses whose evidence had been dispensed with by the Subordinate Judge. Held (reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court and remanding the case), that the lower Appellate Court ought not to have reversed the decree of the first Court without allowing the defendant to give the evidence which the first Court declined to take. 15.—Order of Appellate Court returning plaint for presentation to proper Court—Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 11. Where an Appellate Court makes an order returning a plaint for presentation to the proper Court, the Court of first instance having heard and decided the suit, it is the duty of the Appellate Court, under s. 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, first to find, and to record its reasons for so finding, whether the error in valuation complained of has prejudicially affected the disposal of the suit on the merits. WAHID-ULLAH v. KANHAYA LAL (1902) . . I. L. R. 25 All. 174

16.—Practice—Power to take notice of facts transpiring during pendency of appeal—Discretion. As a general rule a Court of Appeal in considering the correctness of the judgment of the Court below will confine itself to the state of the case at the time such judgment was rendered, and will not take notice of any facts which may have arisen subsequently. But the Court will in exceptional cases depart from this rule, specially where by so doing it can shorten litigation and best attain the ends of justice. Plaintiff was given leave to amend his plaint so as to adapt his case and prayers for relief to the new facts, the amendment not altering the nature of the case. 2. EXERCISE OF POWERS IN VARIOUS CASES.

(a) GENERAL CASES.

1.———— Discretion, exercise of—Discretion capriciously exercised—Error of Law. The discretion vested in a Court of Justice must be exercised in a sound and reasonable manner, and a capricious and unreasonable exercise of discretion on the part of a Court of first instance is an error in law which it is the duty of an Appellate Court to correct. PENDSE v. MALSE . 3 Bom. A. C. 94

2.——— Appellate Court's power to interfere with exercise of discretion. When an appeal against an order based on facts is given from a subordinate to a superior Court, the discretion vested in the former is absorbed in the latter, and it is the duty of the superior Court to weigh the facts which form the basis upon which the subordinate Court proceeds and arrive at its own independent conclusion : and this is so notwithstanding that the subordinate Court exercised its discretion after a proper enquiry and due consideration of the facts put before it, and not capriciously or with prejudice. KIRANI AHMEDULA v. SUBABHAT

5.——— Discretion of Judge—Refusal to admit appeal—Limitation. Where the law leaves a matter within the discretion of a Court, and the Court, after proper enquiry and due consideration, has exercised the discretion in a sound and reasonable manner, the High Court will not interfere with the conclusion arrived at, even though it would itself have arrived at a different conclusion. Consequently, where a District Judge

8.———— Question of limitation—Appeal. B sued M and T for money due on a bond, and on the 27th April 1877 obtained a decree against T, the suit against M being dismissed. T applied for a review of judgment, and B also made a similar application. On the 25th May 1877 T's application was granted, and on the 16th July 1877 B's was rejected. On the 29th June 1878, the Court re-heard the suit against T, and dismissed it. B appealed, making T and M respondents, and impugning in his memorandum of appeal the decree of the 27th April 1877 as well as that of the 29th June 1878. The Appellate Court, assuming that the appeal was one from the decree of the 27th April 1877, preferred beyond time, admitted it after time, and after hearing the case on its merits, gave a decree against M, and dismissed the suit as regards T. Held, that the Appellate Court erred in assuming that the appeal was from the decree of the 27th April 1877, and that it was at liberty to admit it beyond time, the appeal being from the decree of the 29th June 1878, that decree being the one which had brought B before that Court as an appellant; and that the Appellate Court was not competent, on an appeal from the decree of the 29th June 1878, to reconsider the merits of the case against M, the appeal from the decree of the 27th April 1877 being barred by limitation, and that decree and the decree of the 29th June 1878 being separate and distinct, and not appealable in one memorandum of appeal from the latter decree. 8.—Plaint, amendment of—Appellate Court, power of, to allow amendment—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 53, 582. An Appellate Court has power, under s. 582 read with s. 53 of the Civil Procedure Code, to allow an amendment of the plaint. Where the object of an amendment of a plaint is merely to seek relief ancillary to the principal prayer of the plaint, such amendment does not alter the character of the suit. Shyam Chand Koondoo v. *The Land Mortgage Bank of India, I. (b) SPECIAL CASES.

9.———— Analogous cases—Joinder of causes—Cases in which evidence is similar. A number of cases having been instituted against the same defendant, and relating to the same matter, the plaintiff in one of them applied to both the lower Courts to have them all tried together, pointing out particularly that the documentary evidence in one of the other cases was necessary and should be made use of in the trial of his case. This application was refused by the first Court, and the lower Appellate Court decided the case of the applicant upon evidence recorded with it, and disposed of the others as governed by that judgment. Held, that all the cases should have been tried together; but as the Judge failed to comply with the application to do so, he should have tried each case separately on its merits. NEHAL SINGH v. ALI AHMED 15 W. R. 110

10.———— Cases in which evidence is similar. A Judge should not, without the consent of the parties, allow his judgment in one case to govern his decision in another even if the subject of dispute is of a similar nature and the evidence similar in character, when the parties are not the same and the subject-matter of the suit is different. to the Court of first instance. The appellant's pleader presented the appeal memorandum unamended stating that he wished to rely in the appeal on the passages objected to, and asking that the Court would, if necessary, strike them out. The District Judge thereupon rejected the memorandum of appeal under Civil Procedure Code, s. 543. It appeared that the objectionable portions of the memorandum were separable from the rest:—Held, on appeal to the High Court against the order rejecting the appeal to the District Court, Per SUBRAMANIA AYYAR, J., that the District Judge should have ordered the objectionable matter to be expunged and then to have admitted the appeal. Per MOORE, J.—(Holding that the statement which accompanied the memorandum of appeal on its representation contained expressions amounting to contempt of Court), the District Judge should have returned the appeal memorandum and have refused to receive it until the objectionable remarks have been expunged. 35. ——— Waiver of defect in plaint in Court below—Ground for dismissal. In a case in which, although the plaint mentioned no overt act justifying the plaintiff's request for a declaration of title, and still it appeared on the admitted facts of the case that there was a cause of action, and the Court of first instance adjudicated on the merits and passed a decree in favour of plaintiffs. Held, that it was too late for the lower Appellate Court to dismiss the claim on the ground of the above defect in the plaint. SHOME DUTT CHOWDHRY v. SURB NARAIN CHOWDHRY 24 W. R. 242

36. ——— Amendment of record on appeal. A second plaintiff was added in the Court below, but no amendment was made in the record, and the suit was dismissed with costs. An appeal being brought, the original plaintiff failed to pay the costs, was made insolvent, and the Official Assignee declined to proceed with the appeal. It was objected that the appeal ought to be dismissed, there being no appellant on the record; but the Court allowed the appeal to proceed, and the amendment order by the Court below to be effected. 39. ——— Objection not taken to plaint—Ground for dismissal of suit—Suit for declaratory decree without asking consequential relief. A suit should not be dismissed by an Appellate Court on the ground of its being one asking merely for a declaratory decree, and no consequential relief, where that objection has never been taken by the defendants to the suit. 3. EVIDENCE AND ADDITIONAL EVIDENCE ON APPEAL.

1. ——— Evidence Act, 1855, s. 57—Re-hearing of ex-parte case on fresh evidence. Where a Court of first instance sets aside its own ex-parte judgment, and after a new trial, in which it takes fresh evidence, as well as admits that originally recorded, again gives plaintiffs a decree, it is the duty of the lower Appellate Court to enquire, under s. 57 of Act II of 1857, whether, independently of the evidence originally recorded, there was sufficient to justify the decree. ROSUL SINGH v. KISHOREE LALL . . . 8 W. R. 499

2. ——— Evidence sufficient for judgment—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 353, When parties have had an opportunity of putting in such evidence as they consider sufficient to entitle them to a judgment upon the material issues of the case, the evidence ought to be held sufficient under s. 353, Civil Procedure Code, to enable the Appellate Court to pronounce a satisfactory judgment. respondent the order of the first Court is correct. KISHORE SINGH v. POOKHUN SINGH 10 W. R. 432

5. ——— Adjudication on Evidence —Suit for contribution where shares were not specified. In a suit for contribution on account of Government revenue, which was decreed by the first Court, but dismissed by the lower Appellate Court, because the plaint did not specify the shares of the different shareholders:—Held, that the lower Appellate Court was bound to adjudicate upon the evidence. BHONO BIBEE v. PALLAN GAZEE 11 W. R. 131

6. ——— Evidence imporperly admitted in Lower Court. The lower Appellate Court was not competent to reject the documentary evidence which had been admitted by the Court of first instance merely because it had been admitted after the first hearing of the case, or after the date on which it had been ordered to be produced. Rent Act, an objection was taken that, the plaintiffs not being recorded shareholders, the suit was not maintainable in the Revenue Court. The objection was allowed, but the Court, at the same time, disposed of the case on the merits, and dismissed the suit. On appeal, the lower Appellate Court affirmed the decree on the ground that the Revenue Court had no jurisdiction in the matter. Held, that as there were materials on the record for the determination of the suit, the Judge should, with reference to s. 207 of the Rent Act, have disposed of the appeal on the merits. Debi Saran Lal v. *Debi Saran Upadhia, I. 8. ——— Additional evidence on appeal—Evidence excluded by lower Court because it had sufficient evidence. A Court of first instance ought not, because it is satisfied upon the evidence which one of the parties has given, to prevent him from putting upon the proceedings all the evidence that he wishes to give, so that he may have his case brought fairly before the Appellate Court. Where a party has thus been prevented in the first Court, and the evidence on the record is not deemed sufficient by the Appellate Court, the latter Court does wrong if it refuses to receive the evidence which has been excluded in the way indicated. 12. ——— Evidence insufficient. Where the evidence upon the record is not sufficient to enable the Appellate Court to pronounce a judgment upon regular appeal, it may require the Court against whose decree the appeal is made to take additional evidence, defining the points to which such evidence is to be confined, in order to enable the Appellate Court finally to determine the case. of the Court. Two other persons coming forward and claiming the attached goods as their property, plaintiffs concluded them to be partners with the original defendants, and made them also defendants. The lower Court at the trial held that the proof of partnership failed. Held, on appeal, that the plaintiffs' case could not at this stage be supplemented by examining parties whom the plaintiffs did not think fit to call, or by books which they did not produce, in the Court below. 16. ——— Fresh evidence—Civil Procedure Code, s. 568. An appellant who had ample opportunity of giving evidence in the Court below and elected not to do so, but to rest his case on the evidence as it stood, ought not to be allowed at the stage of appeal to give evidence which he could have given below. 17. ——— Application to put in evidence on appeal which applicant refused to produce in lower Court. The plaintiffs had applied during the hearing of the case in the Court of first instance, for the production of certain books of account of the defendants. The defendants resisted the application, and the Court refused to order the books to be produced. The suit having been dismissed, the plaintiffs appealed, and in the Court of Appeal the defendants applied to be permitted to put in evidence the books which they had refused to produce:—Held, that the evidence could not be admitted. 18. ——— Reversing decision without fresh evidence. Defendant, having purchased a decree, caused the judgment-debtor's (B's) rights and interest in certain property to be sold in execution, and bought them himself. Plaintiff, who had purchased one B's rights and interest in a 4-annas share of the propetry intervened; but his intervention having been rejected in the summary department, he sued to set aside the summary order, and to establish his vendor's right in the property. The vendor having admitted the sale to the plaintiff, the first Court thought it unnecessary to examine the witnesses to, and the writer of, the deed of sale, and finding the plaintiff in possession, decreed the suit. This decision was reversed on appeal. Held, that the lower Appellate Court did wrong in presuming collusion between B and his vendee (the plaintiff), and ought not to have rejected the deed without examining the writer and witnesses; and that it should have decided whether plaintiff was in possession at any time under the deed of sale. 20. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 355—Additional evidence after review. Where a lower Appellate Court admitted a review with the object of taking into consideration a material issue which it had omitted to consider at the trial:—Held, that, having admitted the review on grounds independent of fresh evidence, it was competent for the Court, under s. 355, Act VIII of 1859, to admit fresh evidence, if required to enable it to pronounce a satisfactory judgment or for any substantial cause. BEHAREE LALL NUNDEE v. TROYLUCKHO MOYEE BURMONEE 12 W. R. 223

21. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 355. The true interpretation of s. 355, Act VIII of 1859, is that, when a Court sees that by some inadvertence or mistake a party has not produced some evidence which he was capable of adducing, and that he is likely to be prejudiced by that omission or mistake, which was simply unintentional, undesigned, and accidental, the Court will allow such further evidence to be taken. 23. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 355—Error in law. In a suit for ejectment on the ground that defendant was holding over after the expiration of his lease, the defendant's vakil deposed on oath in the first Court that the defendant had no documents whatever, and that those he once had were burnt. When the case came before the Subordinate Judge on appeal, he permitted the defendant to file a new piece of evidence, viz., a pottah which was alleged to have escaped the general destruction. Held, that the admission of the pottah on the mere ipsi dixit of the defendant was a substantial error in law, even though plaintiff neither admitted nor denied the document; that the Subordinate Judge had no right to admit the pottah under the circumstances; and that, if he had, he was wrong in deciding the case upon it without taking evidence as to its genuineness. In an application to the Privy Council for special leave to bring in those documents:—Held, that further evidence ought not to be admitted under s. 355, Act VIII of 1859; that there was great danger in the Court of ultimate appeal lightly introducing evidence which had not been under the consideration of the Courts below, and which the parties had had no means of testing. 27. ——————— Civil Procedure Code, s. 568. The test as to whether additional evidence should be received in an Appellate Court under s. 568 of the Code of Civil Procedure depends upon the question whether or no the Appellate Court requires the evidence "to enable it to pronounce judgment or for any other substantial cause"; as to this, the Appellate Court is to be the sole judge. In the goods of PERM CHAND MOONSHEE. Two of the defendants were the zamindars of the talukh in which the howla tenure was said to exist, and had transferred their proprietary right to the other two defendants. The zamindars did not defend the suit, and were not examined in the Court of first instance. The lower Appellate Court "considered it necessary, for the proper decision of the case," to examine the zamindars, and, relying mainly on their evidence, reversed the decision of the Munsif, and gave a decree in favour of the plaintiff. Held, on appeal, that the lower Appellate Court had sufficiently recorded its reasons within the meaning of s. 355 of Act VIII of 1859 for requiring the additional evidence; that it was right in so doing; and that, although no special title had been set up in the plaint, the decree which was given on the evidence in favour of the plaintiffs could not be reversed in special appeal. 46. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 568. The test as to whether additional evidence should be received in an Appellate Court under s. 568 of the Code of Civil Procedure depends upon the question whether or not the Appellate Court requires the evidence "to enable it to pronounce judgment or for any other substantial cause"; as to this, the Appellate Court is to be the sole judge. In the goods of PREM CHAND MOONSHEE. The lower Appellate Court took evidence on the issues not tried before, and came to findings of fact on that evidence. Held, that the lower Appellate Court tried the case, not as an original case, but as an appeal, and acting under the powers given to it took fresh evidence. 49. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 562, 568, 569—Additional evidence by Appellate Court—Invalidity of order reversing decree of lower Court on account of exclusion of evidence. A trial took place in the Court of a District Munsif, who heard evidence, decided issues, and passed a decree. On an appeal being preferred, the Subordinate Judge reversed the decree, and remanded the suit for re-trial on the ground that certain documentary evidence which had been tendered by a defendant had been excluded, and plaintiffs' witnesses, who had been cited in the list, had not been wholly examined. On an appeal being preferred against that order :—Held, that s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure was inapplicable to such a case ; and that the proper and only legal course for the Subordinate Judge to take under the Code of Civil Procedure was to act either under s. 568 or s. 569, by himself taking the evidence which he considered to have been wrongly excluded, or to direct the District Munsif to take it. Per umbra Nayar v. *Subrahmanian Pattar, I. The District Judge came to the conclusion on the evidence that the will was genuine and granted probate of it. On appeal the High Court, the parties consenting, took the additional evidence of the three witnesses under s. 568 of the Civil Procedure Code and on a consideration of the whole of the evidence came to an opposite conclusion from that of the District Judge and dismissed the application for probate:—Held, that on a pure question of fact, the Courts having differed on what were not the same materials for decision, the Judicial Committee would not reverse the decree of the High Court unless they were satisfied it was wrong, and they were not so satisfied. An objection by the appellants that in taking additional evidence the High Court had not acted in accordance with the provisions of s. 568 of the Code of Civil Procedure, was disallowed as the appellants had without raising any objection at the time consented to the additional evidence being taken. them in evidence on payment of the proper stamp duty and penalty under s. 34, proviso I, of the Stamp Act (I of 1879). At a subsequent stage of the same suit, his successor in office was of opinion that the khatas in question were promissory notes; that as such they could be stamped only at the date of their execution, and that they had been illegally admitted in evidence under s. 34, proviso I. He accordingly dismissed the suit. On appeal, the District Judge agreed with the Subordinate Judge that the instruments sued on were promissory notes, but held that, after they had once been admitted in evidence on payment of the stamp duty and penalty the question of their admissibility could not be subsequently raised in the suit under proviso III to s. 34 of the Stamp Act (I of 1879). He therefore reversed the decree of the Subordinate Judge, and remanded the case for trial on the merits. and on the 21st March 1883 directed the appellant to pay additional Court-fees on her memorandum of appeal. On the 2nd May 1883 the appellant paid the additional Court-fees under protest, and a decree was then prepared, bearing date the 1st March 1883, but it referred to and carried into effect the subsequent order of the 21st March and the 2nd May. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That as soon as the Judge had passed the decree of the 1st March 1883, he ceased to have any power over it, and was not competent to introduce new matters not dealt with by the judgment ; that the order of the 21st March and the deposit of the 2nd May, whether right or wrong, were not proceedings to which effect could be given in the antecedent decree of the 1st March 1883 ; and that the decree was ultra vires to that extent, and was therefore liable to correction in second appeal under s. 584 of the Civil Procedure Code. The powers conferred by ss. 54 (a) and (c) and 55, read with s. 582 of the Civil Procedure Code, or by s. 12 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), read with cl. (ii) of s. 10, are intended to be exercised before the disposal of the case, and not after it has been decided finally so far as the Court is concerned. The powers conferred by s. 28 of the Court Fees Act cannot be exercised by an order passed after the decision of the case to which the question of the payment of Court-fees relates, and, even assuming that they can be so exercised, such an order, though it may be subject to such rules as to appeal or revision as the law may provide, cannot be given effect to by making insertions in an antecedent decree. Per OLDFIELD, J.—That the Court had power to make the order it did, inasmuch as the collection of Court-fees was no part of a Judge's functions in the trial of a suit which could be said to have ceased with its determination ; and the provisions of the Court Fees Act fixed no time within which the presiding Judge could exercise his power of ordering documents to be stamped, and seemed, on the other hand, to contemplate the exercise of that power at any time subsequent to the receipt, filing, or use of a document, and to make the validity of the document and the proceedings relative thereto dependent on the document being properly stamped. execution of a decree against one G L, attached a house as belonging to G L and his two sons forming a joint Hindu family. The sons objected that the house had previously been partitioned, and was held by them and their father in separate shares, but their objection was disallowed. They then brought a joint suit for a declaration that their respective portions of the house were not liable to attachment in execution of a decree against their father. No objection was taken to the frame of that suit, and the Court of first instance gave the plaintiffs a decree on the finding that partition had in fact taken place prior to the suit in which the defendant, judgment-creditor, had obtained his decree. On appeal by the judgment-creditor, the lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit entirely on the grounds of misjoinder of causes of action. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court. Held, on these facts, that the plaintiffs should have been allowed to amend their plaint by striking out the name of one of them, and that, though there was irregularity in the procedure, such irregularity did not affect the merits of the case of the jurisdiction of the Court within the meaning of s. 578 of the Code of Civil Procedure. After a Court of competent jurisdiction has exercised its discretion under s. 15, Act VIII of 1859, and passed a declaratory decree, it does not lie within the power of a Court of Appeal, under s. 350 of that Act, to set aside the decree upon an objection which does not affect the merits, and which was not taken at the time when the decree of the first Court was passed. 16. ——— Non-joinder of plaintiff's undivided brother—Suit by mortgagee against sons of a deceased judgment-debtor—Decree against members of joint family—Parties, non-joinder of—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 578. A personal decree on a mortgage was passed against a Hindu (the mortgagor) and his two sons on 19th October 1877. The decree provided for payment of the secured debt in various instalments by May 1895. The mortgagor died in 1883, having discharged part of the debt. The decree-holder having attached certain family property in execution, the mortgagor's two younger sons, who had not been born at the date of the above decree, objected that their shares were not liable to attachment. This objection prevailed, the Court expressing the opinion that the matter in controversy should be determined in a regular suit. The other defendants in the suit of 1877 had both died in the interval, one of them leaving infant sons. The decree-holder (in whose sole name the mortgage stood) now sued the sons of the mortgagor and their infant nephews in 1891, describing himself, being allowed to amend his plaint, as managing coparcener and representative of the joint family. A plea of non-joinder was raised, inter alia, on the ground that the plaintiff had an undivided brother:—Held, that since the plaint (as amended) showed that the plaintiff sued as managing member of his undivided family, the omission to join his brother was a merely formal error, and was not fatal to the suit. 5. ERRORS AFFECTING OR NOT MERITS OF CASE—contd.

Specific Relief Act is a discretionary power which Courts of equity are empowered to exercise with reference to the circumstances of each case and the nature of the facts stated in the plaint, and the prayer of the plaintiff ; that so long as a Court of first instance possesses jurisdiction to entertain a declaratory suit, and, entering into the merits of the case, arrives at right conclusions and awards a declaratory decree, such a decree cannot be reversed in appeal simply because the discretion has been improperly exercised ; and that such improper exercise of discretion under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act has no higher footing than that of an error, defect, or irregularity, not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court, within the meaning of s. 578 of the Civil Procedure Code. This does not imply that, even in cases where the discretionary power to award declaratory relief has been exercised wholly arbitrarily, and in a manner grossly inconsistent with judicial principles, the Court of Appeal would have no power to interfere. Ram Kanaye Chuckerbutty v. *Prosunno Coomar Sein, 13 W. 23. ——— Error in allowing wrong party to begin—Suit on bond—Right to begin—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 578. The defendants in a suit on a bond admitted the execution of the bond, but denied that they had received, as the bond recited they had done at the time of execution, the consideration for it. The Court of first instance irregularly allowed the plaintiff to call witnesses to prove that the consideration had been paid at the time of the execution of the bond. They proved, however, that it had not been paid at the time of the execution, but, if paid at all, at some subsequent time. The plaintiff gave no further evidence of payment, and the Court of first instance, without calling on the defendants, dismissed the suit. The lower Appellate Court held that the defendants should have been required to begin under the circumstances, and reversed the decree of the Court of first instance, and gave the plaintiff a decree: Held, that it was doubtful, having regard to the provisions of s. 578 of Act X of 1877, whether it was competent for the lower Appellate Court to reverse the decision of the Court of first instance ; but even if it were, the lower Appellate Court should have not ignored what had taken place, but should have dealt with the case on appeal in the shape it came before it. plaintiff from a Hindu widow who claimed to have held the same as heir of her husband, the defendant, who was the mother of the husband, contended, inter alia, that the alleged purchase and sale were invalid by reason that she herself was entitled to maintenance out of the property. The first Court gave the plaintiff a decree, and this decree was affirmed on appeal by the District Judge, who, however, gave no reasons of his own for his judgment, but merely adopted those of the lower Court. Held, that, having regard to the nature of the case and the simplicity of the point for determination, the fact of the District Judge having omitted to state his reasons did not amount to such an error of law within the meaning of s. 857 of the Code of Civil Procedure as affected the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. If the Political Agent was not properly representing the Chief, he had no merits, no rights as against the defendants. XXV of the Civil Procedure Code for the issue of a commission to take the evidence of a Mahomedan pardanashin lady, the defendant in the suit, which was brought against her on a mortgage bond, the execution of which she had denied in her written statement. The Courts below concurred in finding that there was sufficient evidence of the execution of the document by the pardanashin lady with full knowledge of its contents. From their judgments it appeared that, if the defendant had been examined on commission and had given her testimony in support of her written statement, it would not have been believed, and in their Lordship's opinion it could not reasonably have prevailed. Held, that the error alleged by the appellant to have occurred in the refusal of the Court to issue the commission (whether or not it would have been better to have issued it) was, at all events, no valid ground of appeal. The evidence taken on the commission could not have affected the merits of the case within s. 578 of the Civil Procedure Code. AKIKUNNISSA BIBI v. RUP LAL DAS I. L. R. 25 Calc. 807 2 C. W. N. 566

Code, 1882, ss. 234, 248, and 578—Application by decree-holder for execution of decree by substitution on death of the judgment-debtor to the Court where the decree has been transferred. A decree was transferred to another Court for execution. Pending the proceedings, one of the judgment-debtors died. On an application to that Court by the judgment-creditor to execute the decree against the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor, a notice was issued under s. 248 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The legal representative objected that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the application, and that the application should have been made under s. 234 of the Code to the Court that passed the decree. Held, that, even assuming that an application under s. 234 to the Court which passed the decree was a necessary preliminary to proceedings under s. 248 by the Court executing the decree, the omission to make it was only an irregularity which did not affect the merits of the case, and, under s. 578, the order of the Court of first instance should not have been reversed on account of such irregularity. 42.—Misjoinder—Misjoinder of parties—Misjoinder of causes of action—Assault by two persons, on the same occasion, on two other persons—Joint plaintiffs—Joint defendants. Held, that, although the defendants had not really been prejudiced by the misjoinder, it was impossible to hold that the case fell within s. 578 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). That section only applies to mistakes and irregularities subsequently committed in a suit which has been instituted in such a way as to give the Court jurisdiction to try it. The suit must first be instituted in the manner allowed by law. remand—High Court competent in second appeal to consider validity of remand order not specifically appealed—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 544, 561. A plaintiff whose suit had been decreed in part appealed from so much of the first Court's decree as was adverse to him, and stamped his memorandum of appeal with a stamp which would have covered an appeal from the whole decree. The defendant did not appeal or file cross-objections. The lower Appellate Court remanded the whole case to the first Court under s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code, the plaintiff not appealing under s. 588 (28) from the order of remand. The first Court then dismissed the whole suit, and, on appeal by the plaintiff, the lower Appellate Court confirmed the decree. On a second appeal to the High Court, held, (i) that the High Court was competent to consider the validity or propriety of the order of remand, though it had not been specially appealed against; (ii) that the order of remand was ultra vires, so far as it related to that part of the first Court's decree which was favourable to the plaintiff, the lower Appellate Court not having jurisdiction, in the absence of any appeal or objections by the defendant, to disturb that part of the decree; (iii) that the order of remand was not made valid by the subsequent appearance of the plaintiff before the first Court or by the appeal from the first Court's decree on the remand; and (iv) that the case was not covered by s. 578 of the Code. Per MAHMOOD, J. S. 544 had no application to the case, that section relating only to cases where one or more of the parties arrayed on the same side appealed against a decree passed on ground common to all, and not cases where either of two opposite parties appealed from a part of the decree upon a Court-fee sufficient for an appeal from the whole. Moheshur Sing v. *Bengal Government, 7 Moo. On appeal, the Appellate Court made the purchaser a party to the proceedings, and, holding that there was irregularity in conducting the sale, reversed the order of the Court of first instance. Held, that the Appellate Court was wrong in so holding upon evidence recorded by the Court of first instance when the purchaser was not a party to the proceedings, and the order of the Appellate Court was set aside under s. 622 of the Code. The plaintiff obtained a decree in a partition suit in the Subordinate Judge's Court for his share in certain joint family property in the possession of the defendants (his co-parceners). The decree was affirmed on appeal. The defendants filed a second appeal in the High Court, but, before it was decided, one of the defendants died. The plaintiff at the hearing of the second appeal claimed a larger share in the family property than he had been awarded by the decree of the Courts below. Held, that he (plaintiff) was entitled to a share in that of the co-parcener who died pendente lite, and that the decree appealed from ought to be varied accordingly. modified on appeal by the declaration that "the defendants are patnidars of the same mouzahs." Held, that it was unnecessary on this appeal to consider whether the Appellate Court was right in its conclusion that the defendants were patnidars; because, upon the case which had been set up for the defendants, and upon the issues framed and tried in the lower Court, the Appellate Court could not properly make such a declaration; the defendants could not be in a better position than they would have been in had they claimed to be patnidars, in which case an issue as to that title would have been framed and tried. S. 565 of Act X of 1877 does not enable an Appellate Court to declare a right in favour of one of the parties, where no issue has been fixed on the point, and the right has not been set up in the lower Court. (b) SPECIAL CASES.

19. ——— Adoption—Objection to invalid adoption. An objection (that an adoption was invalid, because the party adopted was the eldest son of his natural father) was rejected in special appeal, because not urged in the lower Courts at any stage of the trial, and not specifically taken in the petition of special appeal. JOY TARA DOSSEE CHOWDHRAIN v. ROY CHUNDER GHOSE

20. ——— Omission of performance of ceremonies. Held, that, as no objection to the omission of any of the usual ceremonies of adoption or to the age of the adopted son was taken before the lower Court, its decision was not open to those objections when taken on appeal. DURYAO SINGH v. KARUN SINGH . 1 Agra 31

21. ——— Objection to share taken on adoption—Objection on appeal to extent of share awarded to adopted son. In a suit by an adopted son to recover his share in his adoptive father's estate, a son having been born to the adoptive father, subsequently to the plaintiff's adoption, the Court of first instance awarded the plaintiff a fourth share of the property in dispute. The defendant appealed to the District Court, but in appeal raised no question as to the extent of the share awarded to the plaintiff. On second appeal to the High Court, it was contended that, in any event, the plaintiff was only entitled to a fifth share. Held, that, under the circumstances and having regard to the nature of the question, the point might be taken in second appeal on behalf of the defendant, and the High Court varied the decree by awarding the plaintiff a fifth share instead of a fourth share, but ordered the appellant (defendant) to bear his own costs of the appeal. GIRIAPA v. NINGAPA
I. L. R. 17 Bom. 100

22. ——— Alienation—Alienation by member of Mitakshara family—Invalidity of alienation—Proof of consideration. A father having executed a deed conveying certain ancestral property to two persons (D and B), who alienated it to several others, his son sued to have the conveyances by D and B set aside on the ground that the deed given by the father was benami, and that D and B never had possession. The suit was dismissed by both the lower Courts. Held, that, as plaintiff went to trial in the Courts below upon one issue only, viz., whether D and B were ever really in occupation, he was not entitled in special appeal to complain that evidence had not been taken as to the passing of consideration-money. Held, that, as no issue was raised in the lower Courts which could have been the foundation for a declaration of right, the non-decision of a claim to such a declaration could not be made a ground of special appeal. Held, that where the question whether the alienation of certain property by the father without the son's consent was valid under the Mitakshara law was not raised in the lower Courts, such invalidity could not be admitted as a ground of objection in special appeal, for it necessarily involved an issue of fact. PURIAG DUTT v. BROJO KOONWAR . 9 W. R. 503

BENODE PATNAIK v. DOYANIDHEE BULLIOR SINGH . . . 9 W. R. 493

23. ——— Appeal—Objection that no appeal lies. The High Court refused to entertain an objection (not taken till the close of the appellant's argument) that, the amount in appeal being les than R5,000, no appeal would lie. CHUNDER NATH MISSER v. SIRDAR KHAN . 18 W. R. 218

24. ——— Attachment—Invalidity of attachment. An objection that an attachment under s. 240 of Act VIII of 1859 was invalid, because the formalities required by s. 239 had not been complied with, was not allowed to be taken on appeal, it not having been raised in the Courts below. RAMKRISHNA DAS SUROWJI v. SURFUNNISSA BEGUM

25. ——— Award—Objection that arbitrators had no power to administer other than usual oath. Where on a reference to arbitration the arbitrators had made an award founded on the evidence of the defendant after he had by agreement been sworn on the Koran, and an objection was taken that the arbitrators had no power to administer such oath, and that the award was invalid: Held per PEARSON, J. (SPANKIE, J., doubting), that, as the objection was one which vitally affected the procedure of the arbitrators, it could not be ignored, although it was not preferred in the lower Courts, and was not to be found in the memorandum of special appeal. I. L. R. 1 All. 535

26. ——— Objection to validity of award. Where objection to the validity of the award on the ground that it was made beyond the time allowed was not taken by the defendant in the first Court:—Held, that he was not thereby estopped from raising the objection for the first time in appeal, inasmuch as it was not shown that in the first Court he was aware of the defect, or had

28. ——— Custom—Objection as to custom against inheritance. In a suit by a Hindu widow for possession and declaration of title:—Held, that defendant could not be allowed to come in and urge for the first time on appeal that, by a family custom or koolachar, females were excluded from inheriting. 29. ——— Damages, measure of—Mode of calculation of damages. Held, that, as the defendant had made no objection to the manner in which the plaintiff had calculated damages in the Courts below, the question could not be gone into on special appeal. MCDONALD v. RAJARAM ROY

31. ——— Defence not raised in the lower Court—Declaratory decree, suit for—Objection to declaratory decree. B J, a Hindu widow, made a will disposing of property, of which under an award she had only the use during her life, and to which the plaintiff, her son, was entitled after her death. While she was still living, the plaintiff filed this suit, praying that the will might be declared invalid. The defendants were the testatrix and those who took under the will. While the suit was pending, the testatrix died. The Subordinate Judge passed a decree in plaintiff's favour, and declared the will invalid. The defendants appealed, and contended for the first time in appeal that the allegations in the plaint, viz., that the will was in their favour, and that they (the defendants) were interested in denying the plaintiff's title as reversioner, did not constitute a case in which, in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion, a declaratory decree ought to be made. Held, that, as the objection was taken for the first time in appeal, it would be unjust to allow the defendants to benefit after they had failed to resist G's claim on the merits. defendant pleaded Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 4, plaintiff referred in both the lower Courts to a chittee to prove variation of rent; but it was found that the terms of the chittee barred enhancement. Held, that it was not open to plaintiff in special appeal to object that the chittee had not been proved. LALLA BANEE PERSHAD v. LALLA DABEE PERSHAD

33. ——— Service of notice. In a suit for enhancement of rent it was objected on behalf of the defendant in special appeal that service of notice had not been proved. Held, that the question was one of fact, and the objection ought, therefore, to have been taken in the Court of first instance. 38. ——— Evidence—Time for objection to evidence. It is the duty of the party who wishes to object to evidence to object in the first instance, and not to delay doing so until the case is before the High Court in special appeal. SEETUL PERSHAD MITTER v. JUNMEJOY MULLICK 12 W. R. 244

39. ——— Objections to evidence as not being the best. Objections to evidence as not being the best evidence should not be allowed to be taken on special appeal. AVUDH BEHAREE SINGH v. RAM RAJ TEWAREE 18 W. R. 105

LOCHUN SINGH v. HET NARAIN SINGH 24 W. R. 232

40. ——— Objection to mode of recording evidence. The objection that the depositions of the witnesses were not taken in the manner prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure, but only notes of the evidence, is not one which can be taken in special appeal. LALL MAHOMED v. PEER NUZUR . . . . . 18 W. R. 112

41. ——— Documents, though inadmissible, admitted in first Court by consent—Documents not objected to in first Court—Appeal. Judgments not inter partes, though not conclusive as res judicata, are admissible in evidence under s. 13 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) to show the conduct of the parties, or particular instances of the exercise of a right, or admissions made by the parties or their predecessors in title, or to identify property, or to show how it has been previously dealt with. Where parties to a suit, in order to save delay or expense or for any other reason, have agreed or not objected to the admission of certain evidence given in some former proceedings, although it is not strictly admissible, and the first Court has allowed this to be done, it is not open to the Appellate Court to take objection to such a procedure and exclude the evidence. LAKSHMAN GOVIND v. AMRIT GOPAL . . I. L. R. 24 Bom. 591

42. ——— Objection as to admissibility of evidence. It being objected in special appeal that the decision of the lower Appellate Court was based on documents which were neither admissible as legal evidence nor had any bearing on the point to be decided:—Held, that, though the objection to the admissibility of the evidence ought to have been taken in the Court in which the evidence was tendered, yet coming in such a shape as it did, it could not be got over. Held, also, (MITTER, J., dissentiente), that as defendant has succeeded in special appeal on an objection which he should have taken before, he ought to pay his own costs in this appeal, even should he succeed ultimately (the case being remanded); and that it is not the exclusive duty of a Court, but that of pleaders also, to see whether evidence tendered is legally admissible. 44. ——— Objection as to admissibility of evidence. Where no objection has been taken as to the admissibility of documentary evidence,—viz., a decree and other proceedings in regard to that decree, which had been made use of by the opposite party,—an Appellate Court has no jurisdiction to exclude it. Where defendant allows, without objection, a purchaser of a plaintiff's interest in the suit to substitute his name on the record under an order of Court, he cannot afterwards contend that the suit is thereby abated. BIR CHANDRA ROY MAHAPATTER v. BANSI DHAR ROY MAHAPATTER . . . 3 B. L. R. A. C. 214

45. ——— Evidence received without objection. Where a deposition made in another suit, to which special appellant was not a party, was admitted and used by the first Court without any objection on the part of the special appellant, it was held that he could not be allowed to object it in special appeal. Where the lower Appellate Court's judgment is good, and its adjudication of a plaintiff's right has been based on a sound principle, the High Court will not allow a new point to be taken in special appeal which was not taken in either of the Courts below. WAZEER JEMADAR v. NOOR ALI . . . . 12 W. R. 33

46. ——— Objection to validity of document. Before an objection to the validity of a document filed as evidence in a case can be admitted as a ground of special appeal, it must be shown to have been made at every stage in the Courts below. The case was tried, on remand from the Judge, as a suit under the provisions of s. 229 of Act VIII of 1859. Held, per JACKSON, J., that, as the decree-holder had not complained that the officer of the Court had been obstructed or resisted by the claimant, the case did not fall within s. 229 of Act VIII of 1859 : and, therefore, the Court had not jurisdiction to take summary cognizance of the case. Per MITTER, J. This objection, taken for the first time on special appeal, did not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. 69. ——— Objection to suit for mesne profits as being matter for execution—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 244. A landlord sued his tenant for arrears of rent, and obtained a decree for a certain amount and a declaration that, if the amount were not paid within fifteen days, the tenant should be ejected under s. 52, Act VIII of 1869. The amount was not paid and the landlord executed the decree and obtained possession. The tenant appealed, and succeeded in getting the decree set aside, and the amount found due from him for arrears by the first Court was reduced and a decree made, directing that, if the reduced amount were not paid within fifteen days, he should be ejected. He paid the amount found due by the Appellate Court within the fifteen days, and recovered possession of his holding. He then brought a suit in the Munsif's Court to recover mesne profits from his landlord for the time he was in possession after the execution of the first Court's decree. It was contended on second appeal that the suit would not lie, as the matter might and should have been determined in the execution department under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that, as the suit was instituted in the Munsif's Court and the Munsif, under the circumstances of the case, was the officer who, in the first instance, would have had to determine the matter in the execution department, there was at most only an error of procedure and no exercise of jurisdiction by the Munsif which he did not possess, and that upon the authority of the decision in Purmessurree Pershad Narain Singh v. Jankee Kooer, 19 W. R. 90, this could not be made a ground of objection on appeal. Held, also that, the point being one that was not raised in the pleadings or before either of the lower Courts, and being a point which went exclusively to the jurisdiction of the Court, it

74.——— Jurisdiction—Suit for property wrongly taken in execution of decree—Separate suit brought where proceeding should have been in execution. Where a suit for the recovery of lands taken by the decree-holder in excess of his decree has been held not to lie under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, but the suit had been instituted in the Court which had jurisdiction to execute the decree, the plaint may be regarded as an application to that Court for determining the question whether the lands are covered by the decree, and the suit does not therefore fail for want of jurisdiction. Purmessurree Pershad Narain Singh v. Jankee Koo r, 19 W. R. 90, and Azizuddin Hossein v. Ramanugra Roy, I. L. R. 14 Calc. 605, referred to and followed. Held, also, that in such a case it is incumbent upon the defendant to raise the plea of jurisdiction in the Court of first instance, the question being not a pure question of law, but a question which would depend upon facts. 75.——— Objection to jurisdiction on the ground of wrong valuation of suit—Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1889), s. 11. The High Court held that it was not at liberty to entertain an objection that the suit was not within the pecuniary limits of the District Munsif's jurisdiction, as it appeared that the appellant had not been prejudiced on the merits. 76.——— Objection taken for first time in second appeal that preliminaries to suit have not been taken—Question of jurisdiction. In a suit for declaration of the plaintiff's right to have their names registered as purchasers of a tenure, an objection having been raised in second appeal that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, as the plaintiffs had not previously asked the Collector to place them on the register:—Held, that this circumstance was not necessary to give jurisdiction, although it might be a reason for treating the suit as premature. That objection, however, being taken for the first time in second appeal was disallowed. BHIKAJI BAJI v. PANDU

81. ——— Landlord and tenant—Suit to have pottah cancelled. Where a plaintiff sued to have the defendants' pottah cancelled on the ground of fraud, to restrain them from felling trees, and for a declaration that a certain shola was Government property:—Held, that, having failed to establish the grounds upon which relief was claimed, the plaintiff was not entitled to object on appeal, for the first time, that the defendants were merely tenants from year to year. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. NUNJA . . . . I. L. R. 5 Mad. 163

82. ——— Limitation—Possession. Where a defendant in the lower Court pleaded limitation, but placed that issue upon the simple fact that he himself had possession for twelve years and upwards, which issue was found against him:—Held, that it was too late for the defendant in special appeal to object that that finding did not dispose of the issue of limitation. KISTO MOHUN KURMOKAR v. NOYAN TARA DOSSEE . . 10 W. R. 389

83. ——— Minority—Right of member of family to alienate. A plaintiff obtained a decree to set aside an alienation of ancestral property effected by his father during his minority. Defendant objected in special appeal, first, that the suit was barred by lapse of time since plaintiff attained his majority; and, secondly, that, under the Mitakshara law, the father had a right to alienate a share of the property. Held, that, as the first of these objections was entirely a matter of fact, and as the second, though essentially a matter of law, went to the substance of the plaintiff's claim, they should have been urged in the lower Courts, and could not be admitted for the first time in special appeal. BENODE PUTNAIK v. DOYANIDHEE BULLIOR SINGH . . 9 W. R. 493

84. ——— Settlement. In the first Court an issue was raised whether or not the hearing of this suit was barred by the law of limitation. One of the grounds of appeal to the Judge was, that the Principal Sudder Ameen ought to have held the suit barred as regards the diaras under the special limitation of three years from the date of the Collector's settlement. The Judge did not notice this ground in his judgment. The same ground of appeal was repeated in the special appeal to the High Court, but that Court refused to entertain it, for the reason that it did not appear to have been raised in argument before the Judge or in the first Court. The Munsif held that the suit was not barred on the ground that it had been brought within three years from the date on which A had attained his majority, but decided against A on the merits. On appeal the question of limitation was not raised, but on the merits the Judge also found against A. On special appeal by A, B took an objection under s. 348 of Act VIII of 1859 that A's suit was barred. Held, that B could not take the objection at that stage. BISSONATH SURMA v. SHOODAMOKEE 11 B. L. R. Ap. 1 : 20 W. R. 1

87. ——— Setting aside ex-parte case. A Munsif entertained a petition by a defendant under s. 119 of the Civil Procedure Code, and set aside his former judgment given ex-parte in favour of the plaintiff, and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. The plaintiff, on appeal before the Judge, did not raise the objection that the Munsif ought not to have entertained the petition of the defendant, as it had not been presented in due time. It was held to be too late to raise the objection on special appeal. BORO KHASIA v. JATA SIRDAR 8 B. L. R. 78 : 15 W. R. 315

129. ——— Suit for declaratory decree—Wrongful distraint. A suit was brought against the plaintiff by his tenants for an illegal distress in attaching crops raised by them on the land let to them by him. The present defendant, in the course of that suit, presented a petition to the Court, in which he stated that he was the owner of the land on which the crops attached had been raised. The plaintiff brought the present suit for a declaration of his title and confirmation of possession, alleging that the defendant's statement affected his (plaintiff's) title by throwing a cloud over it. On special appeal it was objected for the first time that the plaint disclosed no cause of action, and the objection was admitted and prevailed. JAN ALI v. KHONKAR ABDUR KUHMA

130. ——— Suit for declaratory decree—Possession. In a suit merely for a declaration of right in respect of certain property, the lower Appellate Court, considering that the suit was really one for the possession of such property, allowed the plaintiff to make up the full amount of Court-fees required for a suit for possession. The plaint in the suit was not amended, and the lower Appellate Court eventually gave the plaintiff a declaratory decree. Held, on second appeal by the defendant who objected that a suit merely for a declaratory decree could not be maintained, that such objection ought not to be allowed under the circumstances. 133. ———— Dismissal of suit on the ground that the plaint disclosed no cause of action, although no such ground taken in the written statement. It is competent to the defendant at the earliest possible stage of the hearing to obtain the declaration of the Court upon the question whether the plaint does or does not disclose a cause of action, even if that question is not expressly raised in the written statement. 134. ———— Cause of action. In a suit by a purchaser of an estate to have his name registered in the Collectorate and his possession confirmed, which failed in the Court of first instance, but was decreed in the lower Appellate Court, it was held to be too late for the defendant, after contesting the suit in two Courts, to urge in special appeal that the plaint disclosed no cause of action. 135. ———— Cause of action —Per PEARSON, J., and STRAIGHT, J. (SPANKIE, J., dissenting)—That in disposing of a second appeal the High Court is competent, under s. 542 of Act X of 1877, to consider the question whether the plaintiff has any cause of action or not, although such question has not been raised by the defendant appellant in the Courts below or in his memorandum of second appeal, but is raised for the first time at the hearing of such appeal. 136. ———— Cause of action —Premature suit. K sued N (his uncle) for partition of the estate of V (the father of N) in the lifetime of V, who was alleged to be of unsound mind. N objected to the suit being entertained on the ground that V was alive. Before issues were settled, V died, and the suit was tried and K obtained a decree. On appeal by N on the ground that, when the plaint was filed, K had no cause of action:—Held, that the decree could not on this ground be set aside. NARAYNA v. KRISHNA I. L. 137. ———— Suit for partition of portion of property. A case is not to be decided in special appeal upon a question which was not raised or tried or considered by the lower Courts. The objection that a suit for a partition of portion of joint property will not be taken for the first time on special appeal was therefore not allowed to prevail. SHIB SAHAYE SINGH v. NURSHING LALL 22 W. R. 352

138. ———— Separate suit for question determinable in execution of decree. Where a question such as is provided for by Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11, instead of being determined by order of the Court executing the decree, was made the subject of a separate suit in that Court, it was held that, though the form of procedure was wrong, there was not a want of jurisdiction which could be made a ground of objection in appeal, PURMESSUREE PERSHAD NARAIN SINGH v. JANKEE KOOER 19 W. 139. ———— Delay in bringing suit. An objection that there had been such delay that the Court in its discretion under s. 27 of the Specific Relief Act would not give relief in a suit for specific performance not allowed to prevail in second appeal. MAHOMED v. SITARAMAYYAR . . I. L. R. 15 Mad. 50

141. ———— Service of summons—Objection that suit ought to have been dismissed for non-service of summons on non-payment of costs. Where the Court did not dismiss the suit under s. 5 of Act XXIII of 1861 as it should have done, but proceeded with the suit and passed a decree from which the original defendant appealed on the merits to the Assistant Judge, without taking the objection that the suit ought to have been dismissed, it was held that he could not raise the objection for the first time in special appeal. ABAS v IBRAHIMJI 5 Bom. A. C. 119

142. ———— Settlement—Suit for possession. In a suit to recover possession, the plaintiff alleging that the land in dispute from which he had been ousted had been settled with him by Government in 1833 as part of his zamindari, and the defendant alleging that the land was part of his lakhiraj garden land, which had been released by Government from assessment, the Courts below found that the lands in dispute were part of those which had been settled with the plaintiff. On appeal to the Privy Council, the defendant attempted to show that, assuming the lands in question to have been part of those settled with the plaintiff, that settlement had been improperly made. Held, that this contention was not open to the defendant upon the record, never having been taken in the Courts below. 144. ——— Objection to transfer from Munsif to Judge. Although the transfer by the Judge of a case from the file of the Munsif to that of his own Court, and the decision of it upon issues framed by and evidence taken before the Munsif, is improper, yet, if no objection be taken to it at the time, it must be presumed that the parties consented to the action of the superior Court, and they are not at liberty to await its decision and on finding it adverse to them to take exception for the first time to the Court's proceedings on appeal. 147. ——— Question of deficiency of Court-fee not raised in the Court of first instance—Court Fees Act, s. 12—Estoppel. The plaintiffs, suing in respect of certain plots of land, by mistake undervalued their claim with regard to the said land, and in consequence paid an insufficient Court-fee on their plaint. This mistake was not discovered until the case had come in appeal before the High Court, and, when discovered, the deficiency was at once made good. Held, that no plea as to the deficiency in the Court-fee having been raised, as it might have been by the defendant before the decision of the suit in the Court of first instance, such plea could not be raised for the first time in appeal. 149. ——— Withdrawal of suit—Plea taken for the first time at the hearing of second appeal. The plea that the plaintiff had improperly been permitted to withdraw from a former suit with liberty to bring the present one, which had not been taken in the lower Courts, and was not taken in the memorandum of second appeal, was not permitted to be urged at the hearing of the second appeal. 6. ——— Contract Act, ss. 60, 74. In consideration of an advance of ₹118, the defendant executed, in favour of the plaintiff, a mortgage-bond, dated 3rd November 1879, by which it was stipulated that the amount should be repaid "in kind by delivery of half the amount of the rubbi crops of every description produced at the first-class rates ; and in case the same is not paid in kind, it will be paid principal with interest from the date of execution at one anna per cent. per mensem in cash in the month of Baisakh 1287 F. S. (April 1880). The defendants admitted execution of the bond, and pleaded payments in grain to the amount of ₹136, which they failed to prove. It was found that the plaintiff had received payments in grain to the extent of ₹71, more than half of which, however, he claimed to be entitled to appropriate to the payment of other antecedent debts which were due to him by the defendants. It was not stated at the time of payment towards which debt the payments were to be applied, but all the payments were admittedly made in kind. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to appropriate the payments to the antecedent debts, inasmuch as, within the meaning of s. 60 of the Contract Act, there were "other circumstances" indicating that the payments were made in liquidation of the amount of the bond. mortgages bore interest at 12 per cent. on the mortgage debt payable with costs, and the other carried simple interest. Payments made by the debtor had been appropriated by the creditor to payment of the interest on the bond bearing simple interest, while the compound interest, on the other hand, had been left to accumulate. In a suit, brought against the representative of the debtor after his decease, to enforce the mortgage bearing compound interest, the objection was taken to the appropriation by the creditor. Held, that the rule in s. 60 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, follows the ordinary law in prescribing a rule as to the case in which the creditor may, at his discretion, apply, to one or other of the debts due to him, payments made by the debtor. A reluctance shown by the debtor to agree to pay compound interest, before he executed the mortgage bond at such interest, was not an indication, within that section, that he intended that application of his payments should be made first to that bond. C. 526,* referred to. A, B, M, R, and N were tried together on a charge under s. 460 of the Penal Code. The principal evidence against all of them was that of an approver. Against A, B, and M there was the further evidence that they produced certain portions of the property stolen on the night of the crime from the house where the crime was committed. With regard to R, it was proved that he was present when B pointed out the place where some of the property was dug up, but he did not appear to have said anything or given any directions about it. Held, with reference to A, B and M, that it could not be said that their recent possession of part of the stolen property so soon after it had been stolen, was not such corroboration of the approver's evidence of their participation in the crime as entitled the Court to act upon his story in regard to those particular persons. Held, that, inasmuch as there was no sufficient material to warrant the inference of guilty knowledge on R's part, and with regard to N no property was found with him or produced through his instrumentality, both R and N ought to have been acquitted. 13. ——— Conditional pardon—Withdrawal of pardon—Jurisdiction of Magistrate—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 349. A party charged along with others with murder, having had a conditional pardon granted to him by the Deputy Magistrate, retracted before the Sessions Judge the statements he had made before the Deputy Magistrate. On being sent back to the Deputy Magistrate, that officer committed him for trial on a charge of giving false evidence. The Sessions Judge considered that the Deputy Magistrate was bound, under s. 349, Code of Criminal Procedure, to commit on the original charge of murder, and not on that of giving false evidence, and he recommended that the order of commitment should be quashed and the Deputy Magistrate directed to commit on the charge of murder. The High Court declined to interfere, as there was evidence on the record tending to support the charge for giving false evidence, and as s. 349 did not have the effect of taking away from Magistrates the power to entertain a charge of this kind. 16. ——— Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 349—Acquittal of prisoner—Withdrawal of pardon granted to approver after judgment of acquittal—Conviction on trial improperly originated, power of High Court to set aside. At a Sessions trial the Judge, after acquitting the prisoner, passed an order withdrawing a pardon already granted to an approver, who had given his evidence as such approver before the Sessions Court, and ordered his commitment. The approver was charged, tried, and found guilty. Held, by MITTER, J., that the order withdrawing the pardon and committing the approver was contrary to the provisions of s. 349 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the words "before judgment has been passed" being words inserted in the section to put a limit to the time within which the power of withdrawal of the pardon conferred in the Court of Sessions may be actually exercised; and that therefore the trial of the approver was illegal. The power of directing commitments conferred upon the Sessions Court by s. 349 of the Criminal Procedure Code can be exercised only before judgment has been passed. Held, by MACLEAN, J., that it is not necessary that the order should be made before judgment is passed, but that it must appear to the Judge before he passes judgment that the conditions of the pardon have not been complied with; and that in the present case it was impossible to hold that, because the actual order of commitment of the accused was written (although in the judgment) after the acquittal, therefore it did not appear to the Judge before passing judgment that there were grounds for his order. In the matter of the petition of NOBIN CHUNDER BANIKYA. 19. ——— Tender of pardon, effect of—Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 337, 339—Accomplice—Subsequent trial of accomplice for connected offences. A prisoner charged before a Magistrate at Benares with offences punishable under ss. 471, 472, and 474 of the Penal Code made a confession to the Magistrate in respect of those offences. He was then sent in custody to Calcutta, and was there, together with other persons, charged before a Magistrate with offences punishable under ss. 467, 473, and 475. The conduct to which these charges related was closely connected and mixed up with that to which the charges first-mentioned had reference. Under s. 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate at Calcutta tendered a pardon to the prisoner upon the conditions specified in that section, and the prisoner accepted the pardon, and gave evidence for the prosecution. The Magistrate held that this evidence was not sufficiently corroborated, and accordingly discharged all the accused, but the pardon was not withdrawn, and there was nothing to show that the Magistrate was dissatisfied with the prisoner's statements or considered that he had not complied with the conditions on which the pardon was tendered. Subsequently the prisoner was committed by the Magistrate of Benares for trial before the Court of Sessions upon the charges under ss. 471, 472, and 474 of the Penal Code. He pleaded not guilty, but did not in terms plead the pardon as a bar to the trial, though he made some reference to the subject; and the Sessions Judge having made a brief inquiry as to the proceedings at Calcutta, came to the conclusion that there was no sufficient proof of any conditional pardon, and convicted and sentenced the accused. Held, that by the terms of the conditional pardon granted to the accused by the Calcutta Magistrate, the conditions of which were satisfied, as was shown by its never having been withdrawn, the accused was protected from trial at Benares in respect of the offences under ss. 471, 472, and 474, and was not liable to be proceeded against in respect of them, and that the trial and conviction were, therefore, illegal. Although

s. 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not in terms cover a case where a Magistrate holding a preliminary inquiry for committal against several persons tenders a conditional pardon to one of them, examines him as a witness, and subsequently discharges all the accused for want of a primâ facie case against them, the words "every person accepting a tender under this section shall be examined as a witness in the case" mean that for all purposes (subject to failure to satisfy the conditions of the pardon as provided for by s. 339) such a person ceases to be triable for the offence or offences under inquiry or (with reference to s. 339) for "any other offence of which he appears to have been guilty in connection with the same matter," while making "a full and true disclosure of the whole of the circumstances within his knowledge relative to the offences" directly under inquiry. The words last quoted refer to the importance, when a pardon is tendered, of encouraging the approver to give the fullest details, so that points may be found in his evidence which may be capable of corroboration. The question of how far the pardon protects him, and what portion of it should not protect him, ought not to be treated in a narrow spirit. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. GANGA CHARAN . I. L. R. 11 All. 79

3. —— —— s. 32—Waiver of irregularity—Well in mill compound—Manufactory. By a Government notification of the 3rd of June 1863, published in the Gazette, it was declared, under the provisions of Act VI of 1857, that a certain strip of land passing by the mill of the defendants was required for a public purpose,—the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway,—a plan of which land was to be seen in the Collector's office. On the 4th of November following, the secretary of the defendants' company received a notice signed by the Collector, requiring the owner of the mill to call at the Collector's office to signify his acceptance or otherwise of the compensation for the land required. The secretary went to the Collector's office, and there saw a plan, from which it appeared that an adjoining well from which the engine of the mill was supplied with water was intended to be taken, but no compensation for the well or land required was then agreed upon. On the 28th November a notice signed by the Collector was served on the defendants, stating that he had appointed an arbitrator on behalf of Government, and requiring the defendants to appoint an arbitrator also; the defendants in reply stated that they had already appointed an arbitrator. Held, that the defendants had, by appointing their arbitrator to determine the compensation for the land required, waived any irregularity in the previous proceedings, and precluded themselves from claiming to have the whole manufactory taken under s. 32, Act VI of 1857, though no proceedings were taken in the arbitration for nearly twelve months subsequently, and the defendants had shortly before such proceedings made such a claim. The section is not confined to cases in which a dispute actually existing at date of agreement is agreed to be referred to arbitration. But the agreement must name the arbitrator or arbitrators, and an agreement which provides for the future appointment or election of arbitrators does not fall within the section. The effect of the last clause of s. 523 is to give the parties to such an agreement power to nominate the arbitrator, even when they have agreed that he shall be appointed by the Court. In such cases the Court must

5. ——— Reference by executor to arbitration—Application for probate—Opposition by caveator—Effect of award—Jurisdiction of Testamentary Court to decide question of award—Power of executor to refer question of execution of will to arbitration. Any dispute (for instance, as to the due execution of a will) in a suit on the testamentary side of the High Court can be referred to arbitration, and the Court will recognize such reference and the award made in it. An executor having propounded a will applied for probate, a caveat was filed denying the execution of the alleged will, and the matter was duly registered as a suit. The executor and the caveatrix subsequently referred "the dispute" to arbitration, and an award was made that the alleged will had not been executed. The executor nevertheless subsequently continued the suit. At the hearing the caveatrix pleaded the award, and contended that it was binding on the plaintiff (executor). The plaintiff (executor) contended that the Court as a Court of Probate had no jurisdiction to try any question as to the award, but was limited only to the question of the execution of the will. Held, per CANDY, J., that the Court had jurisdiction to determine the question as to the award. Held, also, that the award was binding on the executor. 19.—Agreement to refer—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 375, 462, 525—Agreement to refer to arbitration during pendency of suit—No order of reference made by Court—Power to give effect to agreement in the suit. During the pendency of a suit for partition between members of an undivided Hindu family, the division of the properties was referred by the parties to arbitrators, and an adjournment was granted by the Court to enable an award to be made. An order of reference was not, however, asked for, or made by the Court. An award was made, whereupon plaintiffs requested that it should be filed and that a decree might be passed in its terms. Defendants objected to the filing of the award. On the question whether the award could be given effect to in the suit: Held, that the agreement to refer to arbitration had not been lawfully entered into, as the submission related to the rights of minors, who were parties to the suit, and leave of the Court had not been obtained under s. 462 of the Code of Civil Procedure, either before the submission to arbitration or after the award; and that the adjustment was in consequence not binding on the minors, nor (regard being had to the nature of the suit) on the major members of the family. The effect of the submission was to take away from the Court the power of adjudicating upon the rights of the minors, and to leave such adjudication to a private tribunal. Such an agreement fell within s. 462 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Semble: that assuming the award to be but the completion of an agreement lawfully entered into by the parties, and that such agreement, plus the award, affected the rights of the parties in the pending suit, it could only do so as an agreement, adjusting the suit; and as such could be recorded and acted upon under s. 375 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Quære: Whether an award filed under s. 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and obtained under similar circumstances, would be invalid? An objection was now taken by defendant No. 2 that he was not bound by the award. Held, that it was so, and that the conduct of defendant No. 2 was not such that it could be said that he was bound by the award by reason of acquiescence. This application was signed on behalf of the defendants by some of the defendants personally, and on behalf of the others by a pleader. It appeared, however, that the pleader's vakalatnamah has not been signed by one of the defendants on whose behalf the pleader had signed. Held, that in the absence of any circumstance to estop the defendant who had not signed from objecting to the reference, the reference to arbitration and all subsequent proceedings founded thereupon were invalid. Pitam Mal v. Sadiq Ali, *I. 5. ——— Appointment of sole arbitrator in place of four—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 315, 318, 319—Recall of reference—Consent—Appointment of substitute for arbitrator. In a suit for a partnership account, the matters in dispute were, by an order dated the 19th April 1877, referred by consent to four persons and an umpire, the award to be made within five months. Some steps were taken in the reference, but the arbitrators failed to make their award within the time limited, and meanwhile the umpire died. After negotiations for appointment of a fresh arbitrator and enlargement of the time had failed, the plaintiff moved that " the order of the 9th April 1877 " might be recalled, and that the matters in dispute might be referred to the arbitration of such person or persons as the Court might be pleased to admit, or be tried and determined by the Court. The defendant opposed the application. An order was, however, made on the 29th May 1878 that the order of the 19th April 1877 should be recalled, and that all matters in difference between the parties should be referred to C D, who should make his award in writing within three months, or within such further time as the said C D might think necessary. Certain provisions as to the payment of costs were also made. Held, that the order of the 19th May was not an order recalling the reference under s. 318, and then referring it afresh under s. 315 of Act VIII of 1859, but an order under s. 319 appointing a new arbitrator in the place of the old ones, for which the consent of all parties was not necessary. On the application of the plaintiff the Subordinate Judge, under s. 526 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ordered the award to be filed, holding that the arbitrators had as such an implied power to deal with the costs. The defendant applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction, praying that the record of the case might be sent for, and the order of the Subordinate Judge set aside. Held, that the arbitrators had no implied power to deal with the question of costs, and that on the defendant's objection the Subordinate Judge should have refused to file the award. Under the circumstances, the High Court, instead of setting aside the order to file the award, directed the award to stand good, except so far as it awarded costs, and that the decree should be drawn in accordance with it, as it would be if it contained no direction as to costs. No order for enlarging that time was made. The first meeting of the arbitrators was held on May 22nd, 1867, and four subsequent meetings were held, at which all the parties attended, and evidence was taken ; at the last of which meetings, namely, on 27th July, an objection for the first time was taken on behalf of the defendant that the time limited by the order of reference had expired, but the arbitrators proceeded with the reference. The award was made on 12th August 1867, and remained with one of the arbitrators until his death in August 1868. Subsequently it was produced by the other arbitrator, on the application of the parties to the suit, and delivered to the successful party, by whom it was brought into Court on the 10th May 1870, and judgment was moved for in accordance therewith. Held, that the arbitrators had authority to make the award. The award was properly submitted to the Court. S. 320, Act VIII of 1859, does not make it necessary for the arbitrators to submit the award to the Court personally. Submission to the Court under s. 320 is not necessary to the completion of an award under ss. 315 and 318. 6. ——— Refusal of arbitrator to reconsider award. The plaintiff in this suit sued the defendants to recover certain moneys presented to him on his marriage, which he alleged the defendants had received and appropriated to their own use. The defendants denied that they had received such moneys, but admitted that such moneys had been credited by the plaintiff's father to the firm in which they, the plaintiff and the plaintiff's father, were jointly interested, against a larger amount of moneys belonging to the firm which had been expended on the plaintiff's marriage. The parties agreed to refer the matter in dispute between them to arbitration, and to abide by the decision of the arbitrator. The arbitrator decided that the plaintiff could not recover the money he sued for and which had been credited to the firm of which he was a partner, as a larger sum had been expended on his marriage out of the funds of the firm. The plaintiff obtained the opinions of certain pandits to the effect that, under Hindu law, gifts on marriage are regarded as separate acquisitions, and prayed that the Munsif would remit the award with these opinions to the arbitrator. The Munsif remitted the award with the opinions, requesting the arbitrator to consider them, and to return his opinion in writing within a certain period. The arbitrator having refused to act further, the Munsif proceeded to determine the suit, and gave the plaintiff a decree on the ground that, in a joint Hindu family, presents received on marriage do not fall into the common fund. Held (PEARSON, J., dissenting), that, there being no illegality apparent on the face of the award the Munsif was not justified in remitting the award, or in setting the award aside and proceeding to determine the suit himself, but that he should have passed judgment in accordance with the award. The plaintiffs and the defendants claimed under the same landlord. The Munsif remitted the award to the arbitrator for determination of the other matters arising in the case; the arbitrator, however, refused to act further in the matter, and the Munsif himself took up the case and decided it in favour of the plaintiffs. On appeal, the Subordinate Judge held that the award made by the arbitrator was sufficient for the determination of the case, and reversed the decision of the Munsif and gave the defendants a decree in terms of the award. Held, that, as the plaintiffs and the defendants claimed under one and the same landlord, and the question between them being which of the two had the better title to the land in dispute, the case could not have been concluded by the finding of the arbitrator upon the question of possession, and that the Munsif had acted rightly, on the arbitrator declining to complete the award, in deciding the case himself. 9. ——— Omission of arbitrator to carry out terms of reference—Suit for partition and to take accounts—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 2, 520, 522, 523—Filing agreement to refer to arbitration in Court—"Decree". The sharers of a joint undivided estate agreed in writing that such estate should be partitioned, and the accounts thereof settled by arbitration, and named one of such sharers as arbitrator, and agreed that he should settle all the accounts, show the surplus at each sharer's credit, and prepare lots, after partition of the lands and houses comprehended in such estate, and have them drawn within one year from the completion of the partition. Subsequently one of such sharers applied, under s. 523 of Act X of 1877, to have such agreement filed in Court. The other sharers not objecting to this course, such agreement was filed accordingly, and the case was referred to such arbitrator. The arbitrator made an award whereby he partitioned such estate into lots, assigning some only of such lots by name, and wherein he stated that he had not been able to settle the accounts owing to the default of the parties; and that, considering that the partition should take effect without any delay, he did not ask for further time. He further stated that "all the parties state that they will adjust the accounts after renewing the agreement," and he requested that the unassigned lots might be drawn in Court. The Court made an order confirming the award, and, it being objected that the settlement of the accounts should not be postponed, but that they should be settled as agreed directed that the arbitrator should settle the accounts, and gave him a year's time for that purpose, and, some of the parties not being willing to draw the unassigned lots, directed the distribution of such lots "in reference to the age and number" of the sharers. Held, that such order was a "decree" within the meaning of ss. 2 and 522 of Act X of 1877, that the arbitrator should himself have drawn such lots, or he should have made the parties draw them; but, inasmuch as it would not have strained the agreement to have had such lots drawn in Court and no objection had been taken to the arbitrator not having himself drawn them, it was not incumbent on the Court to have remitted the award in order that the arbitrator might have drawn them, that the Court, however, should not have distributed such lots in the manner it had done, but should have drawn a lot for each person; and in acting as it had done it had acted contrary to the award, and for that reason its decree could not be maintained, and that, in confirming the award before the accounts had been settled and an award made in respect thereof, the Court had acted erroneously, inasmuch as the award had left undetermined a very important matter, viz., the settlement of the accounts; and the Court should, under s. 520 of Act X of 1877, have remitted the award for the reconsideration of the arbitrator; and, as it had the power to remit it upon such terms as it thought fit, the Court could have allowed one year, if necessary, for the settlement of the accounts; and on this account, and also because the Court had made an order postponing the settlement of the accounts, and thereby made an order contrary to, and in excess of, the award, its decree must be reversed. The award was remitted on the ground that the arbitrators had not determined the issues Nos. 1, 2, 5, and 6. Held, (1) the legality of an order remitting an award for the reconsideration of the arbitrators may be challenged on appeal against the decree ultimately passed; and (2) that the award ought not to have been remitted: there was no illegality on the face of it, and there was a decision on the whole matter in issue between the parties. Mothooranath Tewaree v. *Brindabun Tewaree, 14 W. 10. ——— Appointment of new arbitrator, Power of—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 506, 508, 510, 521. On 19th June 1884, an application for an order of reference was made, under s. 506 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), by both parties to a suit. It was signed by both defendants and by the plaintiffs' pleader. As the plaintiffs' pleader had not been "specially authorized in writing" to join in the application, the Court postponed making any order on the application till the 23rd idem. On that day the first defendant did not attend the Court, but the plaintiffs' pleader produced the requisite authority, and the Court made an order referring the suit to the decision of the arbitrator nominated in the application of the 19th. On 27th June the first defendant made an application to the Court to revoke the authority of the arbitrator and appoint a new arbitrator in his place, on the ground that, after signing the application of the 19th, he had become aware of certain circumstances connected with the arbitrator which showed that he was not worthy of the confidence reposed in him. No final order was made upon this application till after the submission of the award, when it was rejected on the ground that the charges of misconduct and partiality imputed to the arbitrator were not made out. Held, first, that the first defendant not having objected to the appointment of the arbitrator on or before the 23rd June 1884, when the order of reference was made, must be taken to have tacitly acquiesced in the course adopted by the Court, and that such acquiescence amounted to a fresh submission. Ardesar Hormosji Wadia v. Secretary of State for India, 9 Bom. 177, and Sreenath Ghose v. Raj Chunder Paul, 8 W. R. 171, followed. The objections raised by the first defendant could only be considered after the submission of the award, and then only to the extent permitted by s. 521 of the Code of Civil Procedure (XIV of 1882). When once a matter is referred to arbitration, it is not competent to the Court, under the second paragraph of s. 508 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), to "deal with" the matter in difference between the parties, except as provided in Ch. XXXVII of the Code. There is no section of that Chapter which authorizes the Court to revoke the authority conferred on an arbitrator and to appoint a new one except in cases falling strictly within the purview of s. 510 of the Code, where "the scope and object of the reference cannot be executed." It is only in those cases, apparently, that the authority conferred on arbitrators can be revoked "for good cause," the cause being such as is contemplated in that section, as where "an arbitrator refuses, or neglects, or becomes incapable to act, or leaves British India under circumstances showing that he will probably not return to India at an early date." The enactment of the second paragraph of s. 508 of the Code of 1882, which does not occur in the corresponding section (315) of Act VIII of 1859, has the effect of rigidly restricting the Courts to the exact procedure laid down when dealing with cases in which the appointment of a new arbitrator becomes necessary. 13. ——— Revocation of agreement to have case decided on the evidence of third person—Oaths Act (X of 1873), ss. 8-12—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), Ch. XXXVII. The plaintiffs and some of the defendants in a suit agreed that the matters in difference between them in the suit should be decided in accordance with the statement made on oath by one J after he had made a local enquiry into such matters. The Court trying the suit accordingly directed that J should be examined on a certain day. Before J was examined, the defendants objected to the case being decided in accordance with J's evidence, but the Court disallowed the objection, and, having taken J's statement on oath, decided the case in accordance therewith. Held, by STUART, C.J., that the provisions of ss. 8 to 12 of Act X of 1873 were not applicable to the reference of the case to J; that such reference was in the nature of a reference to arbitration under the Code of Civil Procedure; that it would have been valid and binding on the parties had all the defendants joined in it; but that, as all the defendants did not do so, the proceedings were illegal, and they should be set aside and the suit be decided on the merits. Held, by OLDFIELD, J., that the reference of the case to J was not made under or governed by the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to arbitration, and therefore the defendants were competent to revoke the agreement; and that, assuming the reference was made under the provisions of the Oaths Act, there was no rule of law prohibiting the revocation of such a reference, and therefore the defendants were competent to revoke the same. The arbitrators had only one meeting, at which an agreement was come to by the parties to settle all matters in dispute among themselves and withdraw the matters from arbitration, which was accordingly done, but nothing appeared to have been afterwards done. No award was made by the original arbitrators within six months from the reference. sent in his opinion to the arbitrators, some days before the time fixed by the Court for the submission of the award ; but the arbitrators did not submit their award within time. Held, that the agreement of the parties to let the matters in dispute be settled actually by Saif Ali could not possibly have the effect of superseding the appointment of arbitrators by the Court. Before the Court could proceed to hear the suit, it was necessary that it should itself make, under either s. 510 or s. 514, an order superseding the reference to arbitration. Where an award, which was of the nature of a family settlement between a father, mother, and son of certain property which had been given by the father to the mother in lieu of dower and then by the mother to the son, directed that a certain annuity should be paid out of the property to the father and mother "ta haiyât walidain," it was held that the annuity was to be paid during the joint lives of the father and mother and also during the life of the survivor. Two widows of a deceased Hindu referred generally to arbitrators the question of their rights, respectively, in the estate of their deceased husband, including the matter whether there was, or was not, any cause disentitling the widow who afterwards brought this suit for her share in the estate against the other who had obtained possession of the whole. 8. ——— Consent to arbitration—Ambiguity in award. A dispute having arisen as to the boundary of two estates, the parties joined in a petition to the Settlement Officer of the district to appoint arbitrators for the purpose of settling the boundary. That officer appointed arbitrators who subsequently made the following award: "Having in the presence of the karpurdazes of both parties taken down the depositions of the witnesses of both parties on the disputed locality and made investigation and enquiry on the spot, and having observed the aspect of the place, we have ascertained as follows." They then proceeded to state the boundary. "Going along west from the high peak of Sathoo Pahar, which is on the south of Luphapara one comes to a gurh called Rajgurh; on the south of it is Doobhiadidi in Mahomedabad; on the north of that gurh is Kolarkoonda in Belputta; on the west of it is Perma hill; on the east, south, and west is Mahomedabad; on the north is Belputta." At the foot of the award were the words, "Decision of the arbitrators confirmed," dated and signed by the Deputy Collector. The parties to the award afterwards petitioned the Settlement Officer to lay pillars along the line settled by the arbitrators, but he refused the application, but made an order that, "if the petitioners construct the pillars themselves, there will be no likelihood of objection hereafter. It is not necessary for the Court to pass any order in this mater." Held, (1) that both parties had accepted the award; (2) that the award was not ambiguous; (3) that the effect of the award was not merely to determine possession at the time, but to determine the right to the land itself. 9. ——— Refusal to award interest to Mahomedan—Suit on mortgage. Plaintiff, who was a Mahomedan, sued upon a mortgage executed by the defendants, who were also Mahomedans, to secure certain sums advanced by him, with interest at 24 per cent. The defendants pleaded an award by which the arbitrator, to whom the question of the defendants' liability under the mortgage and certain cross-claims which the defendants urged against the plaintiff had been referred, had found that the plaintiff was entitled to a particular sum under the mortgage for principal, but that, as a Mahomedan, he was not entitled to any sum for interest. The plaintiff contended that the award was bad. Held, on appeal, that the plaintiff was not entitled, by reason of interest having been disallowed, to treat the award as a nullity, that the omission by the arbitrator to allow interest was a mistake which might be rectified by the Court, and that the award must be taken to be binding on the plaintiff. Held, further, that the plaintiff was entitled to proceed on the mortgage, and that the sum found due by the award having been a portion of the mortgage debt, the plaintiff was entitled to

10. ——— Maintenance, Grant of villages for—Nature of grant, whether absolute or resumable. A grant of villages was made by a talukhdar to his younger son for maintenance. The elder son inherited the family talukh. In the next generation, in 1869, an award was made by a body of Oudh talukhdars as arbitrators on the submission of the disputants, who directed that the village " given as maintenance be decreed in favour of the grantee to continue as heretofore." The questions raised in that award were whether the villages had been granted only for life or were inheritable by the descendants of the grantee, and whether the talukhdar, or the holder of the grant for the time being, was liable for the revenue on the villages. The same questions were now raised by the third generation, who were the great-grandsons of the grantor, on the construction of the award. There was no limitation in the original grant of the villages to the grantee personally, nor was the grant expressly declared to be to him and his lineal descendants through males. But possession had followed in that order, and the talukhdar had always paid the revenue. The award, not having been filed within six months after the passing of the Oudh Estates Act, 1869, did not come within s. 33 of that Act. Held, (i) that the award was not on that account invalid. It was obligatory upon both parties to the submission and upon those whose interests they represented. (ii) That evidence of the antecedent possession of the villages, as well as of the quasi-judicial acts of the arbitrators, was admissible. (iii) That the terms of the award conferred upon the grantee and his descendants the right to possess the villages free of rent to the talukhdar, who remained responsible for the revenue. (iv) That the villages would not revert to the talukhdar's line until the line of the grantee's descendants should have become extinct. BHAIYA ARDAWAN SINGH v. UDEY PRATAB SINGH . . I. L. The award was by an order of the 1st March 1902 of the High Court Q. B. D., England, directed to be enforced in the same manner as a judgment. Defendant left England and left the sum unpaid. Plaintiff instituted a suit on the Original Side of the High Court of Calcutta to recover the said sum, but at the time of the institution of the suit defendant neither dwelt nor carried on business nor personally worked for gain within the limits of its original jurisdiction. The plaintiff alleged that the allowance as fixed was payable in perpetuity, and was paid till 1864-65 when it was stopped, and prayed for a decree declaring him entitled to it and arrears for eleven years. Held, that effect could not be given to the award as a decree, as no Court would pass a decree fixing a grant of maintenance in perpetuity; that an allowance fixed by a decree as maintenance was ordinarily liable to be varied, on the party ordered to pay it showing circumstances rendering it equitable to make the variation; and that, there being no reason to suppose that the arbitrators had any idea of fixing the allowance for a longer period than the lifetime of the parties, and all those parties being dead, no effect could any longer be given to the award. certain sums by the defendant, and further directed that these sums should be paid by certain instalments. The plaintiff preferred objections to the award in so far as it directed payment by instalments, and the Court, holding that the arbitrators had no power to make such a direction, modified the award to that extent, under s. 518 of the Civil Procedure Code. On appeal, the District Judge, while allowing the power of the arbitrators to direct payment by instalments, reduced the number of instalments which had been fixed. Held, that, as it was clear that the reference to arbitration gave the arbitrators full powers, not only as to the amount to be paid, but also as to the manner of payment, the lower Appellate Court was wrong in reducing the number of instalments which had been fixed. Per MAHMOOD, J. The word "award" used in the last sentence of s. 522 of the Code must be understood to mean an award as given by the arbitrators, and not as amended by the Court under s. 518. 46. ——— Civil Procedure Code, s. 521, cl. (a)—"Misconduct" of arbitrator. The word "misconduct," as used in s. 521, cl. (a), of the Civil Procedure Code, should be interpreted in the sense in which it is used in English law with reference to arbitration proceedings. It does not necessarily imply moral turpitude, but it includes neglect of the duties and responsibilities of the arbitrators, and of what Courts of Justice expect from them before allowing finality to their awards. An arbitrator to whom the matters in difference in a suit were referred under s. 508 of the Civil Procedure Code, and who was directed by the order of reference to deliver his award by the 22nd September, applied on the 17th September for an extension of time on the ground that a very full investigation was necessary, which it was not possible to make within the prescribed period. On the 20th September, without waiting for the order of the Court, he notified to the parties that he proposed to hold an inquiry in the case on the 24th, and it appeared that he did not expect this intimation to reach them before the 21st or 22nd. On the 23rd he informed the plaintiff's pleader that a new date would be fixed for the inquiry, of which notice would be given to the parties. Notwithstanding this, on the 23rd the arbitrator took evidence for the defendant in the absence of the plaintiff and his pleader. All these proceedings were held before the arbitrator received an order of the Court extending the time for delivery of the award up to the 26th October. On the 27th September he directed the parties to be informed that the investigation would be held on the 5th October. On the 4th October the plaintiff presented a petition praying the arbitrator to summon witnesses and to take documentary evidence, and upon this nothing definite was settled at the time; but after the pleaders had left, the arbitrator passed an order rejecting the petition, on the ground that the evidence sought to be produced was unnecessary. On the same date and on the 5th and 6th October he took evidence for the defence in the absence of the plaintiff and his pleader. On the 10th he rejected a petition by the plaintiff praying for further time to produce evidence, and complaining of his having taken evidence in the plaintiff's absence and having received in evidence a fabricated document. On the 25th October the arbitrator delivered his award in favour of the defendant. Subsequently, upon objections made by the plaintiff, the Court set aside the award, and directed that the trial of the suit should proceed :—Held, that, although no case of "corruption" within the meaning of s. 521, cl. (a) of the Civil Procedure Code had been made out against the arbitrator, the circumstances above stated amounted to "misconduct" and the award was, therefore, bad in law, and had rightly been set aside. Soobal Thakur Opadeeah v. *Punchanund Tikka, S. has expired. The last paragraph of s. 521 does not imply that an omission by the Court to fix a positive date within which the award is to be filed is fatal to the validity of the award. Where an order extending the time for delivery of an award was made after the time fixed therefor had expired, and did not fix any positive date for the filing of the award :—Held, that the adoption of the award by the Court amounted to an enlargement of the time for delivery of the award to the date on which it was in fact delivered, and to a ratification of what had been done by the arbitrators, and that the parties, having made no objection to the action of the Court, must be taken to have waived any objection to the award. Pending that being done, the parties applied to the Appellate Court to refer the case to arbitration, and that Court referred that application to the original Court for disposal, although the case was still pending on its own file for disposal. joined in referring the suit to arbitration; the objection was dismissed, and judgment given in accordance with the award. Held, that, under the special circumstances of the case, justice was so clearly in favour of the view that the award was good, that the Court, although not entirely approving of certain decisions of the High Court (Shitanath Biswas v. *Kishen Mohun Mookerjee, 5 W. Arbitrators were accordingly appointed, and their award having been given in favour of A, judgment for the plaintiff was recorded in terms of that award. B then appealed on the ground that the other defendants had not joined in the agreement to submit the matter to arbitration, and the judgment was set aside, and the case remanded for re-trial. On remand the plaintiff's suit was dismissed, and the order of dismissal was upheld by the lower Appellate Court. Held, on further appeal by the High Court, that the fact of the tenants not having joined in the submission to arbitration did not vitiate the award, and that, as between A and B, the original decision of the Court of first instance in terms of that award must be restored. Three only of the arbitrators nominated were proceeding with the arbitration, and one had declined to act. The Court which made the reference released, in favour of the plaintiffs in the suit in which the reference was made, the attachments existing on debts due to the defendant in that suit, at the instance of the three arbitrators, who proposed to authorize the plaintiffs to collect those debts, and directed the debtors to pay their debts to the plaintiffs. It was held that, assuming that the reference permitted the arbitrators nominated to authorize either of the parties to collect the debts attached, inasmuch as the agreement was unaccompanied by any stipulation that a less number than the whole of the arbitrators could determine whether such permission should be given, the act of the three arbitrators which led to the issue of the order could not be supported, and that the last portion of that order was ultra vires, and must be declared void. Where certain matters were referred to arbitrators who refused to act, and the Court of first instance passed an order directing them to proceed and to make an award, and they, on the passing of such order, made an award :—Held, that all proceedings taken by the arbitrators in obedience to the order of the Court directing them to arbitrate against their will were null and void. The arbitrators being unable to agree upon the matters referred, the Court, on the application of one of them, appointed an umpire and directed that the award should be submitted on a particular date. An award was made by the umpire and one arbitrator, without the concurrence of the other arbitrator, and submitted to the Court, which passed a decree in accordance with its terms. Held, that, in the present case, there had been no legal award such as the law contemplated, inasmuch as the agreement to refer gave the Court no power to appoint an umpire, and required that the award should be made by the arbitrators named by the parties. Held, that s. 509 and the other sections preceding s. 523 of the Civil Procedure Code, relating to the power of the Court to provide for difference of opinion among the arbitrators, were only made applicable to cases coming under s. 523, so far as their provisions were consistent with the agreement filed under that section. were not objected to by the other side. Arbitrators were agreed upon, and R, one of the seven persons named in the submission, was appointed an umpire. After this reference, the parties agreed by an ikrarnama to submit the same suits, together with other matters, to the arbitration of five persons, the effect being to withdraw the first submission and substitute the new agreement. Before these arbitrators arrived at a final conclusion, the parties by a solenamah compromised the whole of the subjects of dispute, and afterwards an award was drawn up in the terms of the solenamah and signed by two of the arbitrators and the head arbitrator. When the award was brought before the Subordinate Judge, he considered it had been made ultra vires in respect of those matters which were not involved in the suits originally referred, and accordingly made a decree only in those suits corresponding with the terms of the award. Some of the defendants applied to the Subordinate Judge to have the effect of a decree given to that portion of the award which was left outstanding by the first decision. This application was decreed and the remainder of the award enforced. An appeal to the Judge was dismissed with costs. Held, that the award was illegal becuse it was not signed by all the arbitrators, and there had been no agreement to abide by the decision of the majority, or that the voice of the

During the investigation of these matters by the arbitrators the plaintiff offered to be bound by the oath of the defendant administered on the Koran. The defendant agreed to take such oath and such was accordingly administered to him by the arbitrators, and his evidence taken, and an award made based on the evidence so taken. On special appeal to the High Court by the plaintiff, he objected for the first time, the objection not having been taken in his memorandum of special appeal, that the arbitrators were not legally competent to administer such oath, and the evidence so taken could not form a valid basis of an award, ad the award was therefore void. Held, per PEARSON, J., (SPANKIE, J., dissenting), with reference to the legal competency of the arbitrators to administer the oath, that the objection was good, and that the arbitrators had no power to administer the oath. Per PEARSON, J., that the statement of the defendant made on an oath illegally administered could not form a valid basis of an award, and the award was void and should be set aside. Per SPANKIE, J., that the plaintiff having offered to be bound by the oath, and the defendant having agreed to take it, the plaintiff was bound by the evidence given on such oath; and that, as the arbitrators had by law and consent of parties authority to receive the evidence of the defendant, the substitution by them of an oath on the Koran for an affirmation did not, under the provisions of s. 13, Act X of 1873, invalidate such evidence, and consequently render the award based on such evidence void. The Subordinate Judge overruled the objection without taking any evidence and directed the award to be filed and a decree to be passed thereon. The plaintiff appealed. Held, on appeal that, as the objection was well-founded, inasmuch as the agreement to refer was vague and indefinite, and did not clearly lay down the power of the arbitrator in dealing with the subject-matter in dispute, and as it was not possible to make out what powers were intended to be conferred upon the arbitrator, the award should not be allowed to be enforced under the provisions of ss. 525 and 526. 97. ——————— Submission to arbitration—Award not disposing of all the matters referred—Finality of award—Validity of award—Waiver—Consent of parties—Partition. The ground for holding an award to be invalid on account of its not disposing of all the matter referred appears to be that there is an implied condition in the submission of the parties to the arbitration that the award shall dispose of all. This condition may be waived by the consent of the parties before the arbitrators. The partition of joint estate, consisting of different properties, having been submitted to arbitration, and the parties agreeing to a division being made by steps, and that each division should be final without any condition that the award should not be final while part remained undivided :—Held, in a suit brought by one of the parties for partition of the whole estate, after such a division of part, that, although cases cited as to the invalidity of an incomplete award might have been applicable had the arbitrators awarded as to only part of the property of their own authority, and without that of the parties, it was competent to the latter to agree before the arbitrators to the division being made as it had been; and that here the partition, as to the property divided, was final. 102. Discretion of Court—Ground for setting aside an award—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), Ch. V, s. 39—Exercise of Court's discretion—Conduct of plaintiffs—Reasonable apprehension of injury—Coercion. The plaintiffs and defendants, together with one Jaffer Gargji, who died before the date of this suit, entered into a partnership in February 1895, to do certain work for the Maharaja Holkar at Indore. The work was done and paid for, whereupon disputes arose among the partners as to the allocation of the payments. Criminal proceedings were instituted at Indore, by the first and the third defendants and the fourth plaintiff Cooverji, against the first and second plaintiffs, who were arrested under warrants on the 20th June 1895. They were subsequently released on bail; and, while the proceedings against them were still pending, the matters in dispute between the plaintiffs and the defendants were referred to arbitration on the 9th September 1895, and an award made on the 17th September 1895. The submission paper and the award were signed by all the parties except the fourth plaintiff Cooverji. The criminal proceedings at Indore were then withdrawn. On the 21st June 1898, the first and second defendants filed a suit against the first three plaintiffs, in the Court at Indore, to recover from them the amount due under the award, but on the 7th July following, the plaintiffs (four in number) filed this suit to have the award declared null and void, and for an injunction against the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 restraining them from proceeding with their suit at Indore. The lower Court held that the allegations of collusion and fraud made by the plaintiffs were false, but held that the award was not binding on any of the parties, inasmuch as the fourth plaintiff (Cooverji) had not signed the submission paper. the allegations of collusion and fraud, but without expressing any opinion on the question whether the award was rendered invalid by reason of the fact that the fourth plaintiff (Cooverji) had not signed the submission paper, their Lordships reversed the decree and dismissed the suit on the ground that no case had been made out by the plaintiffs for the special intervention of the Court under Ch. V of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877). The plaintiffs had not shown that they had reasonable apprehension that the award, if left outstanding, would cause them serious injury, nor had their conduct been such as to call for an exercise of the Court's discretion under s. 30 of the Act in their favour. Per JENKINS, C. J. In a suit of this nature, three points must be made good by the plaintiffs : (1) that the award is void or voidable ; (2) that the plaintiffs have a reasonable apprehension that such instrument, if left outstanding, may cause them serious injury ; (3) that the Court ought, under the circumstances of the case, in the exercise of its discretion, to adjudge the award void or voidable and order it to be delivered up and cancelled. Antram v. Chace, 15, East 209, discussed and distinguished. II, Art. 158—Arbitrators, misconduct of—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 521.* An application to set aside an award, on the ground that three out of five arbitrators were not present at the time the award was made and did not sign the award, although it purported to have been signed by all of them, is governed by Art. 158 of Sch. II to the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). There was misconduct on the part of the arbitrators within the meaning of s. 521 of the Civil Procedure Code. Muhammad Abid v. *Muhammad Asghar, I. L. If the arbitrator is indebted to one of the parties at the time of the reference, or becomes so indebted after the reference, and in either case does not disclose the fact to the other party, such party would be entitled to revoke the reference upon discovery of the fact, and any award made by such arbitrator would be invalid on the ground of judicial misconduct.

Misconduct, in s. 521 of the Code, does not of necessity imply corruption. The High Court cannot interfere under s. 622 of the Code, unless it is satisfied that the lower Court has acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally. Amir Hassan Khan v. *Sheo Baksh Singh, I. 106.—Reference to District Munsif—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 521—Petition by both parties requesting the District Munsif to examine site and peruse documents, and agreeing to abide by his decision—Appeal. In the course of a suit, in which plaintiff claimed an order directing defendant to close a doorway, and an injunction, plaintiff and defendant jointly presented a petition requesting the District Munsif to inspect the site and peruse the documents filed in the suit, and agreeing to abide by the decision which the Court might be pleased to pass, as the final decision. The District Munsif passed an order in terms of the petition and inspected the site and considered the documents, and ultimately passed a decree in plaintiff's favour. Against that decree, defendant appealed. Held, that the District Munsif had acted as an arbitrator by consent of the parties, and no appeal lay from his decision, which must be looked upon as an award. And, as no reasons had been shown for setting aside the award under s. 521 of the Code, the decree must be taken to have been passed in accordance with the award, and, as such, upheld. 110. ———— Award, validity of—Decree in accordance with award—Irregularity—Appeal—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 522—Practice. Two out of three arbitrators agreed in making an award, but the third did not agree, and the award was filed in the Court of first instance without the signature of the dissentient arbitrator, who however subsequently came into Court and signed it. The Court thereupon made a decree in accordance with the award. On appeal to the Subordinate Judge, however, this decree was set aside on the ground that such an award was invalid and illegal. On second appeal to the High Court: Held, that after the award had been filed in Court it was not open to the dissentient arbitrator to come in and sign the award, nor had the Court any power to allow him to sign it ; and that in this view of the matter, the award was invalid and illegal. An appeal under s. 522 of the Civil Procedure Code against a decree made in accordance with an award depends upon the validity or otherwise of the aw ard itself that section presupposes a valid and legal award and not an award upon which no decree could be pronounced. Raja Har Narain Singh v. *Chaudhrain Bhagwant Kuar, I. Objections were filed by one of the defendants to the suit but these objections were, after hearing, disallowed by the Court which proceeded to pass a decree in accordance with the award. Held, that an appeal would lie from such a decree upon the ground that the so-called award was never delivered by the arbitrator and was in fact and in law no award at all. (e) DELAY IN MAKING AWARD.

113.—Oral award—Arbitrators, liability of, for delay in making award—Negligence—Fraud. In 1889 defendant 5 executed a bond to the plaintiff, on which the latter brought a suit in 1893. This suit was referred to arbitration, and defendants 1, 2 and 3 and the husband of defendant 4 were appointed arbitrators. The plaintiff brought the present suit against the arbitrators and defendant 5, to recover damages, alleging that only an oral award had been given and that in collusion with defendant 5 the arbitrators had failed to give a written award, and that, not having obtained a written award, he had suffered loss by reason of the bonds having "gone out of time" (become barred by limitation). The lower Court held that inasmuch as the arbitrators had not shown that their delay in giving an award was caused by the negligence to the parties, the presumption was that they acted fraudulently in not doing their duty. It therefore awarded the plaintiff R1,000 damages against defendants 1 to 4. On appeal: Held, (i) (reversing the decree and dismissing the suit) that, if (as stated in the plaint) an oral award had been made, there was no cause of action, as there was no stipulation that the award should be in writing; (ii) that the fraud alleged, viz., of collusion with the fifth defendant, was negatived by the evidence, which showed that the arbitrators were not unanimous; (iii) that the fact that the arbitrators had failed to account for the delay in making the award did not justify the presumption of fraud. There was no more reason to presume fraud than to presume negligence; and, if there was only negligence, no suit would lie. SAVLAPPA v. DEBCHAND VALCHAND (1901)

7. ——— ——— Award signed only by some of the arbitrators. Matters in dispute between the parties were referred to seven arbitrators without the intervention of a Court. The arbitrators or so many of them as could be got togther, held sittings extending over some months, and at each sitting they came to a decision, either unanimously or by a majority, on different questions submitted to them. These decisions were entered on the minutes of their proceedings, and at their last sitting the arbitrators all agreed, and informed the parties that the decisions so arrived at constituted the final award and gave directions for embodying those decisions in the shape of a formal document, which was drawn up on a subsequent day, but was signed by four only out of the seven arbitrators. The remaining arbitrators not being asked to sign it, they never did sign it. Held, that the actual award was an oral award made by all the arbitrators on the last day of their joint sitting, and the drawing up of the formal award was a purely ministerial act to give effect to the previously completed judicial act. The omission to take the signatures of the minority of the arbitrators to the document which formed the record of the award was not fatal to the award. DANDEKAR v. DANDEKARS I. L. 520, 521, 525, and 526—Procedure where identity of award impeached—Power of Court to enquire into objection to file award—Jurisdiction. Where an application was made to a Subordinate Judge to file an award, and an objection was taken that the arbitrators had made their award several months before the date of the one sought to be filed, thus impeaching the identity of the award, and the Subordinate Judge, after an enquiry with regard to the several objections, ordered the award to be filed:—Held, that the order of the Subordinate Judge should be set aside or the award be deemed not to have been filed. The only objections which the Court can enquire into under ss. 525 and 526 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) are those which are specified in ss. 520 and 521, and these relate to cases in which the reference and the award are accepted facts; but where the objection denies the factum of the particular awards ought to be filed, and the objection does not seem to be frivolous, but one giving rise to enquiry into difficult questions of law and fact, it is not competent for the Court to deal with that objection under ss. 525 and 526. In such a case the Court should leave the applicant to a regular suit on the award as the basis of his cause of action, wherein the party urging the objection will have the advantage of being a defendant rather than a plaintiff, and of having an appeal open to him in the event of an unfavourable decision. 18. ——————— Objections to filing award—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 520, 524, 525—Rejection of application to file award—Consent of parties to jurisdiction. A dispute between the plaintiffs and defendant having been referred to arbitration and an award made, the plaintiffs applied under s. 525 of the Civil Procedure Code that the award should be filed in the Munsif's Court. It having been objected that the arbitrators had been guilty of impartiality and other misconduct, an issue was framed with the consent of both parties "whether the award could be filed and enforced" and the Munsif, after hearing evidence, dismissed the application. On appeal the Subordinate Judge decided that the award was valid. On second appeal:—Held, that, although where an application to file an award under s. 525 and objection is made upon any of the grounds mentioned in s. 520 or 521, the proper course for the Court is to dismiss the application, and leave the applicant to bring a regular suit to enforce the award; yet both parties having consented to the matter being tried upon the application as it in a regular suit, it could not, on second appeal, be objected that the lower Courts had acted without jurisdiction. 20. ——————— Civil Procedure Code, ss. 525, 526—Partnership—Agreement to refer disputes to arbitration. The three parties to a deed of partnership agreed that in case of any dispute or difference the matter should be referred to the arbitration of persons chosen by each party to such dispute, and that in case any such party should refuse or fail to nominate an arbitrator, then the arbitrator named by the other party should nominate another arbitrator, and the two should nominate a third person as umpire. Certain differences having arisen among the three partners, two of them called upon the executors of the third to nominate an arbitrator under the terms of the deed, but they refused to do so. The first-mentioned partners then nominated an arbitrator, who in his turn nominated another, and, these having appointed an umpire, made an award. One of the partners at whose instance the matter in dispute had been referred to arbitration presented an application under s. 525 of the Civil Procedure Code, praying that the award might be filed in Court. This application was opposed by the executors of the third partner, who appeared and lodged verified petitions disclosing grounds of objection within the meaning of s. 520 or s. 521 of the Code. Held, that the word "parties," as used in s. 525, should not be confined to persons who are actually before the arbitrators; that if persons by an agreement have undertaken between themselves that, in the event of a certain state of things happening, a particular procedure shall be followed, which under one state of circumstances, may be adopted in invitum, they should, for the purposes of s. 525, be regarded as parties to that arbitration; and that there was sufficient reason to show that the defendants in the present case were primâ facie bound by the arbitration, so as to bring them within the terms of s. 525 as parties thereto, who should be called on to show cause why the award should not be filed. Willcox v. Storkey, L. R. 1 C. P. 671, and Re Newton and Hetherington, 19 C. B. N. S. 342, referred to. Held, also, that ss. 525 and 526 of the Code, read together, mean that the party coming forward to oppose the filing of the award must show cause, that is, must establish by argument, or proof, or both, reasonable grounds to warrant the Court in arriving at the conclusion that the award is open to any of the objections mentioned in s. 520 or s. 521, and it is not sufficient when it is sought to make the award a rule of Court for the defeated party to come and merely say upon a verified petition that this or that ground referred to in ss. 520 and 521 existed against the filing. Sree Ram Chowdhry v. *Denobundhoo Chowdhry, I. It appeared that the defendant in the proceedings before the arbitrators, notwithstanding the knowledge that this document was withheld, submitted nevertheless to take his chances of the arbitration ; suggesting in fact favourable presumptions to himself in construing the will produced, or that the whole

Disputes which arose between them were referred to arbitrators, who made an award. An application by the plaintiff to have the award made a rule of Court was opposed by defendant No. 1, and the plaintiff was referred to a regular suit. He now brought his suit in the alternative on the award and on the promissory notes. The award was found to be unenforceable. The plaintiff then declared himself satisfied to withdraw his suit as far as the award was concerned, and the Court passed a decree for plaintiff on the merits. Defendant No. 3 alone having appealed, the Court of first appeal held that the plaintiff must succeed or fail on the award, and that the withdrawal of the prayer for a decree on the award altered the nature of the suit; and finding that there was no evidence of misconduct on the part of the arbitrators, he passed a decree in the terms of the award. Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s. 14—Bengal Chamber of Commerce, arbitration by the—Rules of the—Indian Stamp Act (II of 1899), ss. 5, 6 and 35, Sch. I, Arts. 5 and 43—"Submission" required to be proved and stamped—Award made out of time—Enlargement of time after expiry of original time—Concealment of names and appointment of arbitrators—Notification of time and place of hearing—Evidence, refusal to hear, when misconduct—Award against a firm—Jurisdiction of Court to set aside award, if may be ousted. Contract-notes which contain a provision for the submission of disputes to arbitration ought each to bear eight-annas stamp under Art. 5, Sch. I of the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, as an agreement not otherwise provided for in the Schedule. Although the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899, has made the procedure for the enforcement of an award simpler than the old practice of instituting suit for the purpose, it is still necessary to prove that the arbitrators acted under a valid submission before an award can be made a decree of Court under the Act. Ferrer v. Oven, 7 B. & C. 427, referred to. The Rules for the guidance of the arbitration "tribunal" of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce were construed to contemplate the parties being notified of the names and the fact of the appointment of the arbitrators. Where the arbitrators appointed by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce under its Rules did not appoint a time and place for the hearing of the reference: Held, that the arbitrators failed in their duty in not doing so. Whether the arbitrators should or should not hear evidence and the parties by counsel or otherwise must depend on the particular circumstances of every case, the arbitrators exercising, in a judicial manner, their discretion in the matter. The refusal to hear evidence in a case where the arbitrators cannot decide a matter in dispute without hearing evidence would amount to a misconduct on the part of the arbitrators. It is improper for the arbitrators not to hear evidence to ascertain as to who are the persons liable on a contract entered into in the name of a firm. An award made against a firm, without ascertaining as to who are the persons who constitute it, is, on the face of it, bad and no Court can make a decree, in such circumstances, upon the award against a firm. It is not competent for the parties by an agreement to oust the jurisdiction of the Court vested in it by s. 14 of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899, to set aside an award, if misconduct on the part of the arbitrators were shown or if it were shown that the award was improperly procured, when the parties desire that the award should be enforced under the provisions of the Act. 1.—Jurisdiction of High Court to stay proceedings in the Small Cause Court—Step in the proceedings. N agreed to purchase from R 150 tons of sugar imported by R. A clause in the agreement provided for arbitration in the event of disputes arising in connection with the agreement. A dispute arose with regard to the condition of some of the bags of sugar, and N claimed damages from R which R refused to pay. N filed a suit in the Small Cause Court. The Judge before whom the suit was instituted on the petition of R stayed the proceedings. On appeal to the full Court the order staying the proceedings was set aside. R by a petition to the High Court prayed that the proceedings in the Small Couse Court should be stayed. Held, that under s. 19 of the Arbitration Act, the High Court has the power to stay proceedings in the Small Cause Court and the proceedings should under the circumstances be stayed. Per CURIAM:—The language of s. 19 of the Act is quite clear and it gives jurisdiction to the High Court to stay proceedings in any Court in the Presidency town subordinate to its jurisdiction. The section in the beginning refers to a party to a submission commencing any legal proceedings; then it goes on to refer to such legal proceedings, and then provides for staying the proceedings. Nowhere is there any indication in the section or the Act that the legal proceedings contemplated must be proceedings in that Court. Any proceedings taken by a party to a suit to stay legal proceedings under s. 19 of the Arbitration Act are not "steps in the proceedings." RALLI v. NOOR MAHOMED (1906)

No opportunity was afforded him of producing the license, but he was charged with an offence under s. 19 of Act XI of 1878, and on these materials convicted and fined. Held, that the conviction was wrong. The law does not require a licensee always to have his license with him. If under such circumstances, on being required to produce it, he is prepared to do so on a reasonable opportunity being given him to get it, and it exists, he should not be prosecuted; if prosecuted, the production of the license at the trial is a sufficient answer to the charge of infringing the Arms Act. Held, further, that a license granted to a person to carry arms and including a retainer authorizes any retainer to carry the arms specified with the permission of his master, and does not restrict him merely to carry them while in the actual presence of his master. He was suspected of being in possession of arms after the cancellation of his license. On the 23rd of April 1899, the Assistant Magistrate of Purneah, with a numbers of police, went to the house of the accused to search for arms. They surrounded it, arrested the accused, and then searched his house. The police had no search-warrants, nor was there anything to show upon what charge the accused was arrested. Two gun stocks, some ammunition, and implements for reloading were discovered in the house. There was nothing to show that the sanction required by s. 29 of the Arms Act was given before proceedings were instituted against the accused. Accused was convicted and sentenced under ss. 19 and 20 of the Arms Act. Held, that the conviction under s. 20 was not sustainable, but that the accused must be taken to have had arms and ammunition as defined by the Arms Act within the meaning of sub-s. (f) of s. 19 of that Act, and the conviction under that section must be confirmed. Held, further, that with respect to the question of whether or not any previous sanction had been given under s. 29 of the Arms Act, the Court was not unmindful of the suggestion that the charge in this case was, in the first instance, in respect of an alleged offence under s. 20 and not of one under s. 19 ; but that ss. 19 and 20 were so interwoven that it was difficult to see how an offence could be committed under the first paragraph of s. 20 unless an offence under one of the enumerated sub-sections in s. 19 had also been committed. It was not suggested that the charge here was an offence under the second paragraph of s. 20. AHMED HOSSEIN v. QUEEN-EMPRESS . . I. L. R. 27 Calc. 692 4 C. W. N. 750

IV—"Offences against other laws."* A collection of fire-arms, consisting of four small cannons, four pistols, and thirty-one muskets, had been kept as objects of worship in a Sikh temple in Patna for upwards of two centuries. The Mohunt of the temple neglected to take out a license in respect of these arms under Act XI of 1878. A Police Inspector, who was appointed to see that the provisions of the latter Act were obeyed, searched the temple on information received, and, having found the arms, prosecuted the persons who had charge of the temple. The latter was convicted by the Deputy Magistrate of Patna under s. 19, cl. (f), of Act XI of 1878, and sentenced to pay a fine of R50, or to be rigorously imprisoned for two months. The Deputy Magistrate also ordered the arms to be confiscated, and directed that their value and the fine should be divided between the informer and the Police Inspector. On a reference from the Sessions Judge of Patna:—Held, with reference to Act X of 1872, s. 579, and the last heading to Sch. IV of the same Act, and to s. 19, cl. (f), of Act XI of 1878, that the proceedings of the Police Inspector and the conviction of the accused were not illegal. There is nothing in the Arms Act to exempt the custodians of a temple from complying with the requirements of the Arms Act, either by taking out a license or obtaining exemption under s. 27. S. 25 of the Arms Act appears to refer to cases in which the Magistrate considers that arms, whether under a license or not, are possessed for an illegal purpose, or under circumstances such as to endanger the public peace. S. 30 of the Arms Act appears to contemplate the presence of some specially empowered officer besides the officer conducting the search. EMPRESS v. TEGHA SINGH . . . . I. L. R. 8 Calc. 473

1. CIVIL ARREST.

1. ——————Arrest pending enquiry into insolvency—Application of judgment-debtor to be declared insolvent—Subsequent proceedings in execution against him—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 245B, 336, 337A, 344, and 349. G obtained a money-decree against M, and in execution applied for his arrest and imprisonment. Before the warrant of arrest was issued, but after M had appeared in Court in obedience to a notice under s. 245B of the Civil Procedure Code, another judgment-creditor applied for execution of another decree against him. Thereupon M applied, under s. 344 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), to be declared an insolvent, and in his application mentioned G as one of his creditors (s. 345). The Subordinate Judge referred to the High Court the question whether, pending the inquiry into M's insolvency, he could be arrested in execution of G's decree against him.

ARREST—contd.

Held, that there was no provision in the Code to prevent the Court from issuing a warrant of arrest against him. Where, however, such a judgment-debtor is brought before the Court under a warrant of arrest, or comes before it upon notice under s. 245B, the Court has a discretionary power not to put the warrant in force under s. 349 or not to issue it under s. 336 (where the requisite notification has been published by the Local Government) if the applicant furnishes security for his appearance when called upon. In such cases the Court can also act under s. 337A of the Civil Procedure Code. GANPAT BHAGVAT v. MAHADEV HARI

2. ——— Arrest of a lunatic in execution of a decree—Discretion of Court to order the arrest—Ground for disallowing application for arrest of judgment-debtor—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 337A. Under the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), a Court is not bound to order the arrest of a lunatic in execution of a decree passed against him. The power to order his arrest is discretionary. The lunacy of a judgment-debtor is good cause within the meaning of s. 337A of the Code for disallowing an application for his arrest. 3. ——— Arrest of debtor in execution of money decree—Civil Procedure Code. 1882, ss. 245B, 337A, 339—Subsistence allowance. A decree by consent was made on 6th May 1896, ordering the defendant within one year to pay to the plaintiff R4,842 with interest and costs. On 14th May 1898 a notice was issued to the judgment-debtor to show cause why this decree should not be executed by his arrest and imprisonment: he pleaded poverty and "other sufficient cause," and the matter was set down for inquiry under s. 337A. When it came on, the Court, after hearing the evidence of the judgment-debtor, held that no cause had been shown why he should not be arrested, and that it was bound to order his arrest at once under that section, and subsistence allowance was ordered under s. 339. 4. ——— Suit for damages for arrest in execution of decree—Malice—Reasonable and probable cause, want of. A suit to recover damages on account of injuries caused by an arrest in accordance with a decree of a competent Court can only be maintained under special circumstances,—viz., the plaintiff must show (i) that the original action, out of which the alleged injury arose, was decided in his favour; (ii) that the arrest was procured without reasonable and probable cause; (iii) that the injury sustained was something other than an injury which has been or might have been compensated for by an award of the costs of the suit,—e.g., that he has suffered "some collateral wrong." 8. ——— Party to suit—Summary Procedure—Arrest under writ of Small Cause Court—Act X of 1877, s. 642. The general rule that a party to a suit is protected from arrest upon any civil process, while going to the place of trial, while attending there for the purpose of the cause, and while returning home, applies to a defendant to a suit under the summary procedure sections of the Civil Procedure Code, who has not obtained leave to appear and defend, and who, therefore, cannot be heard at the trial. Questions as to the privilege of exemption from arrest, in the case of persons arrested under writs issued from the Small Cause Courts in Calcutta, must be governed by the English law, and not by s. 642 of the Civil Procedure Code. It is not a deviation sufficient to forfeit privilege if the shortest road home is deviated from and a less crowded and more convenient road adopted. In the matter of SURENDRO NATH ROY CHOWDHRY . . I. of warrant by another police officer to process-serving peons—Legality of such endorsement—Peons not police officers—Arrest by peons—Rescue of persons arrested—Whether lawful arrest—Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898), ss. 68 and 79. A warrant of arrest was endorsed over to a Court sub-inspector for execution. The peons arrested a number of men under the warrant, some of whom were forcibly rescued by the accused and other persons. The accused were convicted under various sections of the Penal Code of rescuing the persons arrested and obstructing the execution of the warrant of arrest. Held, that the endorsement of the warrant by the Court head-constable to the peons did not make them competent to execute the warrant, that even if the peons had been legally appointed, they could not have made the arrest, inasmuch as they were not police officers within the terms of s. 79 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. ——— ss. 2, prov. (b), 12, and ss. 39, 151 and 154—Settlement-holder, his rights under a settlement—Nisf-kherajdar, his rights to a settlement. The effect of ss. 39 and 151 of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation, 1886, is that a settlement made by a Settlement Officer, unless interfered with by the Chief Commissioner, is final; but the settlement-holder does not thereby acquire any right to the land so settled as against any person claiming rights to it. The effect of an order by the Government of India before the passing of the Assam Regulation in regard to the right of a nisf-kherajdar to hold lands found upon survey to be in excess of his nisf-kheraj estate, and to obtain a settlement thereof, considered. In 1881 S, a nisf-kherajdar, obtained a settlement for a year of certain lands which were found upon survey to be in excess of his nisf-kheraj estate. Subsequently a pottah was granted to S for a portion of the excess lands, while the other portion was settled by the revenue authorities under a kobala pottah with M, who entered into possession under his settlement. The object of s. 37, Act XI of 1859, is the same as that of s. 71, Regulation I of 1886. Those sections cannot be said to have different meanings, for, if it were to be held that the incumbrance which could be set aside under s. 71 of the Regulation I of 1886 must be an incumbrance actively created by the previous holder, it would amount to this, that any acquiescence or laches, either wilful or arising from pure negligence on the part of the holder, by which the talukh or estate becomes incapable in the hands of the purchaser of yielding the Government revenue, would be outside the scope of this section. The Sessions Judge should also conform strictly to the words of s. 309, and require each assessor to state his opinion orally. The Sessions Judge should not utilize the services of the pleader for the prosecution for the purpose of recording his summing up to the assessors. 15. ——— Trial with the aid of assessors—Commencement of the trial—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), ss. 268, 272, 284, 285. The accused was committed for trial to the Sessions Court on a charge of murder. He pleaded not guilty to the charge, and claimed to be tried. Thereupon the Sessions Judge chose two assessors; but as one of them was ill, his attendance was at once dispensed with, and the Sessions Judge proceeded with the trial with the aid of the other assessor only. Held, that this procedure was illegal and contrary to ss. 284 and 285 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882). The attendance of one of the assessors having been dispensed with before the commencement of the trial, the Sessions Judge ought to have chosen another assessor in his place. A trial in the Sessions Court, "with the aid of assessors," does not begin with the reading of the charge, as the assessors are chosen under s. 272 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882), only if the accused does not plead to the charge or claims to be tried. The trial proceeded with two assessors present; but after the Public Prosecutor had closed his case, it was discovered that one of the remaining assessors was so deaf as to be incapable of understanding the proceedings. Under these circumstances, it was held that the trial having been held with practically only one assessor, the proceedings ought to be set aside and a new trial ordered. During that period one of the assessors was permitted to absent himself during two whole days and five half days, respectively; at first, so that he might visit his mother on her death-bed, and subsequently, to perform the daily obsequies rendered necessary by her decease. He then resumed his seat as an assessor, and continued so to act until the termination of the trial, all the depositions recorded in his absence having been read by him on his return. At the conclusion of the trial the Sessions Judge invited the opinion of each assessor, and recorded it. The opinion of each was that all the accused were guilty; and the Judge, concurring in that opinion, convicted the accused. The prisoners appealed to the High Court, where it was contended that the Judge had acted contrary to law in allowing the assessor who had been absent to resume his seat as an assessor, and in inviting and taking into consideration his opinion in deciding the case; and that the conviction ought to be quashed. Held (DAVIES, J., dissenting), that the finding and sentence appealed against had been passed by a

2. ———— Assignability of executory contract—Actionable claim—Fraudulent assignment—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 3 and 6, cl. (h)—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23. The rule in this country as to the assignability of an executory contract for the purchase and sale of goods is that the benefit of such a contract can be assigned; understanding by benefit the beneficial interest under the contract and the right to enforce it. This rule is subject to certain qualifications, viz., (1) that the benefit is not coupled with a liability and (2) that the nature of the contract has not been affected by personal considerations. Such a contract falls within the rule which is in existence and in force in this country as to assignment of contracts. Such a contract, though perhaps contingent in character, comes within the definition of actionable claim in the Transfer of Property Act, s. 3. An assignment made under such circumstances as to amount to a fraud of the Bankruptcy Law, falls clearly within s. 6, cl. (h) of the Transfer of Property Act and is void. The word "object" in s. 23 of the Contract Act is not used in the same sense as consideration. It means purpose or design. JAFFER MEHER ALI v. BUDGE BUDGE JUTE MILLS CO., LD. (1906) 10 C. W. (g)—Payments due under the Oudh loans of 1838 and 1842—Exemption from liability to attachment for debt.* Although it is probable that the enactments of s. 266, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, were not meant to cover pensions payable by a foreign State when remitted for payment to their pensioners in India, they certainly include all pensions of a political nature payable directly by the Government of India. A pension guaranteed payable by the latter by a treaty obligation contracted with another sovereign power is in the strictest sense a political pension. An allowance, payable by the Government of India under an arrangement made between the King of Oudh and the Governor General in 1842 for the benefit of members of the King's family and household, and their respective heirs in perpetuity and payable to one of such heirs, who has inherited it, as his share in the interest in the Oudh loan of 1842, is a political pension within the meaning of s. 266, sub-s. (g), Civil Procedure Code, 1882. The arrangement of 1842 cannot be treated as merely a provision out of the King's private estate for the maintenance of members of his family, there having been in a State like that of Oudh no distinction between State property and private property vested in the sovereign.
